THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

While admitting that the proposed ceiling price for wheat of 82½ cents will not bring sufficient income to wheat producers, the Government seems reluctant to increase the ceiling price, because to do so would increase the price of flour and bread, and so would increase the cost of living of industrial labor and others, which in turn would promote demands for still higher wages.

With this in view the Searle Grain Company recently suggested that the ceiling price of 82½ cents might be maintained for the sale of wheat to millers, but that the Government, through its Price Stabilization Corporation might pay farmers a price of $1.20 for 1 Northern at Fort William which would equal the 1913-1914 "parity" price.

An objection to this has been raised. It is felt by some that if farmers receive $1.20 for their wheat, that such a price would induce them to curtail the production of coarse grains and livestock, and to increase the production of wheat. This objection, I feel, is not valid, for the Government controls, by quotas, the amount of wheat that farmers can sell. A price of $1.20, then, in itself, should have no effect either in increasing wheat production or in curtailing the production of coarse grains and livestock.

WARTIME TOURIST TRAFFIC TO EXPAND

Tourist traffic from the U.S. into Canada's national parks, the finest of which are located in Alberta, may be substantially increased during the new year, according to officials of the Alberta Motor Association.

Instead of U.S. entry into the war curtailing tourist travel, the opposite may be the case. Tour officials south of the border have expressed the belief that there will be a greater need for recreational diversions, particularly for those engaged in a stepped-up war production program.

In consequence, U.S. people will be more inclined to travel. Many will take the inland instead of the coast routes, in view of war conditions, which should result in a larger flow of traffic over the highways leading to Alberta.

The prospect of a larger volume of U.S. holiday traffic northward reveals the need of better highways in Alberta to take care of this movement.

From Jan. 1 to Sept. 1, last, 24,609 U.S. cars entered Alberta through several customs ports, an increase of 2,190 over the similar period of 1940.

In 1942, U.S. travel is bound to be largely increased. That makes it essential that the province prepare to spend increased millions of dollars, which now are extracted from the motorists and put into the general revenue fund, instead of building up finer highways for Alberta.

UNUSUAL BANKING IN THESE UNUSUAL TIMES

As Canada's war efforts gain length of stride and speed of step, business in general reflects added activity and increases in volume. As business increases, banking activity also increases. Our service keeps pace with the requirements of our customers, albeit occasionally they may experience slight delays, owing to war-time depletion of our staff. (More than six hundred members of our staff are already in the Empire's forces.)

By experience, increased effort and up-to-date equipment, we endeavour to compensate for reduced numbers, to avoid delays and inconvenience to our customers, and to conduct all banking transactions, however unusual, with everyday efficiency.

Canadian Tanks From C.P.R. Shops

The craftsmen of the Canadian Pacific Railway Angus Shops at Montreal are proud of the powerful tanks they are building for the Canadian, British and Allied Armies. These mighty weapons stream off the assembly lines as the day and night shifts labor to produce more and more of these "Valentines for Victory." The illustration shows a number of the tanks in mass formation just before they rolled aboard Canadian Pacific flat-cars for shipment to the fighting fronts.

CANADIAN WOMEN'S ARMY CORPS
"The Women's Smartest Service"

All this show of efficiency—and there, on the top of the stenographer's desk, a bottle of scarlet nail polish!

The reporter, who until then had been quite overwhelmed by the precision of the women soldier-secretaries she had seen in action at Mewata barracks, and at Currie, smiled indulgently at this little hangover from civilian life. This was familiar ground — this was a reminder that the women soldiers were still women first and soldiers second.

However the uniformed young lady sitting at the desk suddenly picked up the bottle of red fluid, and the reporter read, not "Purple Pirate" or "Rascal red", or some other fantastic name, but "Correcting Fluid." The typist was using it in her work of getting out daily routine orders.

Whatever the reporter thought about the girls, their "boss", Sergt. Major W. J. Bagnall, who is in charge of the Centre Orderly room at Currie Barracks thinks "They're doing a wonderful job. They caught onto a new routine, a tough program, very quickly, and they're not afraid of hard work.

Some of them, he said, have even been working every night in their own time, to catch up "from reveille to reveil'e", as one girl put it smilingly.

Mr. Bagnall was thrilled at the girls' advent into the administrative department at Currie. "There was such a shortage of stenographers, and this certainly helps to relieve the burden". Besides the six girls in the central orderly room there is one in the quartermaster stores, one in the men's canteen, and two in the pay office.

Others are taking the army service corps course in motor transport, and others comprise the personnel of the hospital staff. There are 34 of them altogether, all busy, all earning not only their 90 cents a day but the respect of all the men who work beside them.

Colonel E. R. Knight, V.D., the officer commanding the Canadian Infantry (Rifle) Training Centre at Currie, is "very pleased" with them all. "They're really exceptionally good, you know", he commented, "exceptionally good."

One might say of the women's army, "Never have so many worked so hard for so little, and enjoyed it so much."

At least, just a recital of the day-by-day activities of the women soldiers is completely exhaustive.

Nicholas Alexander, the sergeant-major in charge of their training at Mewata, told the reporter about it, with a sort of grim satisfaction, she thought. For instance, the girls rise at 6:30 a.m., and have breakfast, after which they clean their huts "THOROUGHLY"! the sergeant-major says with dark meaning.

The first parade is at 8:30, and after that they go on a route march for three quarters of an hour. The reporter asked how far they would go on a route march, and received the answer, "Well, they go 120 paces a minute, that is, 100 yards a minute for 45 minutes . . . figure it out for yourself!"

Following the route march, the girls have three lectures of three quarters of an hour each, with 15 minute breaks in between. In these they learn about such things as discipline, and "interior economy", which isn't nearly as exciting as it sounds, meaning merely administration within the unit.

They have lunch at 12:30 and the parade falls in at the armories at 1:45.

The afternoon is spent in "basic training," that is, elementary drill. They have three three-quarter-hour periods of what the sergeant major describes as "real hard work," following which, (if they have the strength) they march back to the barracks.

From then until supper time at 5:30 they occupy the idle hours with kitchen fatigue, mounting fire picket, and so on. And then from six o'clock until ten, their time is their own.

They have one late pass a week, which privileges them to stay out until two o'clock. Otherwise it's lights out at ten.

The girls are at first attached as recruits, and then, after a three month probationary period, are "enrolled as volunteers". The green recruit learns very quickly, the sergeant-major says. "It's amazing to see the change from the 'ugly duckling' stage to the quite at her ease recruit of two weeks' standing.

In an office at Mewata barracks marked "Orderly Room", are a number of big brown envelopes, bearing the stamps "On His Majesty's Service." Each one represents a member of the women's army, for each contains the entire life record of one recruit.

Here it is that the Canadian Women's Army Corps in Calgary is administered. Here Mrs. Ethel English, the officer commanding of "F" company, Mrs. Leona McIlveana, and Miss Pearl Brent, together with a staff-sergeant, work from 8:30 until 5 o'clock every day. Here is is that the complaint is so often heard that "there are just not enough days in the week."

They are just as efficient, they [illegible] as well, march probably a little better — In nearly all respects, a woman soldier exactly resembles her male counterpart.

But there's one exception — when a woman soldier salutes she smiles. It's against the regulations, but women are so used to smiling a greeting, that they can't suddenly stop. As a consequence they salute smartly, in the most military fashion, and then break into a R.S.V.P. grin.

It's a delightful habit, and one which might very well be generally adopted. Perhaps one day the company sergeant-major will be bellowing at his men, "Okay, OKAY! But when you do that — SMILE!"

MOUSE-PROOF GRANARIES

(Experimental Farms News)

Confronted with the need of providing mouse-proof storage for sacked grain, the Dominion Experimental Station at Beaverlodge constructed in 1934 a granary which has since been piled full of sacks but has never had a sign of the presence of a mouse, a squirrel or a pack rat, though depredations of the last-named might occur if it found the site.

A carpenter consulted stated that mice would not chew through a fir floor so a flooring of matched fir was laid on the joists and the siding was finished down against the joists to give a tight connection around the bottom corners. To prevent mice running up the outside wall a 12-inch band of galvanized iron sheeting was nailed all around the bottom. As the granary was set on skids, the wall being at all points a good six inches clear of the ground, all that has been necessary has been to shovel snow away from the granary once in a while to prevent mice finding their way from the drifts to the wall above the metal.

The plan is very simple, very inexpensive and has worked to perfection thus far. Several other granaries have been since constructed on the same plan and all are equally successful.

One caution is in order, says Superintendent Albright: With a tight floor it is also important to have a tight roof and good walls so that neither snow nor rain may get into the building. Drips of rain falling through a leaky roof on to a mass of grain build up a frost zone from the bottom of a tight-floored granary. Of course, a good roof should be provided on any granary but for storage of loose grain it is probably better not to have a water-proof floor unless the roof is also tight.

THE NEW YEAR—

PERHAPS IT IS force of habit, perhaps it is just custom, perhaps it is just taking advantage of a calendar division of time, but as long as we can remember, almost every newspaper in its first issue of the year wrote something regarding the "coming new year," at the same time wishing its readers in a variety of expressions a Happy New Year. Far be it from us to attempt to depart from this rule or in anyway whatsoever detract from the meaningful word "happy," in addition we are quite in sympathy with the word "prosperous" that generally goes with it, but in this year of grace 1942, we would like to add the word "busy". So our greeting this year to one and all is a Happy, Prosperous and Busy New Year.

It is unlikely that at any previous time in history has there been so much for people to do. It matters little whether one is on the farm, in the workshop, office or store, there are ways in which all may add their weight to the common cause. In the exhibiting of seed grain for the large grain exhibitions we have been told that each individual kernel undergoes inspection, vivid proof thereof, that a world champion sample is made up of perfect kernels. Something of the same idea holds good in this year of years with individuals. If we are going to emerge victorious from this war—and we are—we ALL have to do something to achieve this end. Within the fighting forces a man or woman is under orders, but without, it is a matter of personal endeavor and initiative. There are dozens of ways in which the private citizen may help. There are regular contributions to and active support of the Red Cross, I.O.D.E., Salvation Army, Y.M.C.A., Knights of Pythias, or any one of a number of groups who are working for the alleviation of suffering of both troops and civilian populations. Then there is the war financing field taking in the assisting of the sale of and the purchasing of War Savings Stamps, Certificates and at the proper time, Victory bonds. Then there is the scrap campaign involving metals, bones, rags, paper, etc. Among them all there is surely one particular service which a person could find suitable.

A little beside the point, but we are reminded of an incident which occurred last summer. In conversation with Mr. Jim Fletcher of Kingman, we asked him what he thought of the war. He replied: "Things will go better now that the Russians are in it on our side." On the strength of this remark we wrote quite a little paragraph ending up with the statement, "George Bernard Shaw and Mr. Jim Fletcher were the only two gentlemen we knew who had faith in the Russians." At that time everybody expected the Germans to have a "walk-over", and fearing to climb out on a limb with a premature article, we did not publish it. Everyone now knows what a drubbing the Germans are taking from the Russians and many have been the explanations given for it. There probably is no single explanation, except perhaps of better fighting spirit and superior generalship, but there is a phase of Russian life which should not escape attention. During the past twenty years Russia has built up a nation of intensely loyal people. To them the Russian system is the right system and having paid a terrible price for that system they were ready to pay another terrible price in order to defend it. Each citizen of Russia feels an intense vital interest in the Soviet Republic, it is their handiwork—they made it.

In a sense that same spirit flows through the Nazi ranks. Uninformed as to things going on outside of Germany, they follow the dictates of Hitler with slavish adherence.

It is not suggested that the citizens of Canada follow to the letter the system worship of the Russians or the idol worship of the Germans, but it is urged that when Churchill says "Come to the task," we do just that. Wishing you all a Happy, Prosperous and Busy New Year.

A WEAPON AGAINST TYRANNY—

THE BILL of Rights is more than a treasure to be defended. It is a strong weapon against the enemy. Though by force and lies they have stiffled the exercise of personal judgment within all the lands where their evil writ runs, that judgment is keeping the deadly tally of error and crime and one day will present the accounting. The deep craving that exists in every human being to be considered as an individual, to feel that he or she is more than an animal to be driven or a child to be cajoled, will not down for long. And while the free nations hold up their freedom as an example and a hope to those who are in slavery, the slave masters can never be secure within their slave pens—and their end will be certain and terrible.—New York Herald Tribune.

KETCHAMOOT

The Misses Margaret Mitchell, Maude Wildman, Hazel Sears, Marguerite Whillans, and Ralph and Neal Whillans, all of Edmonton spent Christmas holidays at the homes of their parents.

The Tollefson family are quarantined for scarlet fever. Oscar had contracted the disease at camp at Red Deer several weeks before and was thought to be quite well, but after a few days leave at home, his brother Torum came down with it.

Miss Lois Kindell of Edmonton was guest of the W. A. Mitchell family over Christmas day.

Mrs. Henderson has been the guest of Mrs. Appleby for the past two weeks.

Christmas holidays were saddened for the whole community when word was received that Mrs. A. F. Schultz had passed away in an Edmonton hospital. She was beloved by all and will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Stanley Jack and daughter Dawn came down from Edmonton Friday to spend some time with Mrs. Jack's father, Mr. A. F. Schultz.

Misses Ethel and Gladys Coombes arrived home Friday from Edmonton after spending several days visiting friends and relatives.

Miss Jean Clark of Camrose was a guest of the Coombes family over Christmas.

Farewell parties were given in honor of L.A.C. Albert Sears on December 20th and Pte. Lyle Coombes of the army on Dec. 27th, at the school house. Christmas decorations gave a cheery note to the occasions. A large crowd was present. Harold McMullen of Ryley played the accordian, Mr. and Mrs. P. Lerbekmo, the organ and violin, and Mr. J. Lerbekmo the violin for the dancing until midnight. After lunch Angus Mitchell, on behalf of those present presented both with gifts. Albert a man's travelling kit and safety razor blades and Lyle, a kodak and safety razor blades. Both showed their appreciation in thanking them all for their kindness, not only for the gifts but for the pleasant evening. At the close the group sang "For he's a jolly good fellow" and "God Save the King," and all good wishes were showered on them when the good bye's were being said.

Miss Margaret Kelly and pupils put on a very successful Christmas concert at the school house on Dec. 22 with the usual drills, songs, recitations, etc. The tree and decorations were very pretty. Santa Claus in the person of Charley Sears distributed gifts and treats to all the children with apples for the adults. The teachers made a wise decision when they held all the concerts the same night, as all the residents were comfortable in their own school house. Thanks, Miss Kelly and pupils for an enjoyable evening.

MINISTIK

For Week Ending Saturday, Dec. 27.

Some of our young people attended the dance held at Lindbrook Hall last Friday night, December 26th. They say they all had a ripping time.

The school children's Christmas party held in Ministik hall on Tuesday night, December 23, was well attended. The two Christmas cakes were drawn for. The lucky draw for the large cake fell to Mrs. Grummett but the ticket drawn for the small cake was no. 475, will the holder of that number please present the ticket to Mrs. A. J. Leach and receive the cake.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Whitford went to Killam to spend the Christmas holidays with their daughter.

The McCauley group of Edmonton will be at Ministik Hall on January 9th, (Friday night). They will give a concert and then a dance. The proceeds will go toward the Queen's fund. Come and have a good time and help a good cause.

Vivian and Kay Barnes came home to spend Christmas with their parents. Alex Innis also came out with them. They all stayed out until Sunday night.

A nice Christmas party was held at the home of Mrs. Giles and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Leach. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Davenport, Lily and Joe; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Leach; Mr. and Mrs. J. Swabey; Mrs. E. Swabey, Jessie and Frank; Mr. and Mrs. Smith and family.

Mr. W. George has joined up with His Majesty's Forces. He expects to go to Calgary by the New Year. Good luck, Bill.

Mr. Bob Swabey is still in the hospital but is getting a little stronger slowly, but, we hope, sure. Mrs. Swabey spent Christmas day with him.

Kay Barnes goes into the Royal Alex hospital in February to start training for a nurse. Good luck, Kay.

Mrs. A. J. Leach spent the week end visiting her daughter at Lindbrook.

It will soon be time for the Ministik Hall annual meeting. The President says he would like to see some of those dollars which were promised towards the Hall fund come in before the meeting. We do not know the date of the meeting yet. There is a lot to discuss and talk about plans for the hall for 1942. So watch for the date and all turn out and have a say.

The item of the lady came into the kitchen got sadly twisted. Sorry folks, no harm meant. Happy New Year.

HAY LAKES

History was made here, at least as far as hockey is concerned, when Sulitjelma, Dinant and Kingman organized a hockey league. An 8-game schedule was drawn up with Mr. H. Rodzonsky of Kingman as president. Three games have already been played and here are the results: Dinant 3, Sulitjelma 0; Dinant 2, Kingman 0; Kingman 3, Sulitjelma 1. On December 29 on Sulitjelma ice the league opener was played between Dinant and Sulitjelma. Despite the cold weather a large turn out of fans made the event a large success. A skating party and pie social was held after the game. Here is the schedule of the Hurricane Hockey League.

(Home Games given first)

Dinant vs. Kingman December 29.
Kingman vs. Sulitjelma, Jan. 1.
Sulitjelma vs. Dinant, Jan. 6.
Dinant vs. Kingman, Jan. 8.
Kingman vs. Sulitjelma, Jan. 13.
Sulitjelma vs. Dinant, January 15.
Kingman vs. Dinant, Jan. 20.
Sulitjelma vs. Kingman, Jan. 22.
Dinant vs. Sulitjelma, Jan. 27.
Kingman vs. Dinant, January 29.
Sulitjelma vs. Kingman, Feb. 3.
Dinant vs. Sulitjelma, Feb. 5.

All games excepting Sulitjelma home games will be played at 2 p.m. and Sulitjelma's will be played at 8 p.m.

The following boys of the armed forces were home on Christmas or New Year's leave: R. Nordin, Geo. Roper, V. Nordin, Art Soch, Paul Smith, Paul Schweitzer, Art Schauferick, Norman Grue, Carl Hanson and T. Roper.

I suppose you all know that the Rev. W. Irving (Bill) is married. The following is his letter to his friends in Ministik.

Dear Friends,

With the coming of another Christmas and at the opening of a New Year, I remember especially Ministik and your people there. May this Christmas be a merry one in spite of the dark clouds of war which cast their shadows upon us. A merry one for all. We must all pray continually that out of this struggle will emerge a better world order and that soon the Christmas hope of Peace on Earth will become a reality.

God bless you and be with you all in these difficult days. I think of you and include you in my prayers.

Yours,
Rev. W. P. Irving.

To the Editor,
Tofield Mercury .
Dear Sir,

New settlers continue to roll to the Island, the larger proportion coming from Saskatchewan, with quite a number coming from Northern Alberta points. Our latest arrival here is Henri Goubault, formerly of Lindbrook.

Farms here range from five to a hundred acres and more. Speaking generally, a living cannot be made from a five acre plot unless it is used for some specific purpose, such as growing asparagus, strawberries, bulbs or seed raising. Usually these five to ten acre plots constitute a home on which a cow, a pig and a few chickens are kept, the owner going out on casual or steady labor.

On the larger farms where about fifty per cent of the land has been cleared, experience and careful planning will yield a fair living. Farmers work pretty steadily the whole year through, except for about two months in winter, but the pace is generally easier than in Alberta.

Present retail prices at this date may be of interest: Butter, 40c lb., Eggs, 38c doz., Dressed fowl, 30c to 35c lb., Turkeys, 40c to 45c lb., Potatoes, 100 lbs., $2.40; Carrots, $2, Parsnips, $2.50, Turnips, $2.00.

While these prices may look high, we must consider feed prices as follows: Bran, 100 lbs., $1.38, Shorts, $1.45, Ground oats, $1.55, Ground Barley, $1.55, Dairy Mash, $1.96; Hay, baled, about $16 a ton.

I am most interested and must compliment Alberta on the wonderful strides it is making in co-operative endeavors of all kinds. We are far behind you; we know it and admit it.

Here on the Island, following up my old hobby, I have taken a very active part in organization work. While still a comparitively new comer, just why I was selected by the City to take over the management of Nanaimo Farmers' Market at a time when it was groggy on its feet, I do not know. I feel pleased, however, that it is now strong and active. I experienced a pleasant feeling the day before Christmas when our Market Farmers gathered in a circle in the market building and presented me with a large turkey expressing their appreciation for my work in the Market and for other farm organizations in this district and on the Island generally.

We have a strong co-operative creamery owned by our farmers and established about 30 years ago. Also a co-operative Feed, hardware and implement store, farmer owned, financially strong established about 20 years ago of which I am now President.

During the past two years six Potato Growers' Associations stretching across 200 miles of the Island have been formed (we pioneered the first one) and these are now united by a strong Advisory Board made up of two representatives from each Association. Potato and vegetable growing is an important agricultural industry here. Potatoes and most vegetables are controlled under the Marketing Act and prices for these are set by a farmer-elected Board. All these controlled products are brought by the farmers to a local agency which must pay him the set price and then distribute these to stores at a set wholesale price. The storekeeper must then retail at a set retail price. Set prices are all minimum, but usually there is no variation.

A Royal Commission is sitting at present investigating the activities of Marketing Boards and as I am Secretary for this Growers' Advisory Board for the Island (voluntary service) I am kept pretty busy.

I was recently instrumental in bringing about the organization of Turkey Breeders.

The most important step, however, has been the formation of Vancouver Island Farmers' Council. Any farmer-sponsored Association may become a member of this Council. Such Association may then send delegates to the annual convention of this Council and thus, through such delegates every branch of agriculture becomes represented on a common floor. This Council is now affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Agriculture and is doing great work. The Council is my own "child" and it has bridged a gap between a number of scattered and struggling associations.

Recently six of us in various official capacities journeyed on a Goodwill Mission to Courtenay, 75 miles North. Our only objective was to stretch forth the hand of farmer friendship between district and district. We went to encourage them in all their endeavours and to assure them of our full co-operation and assistance at all times. Another link in the chain of farmer unity was welded. A club to study co-operation was formed.

And so I will conclude by saying tat we on Vancouver Island stretch out the hand of friendship to you, brother farmers of Alberta. Write us, consult us, co-operate with us, and help us to extend this great bond of unity from Coast to Coast.

COMMUNICATION

A DAY IN AN AIR FORCE STATION

The lights are turned on at 6 a.m. daylight saving time. And if you are on early party, that is, have to inspect the planes before they go up for the day, you have to be at work in an hour. If not, you have breakfast, make your bed, and polish your brass and shoes and are on parade at 7:45 and to work at 8 o'clock. In the winter you parade in all of your finery and change to coveralls in the shop.

We have had snow and then rain and the roads are a glare of bumpy ice covered again with a skiff of snow and I do not need to tell you that they are slippery. It is sometimes quite funny to see someone try to make a dignified salute and try to march at the same time. Generally they fail in both, to the amusement of the rest of us. As we came out of the drill hall the other day the Flight Sergeant began to call left-right-left, just as we came to a sheet of ice on the down grade and all we could do was to set our feet and slide. I do not think that he enjoyed the titter and smile that went round the squad.

We work until noon and back to work by the parade route at 1:15 p.m. and work until 5 o'clock. In good weather flying continues all night until 5 a.m., and one or more men of each trade have to work all night as well, but they have the next day off. I like that shift and the DAY OFF. Not much to do but just lay on the bench and snooze, but one must be on hand in case something should happen and they want him.

After duty we take advantage of the war services and so far at the places I have been stationed, the Y.M.C.A. is the one. And they furnish us with basketball, volley ball, ping pong, libraries, reading and writing rooms and make contacts for invitations out to supper, and to special occasions and Sunday evenings. Though I have been out to I.O.D.E. invitations and the S.A. reading rooms. And in hte words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us (them) every one."

Oh, Yes! I left out the meals, but if I were to give a good description some would think I was recruiting, and if I should give a poor one, I would be violating the law against discouraging war effort. So the weight of wisdom dictates that I remain silent. And only state that there are those that would kick even at their own hanging. Most of us gain weight on it anyway, even if I have not, for which I am devoutfully thankful.

Wishing all of you the best of luck.

Geo. G. Abernethy.

Dear Editor,

You will hear from some who are not "Happy in the service" but tell them for me that they are too hard to please. Wishing you a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Yours sincerely,
Geo. G. Abernethy.

The Christmas concert was of a most interesting order and was greatly enjoyed by the large audience.

The Christmas services were well attended at all points. In Tofield the choral service by the choir was appreciated by the large congregation. The senior choir sang three very fine anthems.

Well folks, there is lots of news that should be published this week, but if we put everything in, the editor would be too busy printing for a while and the writer would have to hold his chair down too long. We will just say everyone had a good time Christmas and New Years.

Sometimes a good litter of pigs arrives and the sow has no milk for them, but this seldom happens when sufficient protein and lime have been provided during the gestation period. Ground limestone mixed in the chop at the rate of one per cent is usually adequate, but it has been found at the Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask., that the young gilts under a year old will consume a good quantity of mineral mixture, if available, in addition to the ground limestone in the chop.

Red Cross Annual Mtg

Annual meeting of Tofield Branch Canadian Red Cross Society held at the Tofield Town Hall, Friday, January 9th, 1942.

Mr. A. J. H. McCauley was appointed chairman of the meeting and W. Worton, secretary.

Prior to reading the financial report from time of organization to date, A. E. (Banker) Allan said there were now 19 active members. This was based on the ruling that an active member was one who had paid one dollar or more into the society during the Society's current year, that is from October last. He suggested that there be an executive appointed which would meet at regular intervals to keep in touch with the affairs of the society. He then read the financial report.

D.K. (Rev.) Allan in moving the adoption of the report said the secretary had been carrying quite a load. His work was greatly appreciated and the members should pay attention to his recommendations. Mr. McCarthy seconded the motion to adopt the report.

Mrs. Hammond as convenor of the work committee read her report, showing amount of material purchased and number of finished articles sent out.

D. K. (Rev.) Allan, speaking to Mrs. Hammond's report, greatly praised her ability to keep things moving. He had tried to visualize the number of hours the ladies are putting in and the sacrifice made. He moved the adoption of the report the motion being seconded by Mrs. C. Rogers.

Election of officers:

On motion by Mrs. A. E. Allan, seconded by Mrs. McCarthy, D. K. (Rev.) Allan was elected president.

Moved by M. C. Hammond, seconded by Rev. Allan that Mr. A. J. H. McCauley be vice-president.—Carried.

Rev. Allan then took the chair.

Moved by Mrs. Hammond, seconded by Mrs. Beirnes, that Mr. A. E. (Banker) Allan, continue as secretary-treasurer. Carried.

The following executive was appointed:

Mr. McCarthy, Mrs. McCarthy Mrs. Baptist, Mrs. Bracegirdle, Mr. Bellamy, Mrs. Gertie Chapman, Mr. Stinson, Mrs. Iver Moen, Mrs. Mel Wood.

Executive committee to meet first Wednesday in February at the Town Hall at 8:30. After that the committee to choose own meeting night.

Membership committee: Mrs. G. Chapman, Mrs. C. Rogers.

Work Committee: Mrs. Hammond, convenor; Mrs. A. E. Allan, Mrs. G. Chapman, Mrs. C. Rogers, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Boyles.

Publicity: W. Worton.

A circular was read regarding a nursing class but no definite action was taken.

A discussion took place regarding the money in the bank which showed at something over $700.00. It was pointed out that material for knitting and sewing had to be purchased from headquarters and a working capital was required. On motion by Mr. M. C. Hammond, seconded by Mr. McCarthy it was decided to send $250.00 to the Red Cross general funds.

The meeting closed by the singing of "God Save the King."

Mose, of the deep South, was drafted and sent up to a Northern camp. When furlough time came around, he applied for the carfare and time to go home and visit his folks. Weeks passed and no answer from the main office.

Mose decided to take it up with the department. The commandant was puzzled.

"The reason we haven't given you railroad tickets yet is because nobody knows where that town of yours is in the South—nobody ever heard of it."

"Funny," returned Mose. "They knew where it was when they drafted me!"

Farmers are now beginning to make preparations for next year's crops. A little money invested in a few bushels of the Best Registered or Certified Seed, inspected and sealed by the Government in sacks will return big dividends in the future. BEHIND THE HOG

And folks, I still have three sides to all items in this column. Yours, mine and the truth.

******

A little nonsense now and then,
A little horse play on the side;
Was relished by the wisest men,
Who really lived before they died.

******

And as far as telling Curlers just where to get off at, methinks that is best left to street car conductors. So if you like this column, tell your friends, if not tell me.

******

There's nothing better, seems to me
Than honest punctuality.
And so I'll put it down in rhyme,
For others' sake, Please be on time.

******

I said to Geo. McFadzean, our president, "What! no curling on Saturday or Sunday? I hardly know what to do with my week end." And folks, he said, "Why don't you put your hat on it?"

******

And I asked Mr. Stinson, our secretary if he ever saw anything so unsettled as the weather, and he said, "I'll say so, the fees."

******

One Scotch Curler asked another, "How's your cold?" He replied, Verra Obsinate," and how's your wife?, and he said "about the same."

******

I asked one Curler if he believed in Clubs for Women Curlers, and he flashed back at me, "Sure, if kindness fails."

******

What we really need at the rink is more wagon tongues, and less tongues wagging.

******

What care we for summer,
Or the winter or the fall,
But the Skips that knock our curling,
Need a clout across the jaw.

******

Freddie Imler and Yours truly are still rovers. This is just in case that Skips needing men, I was going to say curlers, give us a ring. You can always find me at work, and Freddie will be gassing around somewhere.

******

We have had this one in before, a few years back, but it should be still good for the New curlers.

AND THIS IS CURLING

My suggestion as to picking rinks.

An absolutely green lead. For 2nd one who has curled some, judged by his ability to get the broom, and play an average game; for 3rd, an exceptional 3rd rock or a weak skip, I mean as regards the knowledge of the game. The skipper, possibly a strong 3rd, or that tough guy who has curling and skipping ability. Among many other reasons for the world to give thanks, the Scot has presented her with two of her finest games, golf and curling. Real skill in the former is for the very few, although the great majority who annually chase the little white balls over the green pastures are the boys who provide the expensive areas whereon the Sultans of Stymie display their precision. Curling on the other hand is a game which most men who are not Cock-eyed, can by practice become fairly proficient. And the equipment is within bounds of the average man's purse. Just a piece of Canada's common commodity, ice, two stones and a Besom, and away you go. No fair lawn fabriked shirt is needed, no gloriously colored plus fours, no dazzling hose. No hired servitor to carry your weapons. Just an old pair of pants, the older the better, and as many sweaters as your hide dictates necessary to fend off the breath of Boreas. This completes the curler's costume. The game consists of chucking rocks along the ice at varying speeds, depending on whether you wish to draw higher unto the objective point known as "The Button" where lieth thine opponent, or to sift one down in swift sufficiency to rattle the ribs of his rock sending it into the perdition of lost rocks behind the house. Four men constitute a rink or team, the "skip" is the main gazebo. He is supposed to know all about the game and doesn't. It is his business to direct the operations of the other three willing helpers and in particular to tell them in dulcet tones of their deficiences in the fine points of placing rocks where he directs. The "Third" usually knows more of the game, or thinks he does, which is the same thing. And while theoretically, he may discuss with the Skip the possibilities of a shot, he generally tells the skip what to do when he shouldn't. The second is an embryo third and if the rules of the game technically prevent him from telling the skip and third the many things in the game which they don't know, they do not prevent him from instructing the 4th or Lead on the technique of the shots which in Second's wisdom are being badly executed by the seniors on the Rink. Next week we will continue with "The Work Horse of the Rink—The Lowly Lamenting Lead."

LOCAL LADIES HAVE REAL TASK

In 1939 membership in the local branch of the Red Cross Society numbered well over 100 members. Early in 1942 there were 19 members in good standing left.

It should be explained that a member is one who has paid one dollar or more in cash into the funds of the society during the year in which he or she is a member.

At the annual meeting held recently, Mrs. Gertie Chapman and Mrs. Clara Rogers were appointed a membership committee to obtain members and donations and they are aiming at increasing the membership beyond the 1939 level. To carry on the work of the society, it is essential that the district subscribe to the full extent of its ability.

The support of town and country people is required to raise the membership to the above mentioned figure. The ladies will give each member a Red Cross button to wear and when one considers the work the Red Cross does, there is no more honorable insignia anywhere.

So help these ladies to put this campaign over the top by donating as generously as possible to the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Wheat Price Ceiling Of $1.26
Urged By Line Elevators

THE NORTH-WEST LINE ELEVATORS ASSOCIATION has submitted a further memorandum to Ottawa urging that special consideration be given the disabilities under which the wheat farmer is operating in any action taken by the Government in fixing a ceiling price for wheat.

THE LINE ELEVATORS are urging the government to set the ceiling price for Western wheat at not less than $1.26 per bushel basis One Northern delivered Montreal in conformity with the price ceiling set on Ontario wheat. This would make the ceiling price at Fort William and Vancouver a minimum of approximately $1.15 per bushel.

ANY farmer wishing to secure a copy of the submission of the Line Elevators Association on this subject may obtain one from any Line Elevator Agent.

M. D. OF BEAVER LAKE COUNCIL MEETING

A regular meeting of the Municipal Council of M.D. No. 486 was held in Ryley on Saturday, January 10th, 1942 with all members present.

Relief was approved for Mrs. K. Skorochid at $10.00 monthly for January to end of April. Additional relief for Mrs. Kolmatycki was refused. A grant of $20.00 monthly to Mr. John Kowalchuk was approved for care and maintenance of Mrs. F. Kowalchuk.

An appeal was made to the Board of Review P.F.A. Act against their failure to declare Township 31, R. 16, W. 4th M. eligible for an award. Similar appeals were prepared in respect of other townships within the M.D. where it is understood there is a question as to whether such townships have qualified.

Attention of Mr. E. L. Gray was directed to the excessive delay in forwarding bonus cheques under W.A.R. and it was pointed out that many farmers urgently require settlement in view of almost total crop failure in several townships. A list of claims known to be outstanding at this time was appended.

Next meeting will be held February 14th, 1942, commencing at the hour of 10:00 a.m.

This is the last will and testament of me mis-leader of Germany—Better known as the Mad Dog of Europe.

Fearing that my end is near—that the die is cast, that I have shot my bolt—that I have now gone too far.

I give and bequeath all my German People that believe in me to the Dumb Peoples League.

COMMUNICATION

Tofield, Alta., Jan. 12, 1942

The Tofield Mercury:

Dear Editor:

The following is a copy of an article published in the Gospel Banner of Jan. 1, 1942. Would you kindly insert it in your local newspaper.

THE KEY IN WHISKEY

There is a key in whiskey: WhisKEY. This key fits many locks. It locks up the human brain and unlocks the doors to insanity and the "bug house"; it closes the doors of a husband's affection for his wife, and at the same time opens the doors to road houses, brothels, and "strange women"; it locks the door of modesty and unlocks the door of coarseness and shame; it closes the door against decency and opens the door to filth and impurity.

This key slams shut, in the faces of emaciated mothers and starving children, the door to plenty, and opens wide the door that leads to poverty and rags; it locks the doors of comfortable homes and thrusts the inmates into the streets as beggars and pariahs of society.

This key, this whiskey key locks hard and fast the doors of good health, and unlocks the doors of pain and gaunt disease; it locks the door of happiness and unlocks the door of misery and woe, and broken hearts; it closes the door of reason and leads men into the fanciful land of delirium tremens, where with horrible visions they behold demons, snakes and "pink elephants."

This key closes the door of life and opens the door of the house of death; it opens wide the doors of funeral homes and cemetery gates; it opens the unsatisfied mouth of the new made grave to receive the latest victim.

This key, this whiskey key, locks the door of heaven against all drunkards, and unlocks the door of the dark dungeon of despair and eternal damnation for its countless millions of doomed dupes.

Beware of the Whiskey key.

Reader, will you not help us in the battle against this terrible evil.

CATALINA U.S.A. BUILT FLYING BOATS IN BATTLE OF ATLANTIC

Numbers of huge American built Catalina flying boats, having a range of 4,000 miles, now patrol the Atlantic from their operational base on an Ulster Lough. These giant aircraft in close co-operation with the Royal Navy, maintain a close watch over British merchant shipping, and have to their credit many successes against lurking German U-boats.

The crew of a Catalina are seen casting off the buoy as they make ready for a flight.

A PRAYER

(We have been requested to print the following prayer, clipped from a magazine. This we are pleased to do.)—Ed.)

Keep us O Lord from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word and deed.

Let us be done with fault finding and leave off self seeking.

May we put away all pretence and meet each other face to face, without self pity and without prejudice.

May we never be hasty in judgement and always generous.

Let us take time for all things, make us grow calm, serene, gentle.

Teach us to put into action our better impulses straight forward and unafraid.

Grant that we may realize that it is the little things that create differences; that in the big things of life we are one.

And may we strive to touch and know the great human heart common to us all, and O Lord God let us not forget to be kind.

WINTER CARE OF THE BROOD SOW

A good straw shed is often preferable to a lumber building as winter quarters for brood sows. A single door in the south of the straw shed is the only opening necessary and need never be closed. An abundance of dry bedding is essential and should be changed frequently to maintain a dry clean bed. Pigs seldom suffer from cold when provided with a reasonable shed and an abundance of straw. At the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask., not more than ten or a dozen sows are housed together, states E. Van Nice.

An effective method of providing exercise is to feed the sows about fifty yards from the shelter. It is well to provide a windbreak at the feed trough and have the chill removed from the drinking water.

Large litters are usually obtained if the sows are fed liberally a short time before breeding so that they will be in a gaining condition. A medium state of fatness should be maintained throughout the dry period, which may require from five to nine pounds of chop daily per sow depending upon her condition. A young gilt bred to farrow at one year old will not have completed her growth; hence, must develop her own body as well as the unborn litter, and for this reason may require even more feed and minerals than a mature sow.

As a substitute for summer pasture legume hay may well be fed in small racks or thrown in the pen in small quantities. A common chop mixture for pregnant sows is one part oat chop to one part barley or wheat, by weight. If oats are not available, bran may be substituted at the rate of one-quarter of the chop mixture with three-quarters barley or wheat. If milk is available as a source of protein, from ten to fifteen pounds per sow daily will supply the correct balance of protein. If milk is not available, from five to eight per cent of tankage or a protein concentrate in the chop is perhaps the best single substitute.

Potassium iodide is a winter requirement in many districts to prevent hairlessness of litters and may be given by dissolving one ounce of iodide in one gallon of water and giving one tablespoonful of the solution to each sow daily in her feed while pregnant.

PLEDGE FOR NATIONAL DEFENCE

"I will keep myself fit physically, mentally, spiritually, to be ready for any crisis, and to discipline myself for strength.

"I will go about my business with a clear eye, a cool head, and a stout heart, neither scared by wild rumor nor deluded by false security.

"I will do my particular job -- in office, store, shop, mill or farm, better than it was ever done before, dedicating my skill to my country's service.

"I will take an active interest in government, in town, school, district, country, state and nation, and make it my business to understand public affairs, laws and policies.

"I will help build my town as a wholesome, balanced community, because if all communities are sound, our country will be sound.

"I will vote in every election, appreciating the right of the ballot now denied in many lands.

"I will support billions for defense but not one cent for waste.

"I will work for unity among all our people and oppose efforts to create hatred based on race, creed, or color.

LINDBROOK

Well, the usual January thaw has made its appearance, and generally pleases most folk, except perhaps a few motorists whose duties or trips take them off the travelled roads. Still, you cannot please everyone, and it will educate them for the time when gas and tires will be a memory, that is, if the war lasts that long, might as well get used to it.

There was quite an attendance at the poll held at the school here last Saturday for the purpose of electing a trustee for the Holden School Division. More might have turned out, but as it was, it was quite a change from some previous polls we have seen where hardly any turned out. The candidate from here, Mr. Jas. Braeogirdle polled 25 votes out of 32 polled and 13 out of 18 at the Weslake poll.

Mrs. Stevens and daughter of Cooking Lake, visited her aunt Mrs. Stevens who makes her home with the Mears family here.

Mr. A. Mears spent the week end in the city.

We hear very good reports of the show put on by the Macauley troupe at the Ministik Hall last week. It is said that they are putting one on at the hall here on February 10th, so we hope all will endeavor to attend. The entire proceeds go to the Queen's Canadian Fund for the bombed out areas in Britain, the people who took it, and are still as game as ever, despite their hardship and losses, so do your bit too and help.

SAILORS PASS ON THEIR PARCELS TO LESS FORTUNATE MATES

Montreal, January 13— That he who gives quickly gives twice has been well exemplified by the action of two naval officers on leave of absence from the Canadian National Steamships. These officers received parcels distributed by the Montreal Unit of the Canadian National Railways Employees War Services Association and in each instance the recipient stated that in his present post he is assured of Christmas cheer and so has passed the bundle of good things on to one setting out to sea.

One recipient, Commander W. B. Armit, RCNR, writes: "There are many of the Canadian National employees serving afloat; in fact, a large percentage of the destroyers, corvettes, minesweepers, etc., are commanded and officered by officers of the company, most of whom have sailed with me. I have passed on my present to the Captain of a destroyer, lately Chief Officer of a "Lady Boat and I am sure he will appreciate it during a spell of duty on the wintery Atlantic."

Pay. Lieutenant Commander H. R. Northrup, RCNR writes: "As I am presently located as Account Officer of a naval base, I do not consider myself entitled to this very fine package, but am turning it over to an English sailor who will be sailing in a convoy, as a gunner on board a merchant ship. I can assure you he is more deserving than I am, and I extend to you his deep appreciation."

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By R. C. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

An authoritative agricultural organisation in Alberta, that has the respect of all, has recommended to the Dominion Minister of Agriculture that the license for Golden Ball Durum wheat shall be revoked. If this is done it means that no one would be permitted to advertise, or to offer for sale, or to sell, or to have in their possession for sale, for the purpose of seeding in Canada, any Golden Ball Durum wheat. This in turn, of course, would quickly eliminate the variety from production and use.

Golden Ball is a low quality Durum wheat, and makes the poorest kind of macaroni. It seems important, therefore, that this variety should be eliminated as quickly as possible, for it harms the general quality and reputation of all the good Durum wheat that Canada produces for sale on world markets. Under present regulations Golden Ball Durum is allowed by the Dominion Grain Inspection Department only to go into the lower grades. There are other varieties of Durum that are of far better quality than Golden Ball and which yield as high.

I have seen the poor quality macaroni that Golden Ball Durum makes, and so I strongly advise farmers to support the recommendation to the Minister made by the Alberta authority.

FEEDS THAT IMPROVE THE HATCHABILITY OF EGGS

(Experimental Farms News)

Considerable loss occurs annually through the failure of eggs to hatch. With the best of hatching equipment almost forty per cent of the total eggs that are set each year fail to develop to the live chick stage. The hatchability of eggs is influenced by several factors, and of first importance is the feed supplied to the breeding flock, prior to and during the hatching season. To obtain the best results the essential feeds for good hatchability should be fed four to six weeks before the eggs are to be saved for incubation. The supplementary feeds used with the regular mixtures of hard grain and dry mash should be carefully selected for breeding stock. It is the protein, mineral and vitamin supplements that influence hatchability, states R. M. Hopper, Dominion Experimental Farm, Brandon, Man.

It has been found that fish meal and milk powder are both superior to meat meal as a protein supplement for use during the breeding season. It is recommended, therefore, that meat meal be used to supply not more than one-third to one half of the total protein supplement. Equal parts of meat meal, fish meal and milk powder, included at the rate of twelve pounds in each one hundred pounds of dry mash is satisfactory. Skim milk and buttermilk are excellent for breeding birds and where either is available for supplying drink, the amount of protein supplement included in the dry mash can be reduced.

The vitamins contained in cod liver oil or pilchard oil, and in green feed, are also aids toward improved hatchability. Cod liver oil or pilchard oil is usually mixed in the dry mash. As fish oils are valuable on account of the vitamins they contain, it is advisable to purchase oils of guaranteed vitamin potency, and mix them with the mash according to their vitamin contents. Green feed in the form of well cured alfalfa or clover leaves, sprouted oats, or surplus vegetables should be supplied daily.

The density and texture of the shell have been found to influence the hatchability of eggs. Shells of normal thickness and density permit of improved hatching to shells that are thin or of poor texture. A constant supply of calcium should be kept before the birds in the form of oyster shell, and in addition it is sometimes necessary to include two to three pounds of pulverized oyster shell, bone meal, or ground limestone in the dry mash mixture. The use of fish oil, as mentioned, also aids in the formation of superior egg shells. The addition of a very small amount of manganese sulphate in the dry mash has been found to improve the quality of the egg shell and hence improve hatchability. Only four ounces need be added to a ton of feed to supply this need. The best way to get uniform distribution of the manganese sulphate is to mix it thoroughly with the protein supplement before such is added to the dry mixture.

LINE ELEVATORS URGE WHEAT PRICE CEILING OF $1.26

Uniform wheat price ceiling for all of Canada of $1.26 per bushel basis One Northern delivered Montreal is urged in a brief submitted to Ottawa today by The North-West Line Elevators Association. The Government recently set a price ceiling for Ontario wheat of $1.26 per bushel. The indicated ceiling for Western wheat is 82¾ cents per bushel, unless action is taken by the Government to set a higher ceiling price.

In a submission to the Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board the Line Elevators' Association states:

On November 19th we communicated with your Board regarding the ceiling price for wheat. At that time we urged that special consideration be given wheat in view of the fact that wheat was selling at depressed prices in the base period chosen by the Government for setting ceiling prices.

"Subsequently the Canadian Wheat Board, acting as administrator on behalf of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, issued an order defining the maximum price at which Ontario wheat might be sold in Eastern as $1.26 per bushel, basis delivered at Montreal. This was the highest price at which wheat sold in the basic period between September 15 and October 11th, 1941.

"In view of the action already taken by your Board in respect to Ontario wheat and having regard to the superior milling value of Western spring wheat we feel that the ceiling price of wheat for all Canada should be not less than the price of $1.26 per bushel basis One Northern delivered Montreal. This would make the ceiling price at Fort William and Vancouver a minimum of approximately $1.15 per bushel.

"Our Association again desires to state that it recognises the absolute necessity of price controls which have been established. We, however, wish to draw to the attention of your Board the fact that wheat prices have largely been subject to Government control for several years. The depressed prices prevailing at the time ceilings were established; the national importance of wheat in the domestic economy of the West; the fact that the export sale price is controlled by Government policy as expressed through the Canadian Wheat Board, all coupled with the fact that wheat cannot be grown profitably at prices which prevailed in Western Canada during the base period fully justifies equal consideration and treatment concerning the price ceiling on Western spring wheat.

"It would appear that price ceilings will be with us for some time to come and we think it important, the fact should be established that there should be no discrimination between the price of Western spring wheat and Ontario wheat. We urge your Board, therefore, to issue an order defining the price ceiling for wheat for all Canada as $1.26 per bushel basis Montreal, subject to reconsideration being given annually in the light of crop production and costs.

"The establishment and announcement of this ceiling would clarify the situation for wheat producers."

HOG VALUES

The average price of a Canadian hog is around $15 today, or three times as much as in 1932. In the first Great War (around 1917) Canadian hogs were wotrh $26.

Estimating the present number of hogs in Canada at 7,360,000, the value of Canadian hogs today is around $110 million.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By
Dr. K. W. Neatby
Director, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

SEED SUPPLIES

It may seem a trifle early to begin thinking about seed, but it may soon be too late to secure good seed of coarse grains and forage crops. The farmer who waits until the end of March to discover that he needs 50 or 100 bushels of seed barley will probably find it necessary to use third-rate stuff.

The demand for feed grains this winter in eastern, as well as western, Canada, combined with the shortage of elevator storage space, is resulting in a rapid turnover. Then, also, harvesting conditions were so bad in many districts, resulting in large quantities of damp and sprouted grain, that local seed shortages will be numerous.

The Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association does not hesitate to advise a germination test for all oats and barley seed this year. Samples of wheat, oats, barley, flax or rye need only be delivered to a grain buyer of any line elevator company associated with this Department in order to obtain a reliable test.

Any farmer who knows now that he will require seed oats or barley next spring, should take immediate steps to secure the required amount.

The situation respecting supplies of grass and clover seed may be similar, and delay in ordering may lead to disappointment in the spring.

Of course, many farmers will be unable to decide upon the question of coarse grain and forage crop seed requirements until the Dominion Government announces a wheat policy for 1942.

ITALIAN PRISONERS OF WAR ENJOY AN ENGLISH TEA-TIME

Italian prisoners of war, helping to bring in the harvest on a farm somewhere in England, have a rest for tea, served to them by the farmer's daughter. They are very friendly with the farmer and his family, and contented to be in England out of the war.

HASTINGS LAKE

Quite a number from here attended the concert and dance held at Ministik last week. The program was given by the McCauley group and all seemed pleased with it and the dance which followed.

There will be service at the school house at 2:30 in the afternoon on Sunday, January 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Weslake and son George were visitors at the J. Tough home recently.

Pte. Jim Bruce, who was a trainee in Camrose has joined up for active service and is now at Calgary.

Mr. L. Lepine visited the city Tuesday.

Miss Ella Lindberg visited Edmonton recently.

The old Model T was really going up and down the hills recently. A few hills and vales means little to a Model T when geared for action.

Mrs. O. C. Johnson and two kiddies were Sunday afternoon visitors at Mrs. N. Peterson's. Mrs. Jack Vice was also a visitor there.

Alex Donald has left for the city on a business trip.

Mrs. Liza Ward and daughter Bertha, moved to the city recently.

The Barrow family had some visitors over the week end.

Mrs. Pithouse of Edmonton visited her daughter, Mrs. McLeod, for a few hours Sunday evening.

We understand Mr. Gladue is suffering from a cold or an attack of the flu.

"Going Back"—1.

The belief that varieties of wheat and other crops deteriorate, or "go back," is widespread. This belief is probably quite old; indeed, it may trace back to Charles Darwin's conviction that "nature abhors self-fertilization." Thus in the early years of the present century we witnessed efforts to rejuvenate Red Fife and Marquis by crossing different plants of the same variety. This resulted in "regenerated" Red Fife, or "regenerated" Marquis; but there was never a shadow of evidence that the regenerated strains were any more productive than the originals.

The "going back" idea may be strengthened by the knowledge that growers of hybrid corn must renew their seed each year. However, the situation with cross-fertilized crops, such as corn, is quite different from that with crops mainly self-fertilized such as wheat, oats and barley.

The fact that Thatcher wheat suffered from leaf rust this year has led many people to believe that its rust resistance is weakening. This is emphatically not so. Leaf rust and stem rust are caused by two quite different fungi. Thatcher has always been susceptible to leaf rust, and there is nothing to suggest that it is less resistant to stem rust than it was ten years ago.

Deterioration in farm stocks of wheat is due to volunteering of other varieties grown a year or more earlier, to mechanical mixing in machinery or granaries, to livestock pasturing on or passing over fields, and to occasional natural crossing with other nearby varieties.

The occurrence of speltoids in wheat might be considered an example of deterioration through natural causes; but they appear to be largely self-eliminating.

Do You Know What Amperage Is?

Amperage in electrical language is a measured portion of electricity. Voltage is the force with which electricity is dispatched from point to point. You really cannot accomplish much with electricity unless you have plenty of amperage and even if the amperage is there, it is not of much value unless there is voltage to send it to where it will do some good.

Canada's War Finance problems are something like electricity, there must be quantity and there must be driving force. The earning capacity and the savings of hundreds of thousands of Canadians is quantity and converting a portion of this into War Savings Certificates is force, and with quantity and force working in harmony, things are accomplished.

The government of Canada is calling upon its citizens to loan all the money they can for war purposes. Through stamps, savings certificates and bonds EVERYONE has an opportunity to pull on the rope of victory—and it is quite necessary that EVERYONE does pull on the rope of victory. And if EVERYONE who could did regularly purchase War Savings Certificates there would be plenty of financial amperage to direct into financial voltage so that the dynamos of human freedom might continue to hum.

See your banker, postmaster, elevator agent or creamery manager. They can all tell you how to become a regular purchaser of War Savings Certificates.

NEXT WEEK—It's Fashionable to Own Some.

Which brings us to the Lowly Lamenting Lead. Here is the work horse of the outfit. He must hump 8 stones to the place of business, dust them off and see that the other three as well as himself are duly provided with the omnipresent besoms. His besom is no ornament either, for with it he must belabor the ice in front of the moving rocks so that they will glide safely to the precise positions chartered by the omiscient skip. The second and third also sweep, but their ladylike pats are merely anathema to the laboring lead. The skip's broom is but a pointer need to indicate just where the rocks should be placed. Upon whether or not they go there depends the result of the battle. The ordinary game is a pleasant pastime, providing a little gentle exercise and a faint thrill if one places the rocks where the skip says and thereby wins a game. But the real campaign is the Annual Spiel. For weeks ahead, Pot Hunters gather in solemn conclave, the old and skilled warriors in compact groups around the prizes so the result of the war can be told in a coffee pot before it begins. But such is the love of the game that two or three hundred enthusiasts will put in three bucks apiece in the forlorne hope that they may get a teaspoon from the talons of the close corporations of cup coppers. The fight is on, jargon of draws and sheets, of wicks and wallopings fill the air. Rink after rink of good fellows struggle in the best spirits of good sportsmanship. Even the Cup coppers can present an oily smile as they approach the Pushover outfit that they know as their meat, but slowly and surely the ranks narrow down and the scowls of the sparton souls who are flattening less carefully selected rinks, widen as they know that presently Greek will meet Greek for vengeance. Toward the end interest evaporates, nine tenths of the gay adventurers who sought fame as bonspielers have realized that their chances of getting a hand on the Silverware were and are equivalent to the square root of minus one. The rocks were stacked by skilled hands against them. Occasionally there is a minor upset accomplished by fearful groans from the vanquished lion, but such upsets are rare. And so the trophys go to the predestined homes and Curlers crawl back to work. From all this you may gather we have been through a bonspiel. We have and most thoroughly enjoyed it. What if we know that the Macwhachels and the Brabtins and Womenfeets and the Snatchers would ultimately get what they started for. But we have had a good week's fun, developed a sore pair of shoulders, took a full inch off the Incipient Corporation and enjoyed a salutary cleanliness of many a hearty laugh. Surely that's reward enough.

******

Slated for the Vets Bonspiel in Edmonton, January 26 and 27, the rink of 60-year curlers are: "Uncle" Alex McCauley, Rev. D. K. Allan, Rev. Alex Stewart, and "Uncle Ben" Walter Bellamy.

Ye scribe (A.B. Clutterham) is also taking in this spiel, curling with an Edmonton rink.

The Dr. Tofield Chapter I.O.D.E.
Dear Madam,

An urgent appeal for Milk For the Children of the bombed areas of Britain was directed to the Association of Kinsmen Clubs of Canada by the British Ministry of Foods. This appeal was strongly supported by the Department of War Services at Ottawa, the British High Commissioner to Canada and the Canadian High Commissioner to England.

The call for help was answered. Two shipments, each of 66,720 quarts of powdered whole milk were sent in September and a third in October. A like amount has been promised for each month thereafter for the duration. The cost—$6,000—is a considerable monthly sum, but it is not enough. The Association felt and rightly that the Canadian people would want to do better than this and have set their objective for the first year at 125,000 quarts monthly, costing $11,250 per month. The children of Britain need your Help. We need it.

Every cent you give buys milk delivered in Britain to the Women's Voluntary Service (under the chairmanship of Lady Reading) who convert the powdered whole milk into fluid form and distribute it where the need is greatest.

We appeal to all the people of Canada to rally to the call Milk for Britain Fund. Your organization is doing splendid work, but there must be, somehow, room for our British children. We solicit your support now. If you have a full program at present, then at the first opportunity, please help us to help the kiddies. It is for the duration and all our efforts will not be good enough—we must do more.

Your members are earnestly entreated to tell their friends, other organizations, smaller clubs, everyone and everybody, that the children of Britain need Milk and more MILK.

Contributions may be sent to your nearest Kinsmen Club, or to the above address. Receipt will be gratefully acknowledged.

Yours in Service,
V. M. Lloyd, Governor Dis. No. 4
Association of Kinsmen Clubs of Canada.

GAIN

Mistakes are made
And loss ensues;
But if they aid
In clearer views
And lessons learned,
Then it is plain
That loss is turned
At once to gain.

LAKESHORE

The War Workers' Club will hold its January meeting at Mrs. Warner's home on Thursday, the 29th. This is the annual meeting and it will be greatly appreciated by the executive and supply committee if every member will make a special effort to attend. If this is not possible it would be a great help to have all the work turned in and checked.

Mr. Sware of Tofield is busy at John Wood's, building some pig houses.

The annual meeting of the Lakeshore Ladies' Aid and the Lakeshore church board were held at Murray's last Thursday. Two new members, Mrs. Leslie Jones and Neil Phillips were elected to the church board. The same members as for last year were returned to office for the Ladies' Aid. Both organizations ended the year with a cash balance on hand, and members felt quite gratified not to be "in the red," and are very appreciative of the co-operation and assistance received from the people of the district.

Bill Davison spent a day or two in this district grinding for several of the farmers.

Mrs. Lorimer Hunter and Myrna spent two or three days in Edmonton last week.

Douglas Murray felt fit enough to be able to return to school last Wednesday.

They say "ya can't fool an old horsefly" but we rather suspect that the weatherman has fooled the gopher that Herman Tiedeman saw in his field this week. That's the earliest gopher we've heard of—but who can blame the little fellow for wanting to get outdoors this beautiful weather.

Mr. Riley is able to get out for short walks around the yard these days and is really enjoying this break in the January winter weather.

As early as August 72,000 Christmas boxes began their trek from the Red Cross packing centre in London to Britain's 70,000 men in the prison camps of Germany. The extra 2,000 parcels are an insurance that everybody gets one. The first lap was to Lisbon; the next to Marseilles; then on to Geneva: and so to Germany.

OUR CREED

Keep us, Oh God, from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking.

May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face—without self-pity and without prejudice.

May we never be hasty in judgment and always be generous.

Let us take time for all things; make us to grow calm, serene and gentle.

Teach us to put into action, our better impulses, straightforward and unafraid.

Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences, that in the big things of life we are as one.

And may we strive to touch and to know the great human heart common to us all, and Oh, Lord God, let us not forget to be kind.—Mary Stewart.

LINDBROOK

Everyone here is enjoying the mild weather, except perhaps the horses who have to haul over the icy roads. They hate it, having difficulty in even walking on the ice, let alone haul; so, to be a decent guy, just defer your horse work until it snows again and give your equine pals a break.

Mrs. J. Bracegirdle visited both Wainwright and Edmonton this week.

Mrs. F. Evans now residing in the city, visited her "country house" here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Kortzman had a stroke of bad luck last week, when one morning they awoke to find their chicken house on fire. Mr. Kortzman and his son Richard, soon extinguished the flames, which luckily had not gained much headway, and so saved the building. The smoke, however, killed all the chickens and turkeys, and so leaves a chicken house minus occupants.

Mrs. Frank Gould attended the poultry show in Edmonton last week.

The Military Whist Drive put on by the L.C.C. was pretty well attended and very enjoyable; but that's their special correspondents job to write up, so we won't intrude.

Mr. R. Herbert is travelling around the district now with his wood-cutting outfit. Last year, Mr. Harry Logan was on this job, this year he is on war work, or expects to be soon, and that will be in Peterboro, Ontario.

A NEW INDUSTRY—Or a PIPE DREAM—

THE WORD VITAMINS today is such a general term and yet at the same time such an obscure one, that the mention of the word in ordinary conversation is more apt to close an interview rather than prolong it. Very briefly described, vitamins are substances occurring in minute quantities in food and which are essential to the health and well being of humanity. For purposes of classification, scientists have named them A, B, C, D, and E, with other sub-divisions according to their respective properties. Certain vitamins occur in certain foods and again only in certain parts of foods. As an illustration, there are few readers of current literature who have not read of vitamin B1 being added to wheat flour to make the flour more nutritious. The reason for this is that vitamin B is found in the outer covering of the wheat berry, but not in the endosperm (the portion of the wheat berry from which white flour is made). This accounts for the age old controversy of white vs. brown bread. Of late years British millers hit on the idea of giving people white bread flour with brown bread flour nutritive qualities by the simple expedient of adding a quantity of vitamin B1. This is merely by way of illustration and is not the subject matter of this writing.

At the present moment at least, we are more interested in vitamin C. Absence of it causes infantile scurvy, spongy gums, loosening and falling out of teeth, weakness in joints. It is water soluble and is quite sensitive to heat. It is contained in quite a number of foods, including cabbage, lemons, oranges, tomatoes, lettuce and most fresh fruit. For general well being it is necessary that all humans partake in some form or other, a quantity of vitamin C.

It has been recognized that one of the best sources of vitamin C is black currants. And before the commencement of the present war we remember reading that a quantity of black currant vitamin C concentrate would be of great value to Great Britain, should war break out. We never learned whether Great Britain got this valuable concentrate, but we did learn something of much interest. A little less than a year ago, it was reported in London, Eng., that a large factory for the production of vitamins was being erected in the town of Dmitrovsk, Kursk province in Russia. It was proposed to produce annually 250,000,000 doses of concentrates of vitamin C from briar roses, and 58,000 quarts of concentrates of vitamin C from black currants. Also 66 lbs. of carotin, a valuable crystaline substance used in surgery. Dmitrovsk is, we believe, about 50 miles north of Moscow (of this we are not positive) and we do not know whether the factory actually went into production. It was expected that the raw materials for the production of the above named articles, would be obtained from the collective farms of Dmitrovsk and neighboring districts.

The processes of nature and growing things have so arranged themselves that certain things will reach a higher degree of perfection in crtain areas than in others. As an example our hard spring wheat cannot be duplicated either at the Pacific coast or east of the Great Lakes. The same is true of the cacao bean, coffee bean, and many other things. A combination of soil, temperature, humidity and altitude combining to produce a super excellent article. There are two things in our mind as we write. One that the Alberta climate is similar to that of the Moscow area and that both black currants and briar roses grow to profusion here. Just how vitamin C is extracted from briar roses we haven't the least idea, but the process should not be beyond the ability of our own scientists to investigate and solve.. We do know, however, that the nutritive and to some degree medical properties of black currants have long been recognized.

After two years of war the people of Great Britain would benefit greatly from a liberal supply of vitamin C concentrate. Could not an area in Alberta supply it? It would require research and organization. If the Russians thought the idea of sufficient importance to erect a factory to produce vitamin C in territory as regards soil and climate very similar to our own, is not the idea worth investigating here? Certainly in Great Britain today due to blackouts, bombing and other war conditions there are literally millions of people who are living under abnormal conditions. This being so, one would imagine that the British authorities would jump at the chance to obtain a quantity of black currant vitamin C concentrate if somebody had it to offer them.

$320.00 CASH PAYMENT will buy 160 acres having 140 acres broken, but no buildings. Price $16.00 per acre on easy terms. 2½ miles from elevator and 1 mile from school.

C. P. R. Employees' $50,000 Buys Two Fighter Planes

Canadian Pacific Railway employees throughout the system have, by donating old gold, treasured keepsakes, and cash, contributed $50,000 for the purchase of two fighter aircraft for the Royal Canadian Air Force. The cheque was presented at an impressive ceremony held recently in the Windsor Station concourse in Montreal, when representatives of the services, officials of the company, employees, and representatives of the R.C.A.F. joined in a colorful ceremony. Illustration shows C. E. Stockdill, assistant to the vice-president, Western Lines, presenting the cheque to Air Commodore A. de Niverville, Air Officer Commanding No. 2 Training Command, who in turn passed it on to Air Vice-Marshal G. O. Johnson, M.C., deputy chief of the Air Staff. The idea of the Golden Aircraft Fund originated with Miss Gladys Gowland of the company's treasury department, and was carried through to a vigorous finish by an employees' committee.

1942 WHEAT PRICE OF $1.22½ URGED BY LINE ELEVATORS

Line Elevator companies have forwarded a submission to the Dominion government advocating that the initial payment of the Canadian Wheat Board on the 1942 wheat crop be 1.22½ per bushel basis One Northern Fort William or Vancouver, it was announced by the North-West Line Elevators Association today. This price would give the farmer an average return of $1.02½ per bushel basis One Northern at his shipping point. The Line Elevators urge the advisability of building up reserves of wheat for war and post war requirements of 500,000,000 bushels, and submit statistics supporting a suggestion that the Government accept delivery of 350,000,000 bushels of the 1942 wheat crop from farmers at the price suggested. The further proposal is made that deliveries and sales of the 1942 wheat crop be segregated from the carry-over of past years and that the reserve stocks be held to meet post-war and unforeseen war requirements It is pointed out that in view of the controlled economy now existing in Canada the responsibility for providing Prairie wheat growers with a price commensurate with production costs rests with the Dominion government.

The Line Elevators submission to the Government contends that the present price of 70 cents per bushel is wholly inadequate to meet present wheat farming costs, and states that adequate reserves of wheat are equally as essential as are munitions of war and adds that "the Government should be prepared to pay the farmer a reasonable price for producing wheat just as it pays necessary prices for the manufacture of munitions."

The memorandum points out that the urban dweller, with higher wages and cost of living bonus, is better able to pay a fair price for the wheat required to make his bread than is the farmer able to produce wheat at less than the cost of production.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

Director, Research Department, Searle
By H.G.L. Strange

Many different plans are being advocated to secure for our farmers a better wheat price. Some of the proposals recommend that the Government should considerably increase the official ceiling price (according to the regulations the official ceiling price would be about 83¾ for 1 Northern in store Fort William.

The trouble, however, with merely increasing the ceiling price, is that neither price paid by the Wheat Board, nor the open market price might rise any higher than these prices are at present, and so might be far short of the increased ceiling prices, in which event, of course, farmers would receive no benefit whatever from any increase in the ceiling price.

The proposal recently made by the Searle Grain Company, however, of leaving the ceiling price at 83¾, and then for the Government, through its Price Stabilization Corporation, to pay farmers $1.00 a bushel for 1 Northern at the average country point (which is equal to $1.20 Fort William) has the virtue that farmers would actually receive the increased price for their wheat regardless of what the final ceiling price might be.

When considering any definite plan, therefore, farmers should make certain that the proposal actually will assure additional money for their wheat.

United Church News

The Annual meeting of the congregation held on Monday evening was very well attended. The Rev. D. K. Allan acted as chairman. The life and work of the church was interestingly brought out in the reports submitted. Ketchamoot, Lakeshore and Tofield reports showed much progress and a fine spirit of co-operation and generosity existing.

It was a bright and cheerful gathering and showed the church and the Sunday School and all the allied organizations to be in fine shape.

The motto for 1942 is "to be of even greater service and ever ready to help in time of need"

The social half hour at the close capped a successful and enjoyable meeting.

We are most grateful for the devotion and service rendered by such a band of faithful workers.

The Young People will conduct the evening service at Tofield on Sunday evening, 26th.

'THE TOFIELD MERCURY

Vol. XXI., No. 44 Thursday, January 29, 1942 $2.00 Per Year. To U.S.A. $2.50

Explanation Column

The column appearing in the Mercury for the past two years about this time dealing with the Annual Financial Statement of M.D. of Cornhill will be repeated again this year. The writing will probably not be quite as lengthy as previously, but we will try and cover as much as we can in the time at our disposal.

†—†—†

In general and as compared with the 1940 statement, the 1941 statement is a good one. As in previous years quite a few thousand dollars have passed through the M.D. office requiring much detail bookkeeping and accounting, and in order to even partially understand the annual statement, some time and a little study must be devoted to it.

†—†—†

The statement commences with Receipts (Municipal Only). The first item is the amount of money in bank and cash on hand when the year 1941 opened. This is $6983.35 and compared with the amount in bank and on hand when the year 1941 closed, we find there is a small drop of $445.82.

†—†—†

Receipts on account of municipal taxation amounted to $20,360.59. This is $2307.13 more than the amount collected for the same purpose last year. Receipts from both current taxes and arrears of taxes were up over last year.

†—†—†

The Unemployment Relief Repaid item refers to the amount of money received from the government for unemployment relief. This amount together with the municipality's portion had been paid out to unemployment relief recipients. The Department decide what is unemployment relief and what is not. The $222.35 represents the government's portion (80 per cent) of the total amount paid out. The $57.00 item refers to funeral expenses advanced and later repaid by the family.

†—†—†

The next sub heading, "Advances and Charges Repaid," include pests and weeds $193.80. This is from the sale of gopher poison.

The $32.00 item is the amount received by the M.D. from those having ground fires on their lands. The $15.15 is for culture, sold in connection with grass seed.

Under the next sub heading "Municipal Revenue Other Than Taxes," there are several items listed. The first item of $1.00 is at least $1.00 gain as there was no mention of licenses in last year's report. Interest on money in the bank amounted to $24.16 and exchange 31c. The next two items of $1.25 and 75c are self explanatory. The next item $138.12 is money received from the Department of Lands and Mines. When lakeshore land is leased to individuals by the Dept. of Lands and Mines, one twelfth of the amount received from the individuals by the Department is turned over to the Municipality. From this source the M.D. last year received $138.12.

†—†—†

The next item $165.37 is the amount of commissions received from the government on social service and educational tax collections. The item $38.90 is the amount of commissions received from Hay Lakes and Tofield school districts and represents five per cent of the amount collected from this source. The Craig $10.50 item represents commission for collection of payments to do with the sale of a quarter section of land. The sale agreement was between private parties but the M.D. acted as collector for the vendor.

†—†—†

The $33.22 item represents commissions the M.D. received on hail insurance payments. The item $167.-28 is the amount refunded by the government on fuel purchases. The municipality is exempt on certain gasoline taxes, but first has to pay them when purchasing the fuel, and later the government makes a refund. The tax is 7c and the govt. refund is 6c per gallon.

†—†—†

Government road grants amounted to $1350.00 and is an item that does not appear in the 1940 report. It will be remembered that a delegation from the council interviewed the Minister during the past year and the above receipt is tangible proof of their efforts. The grant was a relief arrangement by which the government paid the above amount and the municipality duplicated it. However, the municipality's portion was included in the original road work appropriation so the grant can be considered as net gain. There was some stipulation as to where the money was to be spent. The next item, machinery rentals, $3219.87 should be explained. The municipality has a system whereby each division is charged a stated sum per hour for the use of the large road unit and patrol graders. This fund is used for repair and maintenance of this equipment, but not for its operating costs. The idea behind the system is that a definite road appropriation be given each division. Out of this appropriation each division pays back to the municipality so much money according to the number of hours they have used the equipment. The money goes into a special fund to be used for the maintenance and upkeep of the equipment. The next item, Co-op trading, is bonus received on stationery purchases from Municipal Co-operative Association, it amounts to $22.02.

†—†—†

The McCusker light item relates to a special arrangement whereby Mr. McCusker obtained gas through the McDonald gas meter, the M.D. paying the McDonald account.

The 4.00 title item was first paid out for an individual and then paid by the individual to the M.D.

The next sub heading "Sundry" are items requiring little explanation. Overpaid taxes of $7.97 are just that. The pound surplus item deals with the operation of the various pounds. In the operation of these there are expenses and when lost animals are sold there are receipts. Some years there is a small loss, other years a small gain. The year 1941 ended with a surplus of $26.25, which is a gain of 13.55 over last year.

The item of $11.41 refunds is made up of money paid out and for different reasons paid back again. The National Defence Tax item $206.17 is money received from employees and forwarded to the government. The $25.85 item unemployment insurance is money received from employees and paid to the government. The item $212.50 is the amount allowed by the government for the wheat acreage reduction work. With a $2.60 item for outstanding cheques, a grand total of $39,546.38 is arrived at.

Next week we will try to run through the payments (municipal only.)

It is estimated the average American family spends $10 a year on soap and that's an item where junior thinks some economizing should occur.

AUDITOR'S LETTER TO REEVE AND COUNCILLORS

January 15th, 1942.

Reeve and Council,
Municipal District of Cornhill, 487,
Tofield, Alberta.

Dear Sirs:—

We have today completed the audit of the books and records of your District and are glad to be able to report that we found everything in excellent order.

Your Secretary, Mr. Letourneau, provided us with all information required by us and assisted us in every way possible with the conduct of the audit.

Yours very truly,
Patriquin, Johnstone & Company.

It's Fashionable To Own Some!

The economic force of Fashion is rarely understood and certainly seldom appreciated. The simple desire to keep in style is responsible for billions of dollars worth of trade and commerce the world over. Mi-lady may not have worn out her last year's Easter bonnet but it would never do to attend the second Easter parade wearing the same hat. The same is true, though perhaps in a lesser degree, of dresses, coats, shoes, etc. Men too, show their preference for being in style as regards clothing, and numerous examples could be quoted. The dollars that have been spent for automobiles chiefly because a new and shiny body appealed to the purchaser, are without number, and there is such a thing as style in furniture and style in architecture.

Being in style or being in the fashion is a deep seated human trait and probably has something to do with the social instincts men and women are endowed with.

There is a style or fashion sweeping the country right now, the purchase of war savings certificates. You would be surprised to know how many of your neighbors own one or more, and owning a few, desire to own as many as they can. An ideal investment for the man or woman of limited resources, War Savings Certificates are as good as the country in which you live. Four dollars invested now pays off in seven and a half years as five, and if not exactly a get rich quick scheme, they provide a safe, sane, solid form of investment. They are popular and are accumulating at an ever increasing rate in the private drawers of thousands of farm homes. It is becoming, it has already become, fashionable to own some.

See your banker, postmaster, elevator agent or creamery manager. They can all tell you how to become a regular purchaser of War Savings Certificates.

KETCHAMOOT

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held next Wednesday, February 4, at the home of Mrs. C. Coombes. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mr. Milford Lawson, who of late years has been making his home in the States, came last week from Flint, Mich., for a visit with home folks.

Owing to ill health of Mrs. W. A. Mitchell, Miss Margaret Kelly, our school teacher, is boarding at the Joe Sutton home.

Mrs. Wendell Wiley and two children spent the week end visiting at the home of Mrs. Wiley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ingram.

Mrs. A. Harrison spent a few days visiting in the city last week.

Mrs. Hindon, who stayed several months at the Roy Lee home, returned to her home in Edmonton one day last week.

Mrs. Arnold Steen and son Edward of Bardo were guests of the Sears family Wednesday evening of last week.

We regret to hear the Herman Lawson family are experiencing more than their share of sickness. Miss Marie returned home on Wednesday from an Edmonton hospital after an operation for appendicitis, and on Sunday Leonard was taken to the hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. J. H. Ingram attended the U.F.A. convention held in Edmonton last week.

Miss Hazel Sears returned home from Edmonton Tuesday of last week to help at the home of her uncle, C.A. Ingram, until after the sale.

Mr. P. O. Moline of Lacombe came on Tuesday to lend a hand to Mr. C. A. Ingram, until after the sale.

We extend our sympathy to Mrs. Davison and William Stairs in the loss of their father in Nova Scotia some two weeks ago. He made a trip to see them 2 years ago and made many friends while here. He was a fine old gentleman of the old school.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Coombes entertained a number of friends and neighbors at a reception in honor of their son Lyle and bride after the ceremony in Tofield, January 17. Congratulations and best wishes go with the young couple and we hope they will be spared to build a home together after the war is over. Lyle is stationed at Red Deer for the present, and the bride is working at Camrose, staying with her parents.

Readers of the Life Magazine might be interested to know in Jan. 19 issue, on page 8 in the top left hand corner, was a picture of Mr. Sears' camp taken in San Francisco before their embarkment for the Phillipines in 1898, forty four years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ness, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee visited Mr. C. A. Ingram at his home Thursday afternoon of last week.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Harold Yerex in England. While he was not well known in our district, his wife, nee Ethel Conklin, was one of our girls, being Mrs. A. Harrison's neice. We extend our sincere sympathy.

BEHIND THE HOG

By A.B.C.

Not much news this week as we have been away at the "Old Mens" or Vets Bonspiel in Edmonton. Uncle Alex McCauley with Rev. D. K. Allan, Walter Bellamy, Rev. A. Stewart, picked up a prize in the Secondary, while ye scribe, A. B. Clutterham skipped the Foulds rink from Edmonton and we got first in the Tertiery. The Edmonton boys gave all the visitors a dandy time.

******

Bonspiel time is coming up. Look for the very nice "Hoot Mon" posters that George McFadzean made up to boost this Spiel on February 17, 18 and 19th.

******

And we have always said that you can No Curl in the Summer time.

******

But still the rocks go round and round,
And no one knows just where they're bound,
The Lead and Second, how they sweep,
It almost makes the skipper weep.

******

Our rink is not as bad as we suspicioned,
I think it's just been Air Conditioned.

******

Two weeks ago we said that the Rink was one of Tofield's frozen Assets. During the warm weather it almost became a liquid one.

PUSSY WILLOWS IN JANUARY

It is a long time to the summer holidays for most people but for David Yakabuski and Jackie Ewanovich it is already spring. At least the pussy willows say so. David and Jackie found some full out and knowing that January is not pussy willow time, brought a liberal supply into the Mercury office as evidence. It is unusual for pussy willows to be so far advanced in January.

If you cannot fool a horse fly, you apparently can fool a horse shoe. Anyway, January or June, it's all the same for horseshoes in Alberta, for on Wednesday, January 28th, the following horseshoe enthusiasts had a good game back of the McHeffey residence: W. C. Billman, John McGinitie, Fred McHeffey and Fred Stevenson. A picture was taken of the group.

The Y.P.L.L. of the Edmonton circuit met in convention at Ryley, Jan. 17-19, 1942. The convention theme was "How My Christian Life Can Grow." Eph. 4:13-16. This was divided into six panels: 1. How my Christian life grows through prayer. 2. How my Christian life grows through my Bible. 3. How my Christian life grows through Christian friends. 4. How my Christian life grows through Christian books. 5. How my Christian life grows through service in missions. 6. How my Christian life grows through soul winning.

The opening session was held Friday evening. The speaker, Rev. Burkwall, chose as his topic "The Present Day Challenge to Youth." He represents the British and Foreign Bible Society and spoke of the work that has been accomplished. Each year the bible is being translated into 10 or 15 new languages. There is yet much to be done. This presents a mighty call to the youth of today.

Music was supplied by the local league.

The business session was held on Saturday morning. The officers for the past year were re-elected, with the exception of the president, Miss Davis of Edmonton replaces Mr. Larson. Music by Holden league.

The first two panels were given Saturday afternoon. Mr. Osborne Olson, who took the first panel, brought out that prayer is a vital factor in our lives and is the breath of the soul. It is the natural channel through which God communes with his representatives on earth.

It was pointed out by the second speaker, Miss Alice Broughton, that the Christian life must be fed from the Bible that growth may be continuous. Music supplied by the Bardo and Amisk Creek leagues.

Saturday evening panels, three and four were presented. The new president, Miss Davis, spoke on the influence of friends in our life, and pointed out that only christian friends are truly consistent, and the greatest of friends is Christ.

The second speaker, Miss Gottlieb, spoke on Christian books. Good books are worthwhile books, which make favorable impressions on the mind, are educational and enlightening. Music supplied by the Edmonton league.

A communion service was held Sunday morning. Rev. Stolee delivered the message, choosing as his text, John 4:4-26. Christ came to seek and save the lost, to meet the mercy and salvation, to satisfy the individual and reveal his great thirst and show the desperate need of the soul. Miss B. Gottlieb was the soloist.

The two remaining panels were given during the Sunday afternoon session. Mrs. O. Likeness, speaking on Missions, stated that one of the purposes of the Y.P.L.L. is to win and hold young people for Christ. This alone gives ample opportunity for service, at home as well as abroad. We should think not only of those in distant lands but those at our door.

Personal evangelism is my part in soul winning, said the second speaker, Mr. Arthur Nelson. It is a glorious privilege and though there are hindrances, yet blessings come to the individual who exercises his or her Christian life in this way.

The resolutions drawn up by the resolution committee were presented, one of which recommended that sale of liquor be confined to vendor stores, that hours of sale be from 3 to 8 only, and that wet canteens be closed to afford no hindrance to an all out war effort.

Music for this session was supplied by the Sharon and Kingman leagues.

The speaker at the concluding session, Sunday evening, was Mr. Martin Knudson. Though the Christian life be hard, we are cheered by Christ's promises, by his guidance and by his victory over sin, death and the devil. Music supplied by the Edmonton league and the C.L.B.I. A number of testimonies brought the meeting to a close.

The beautiful weather afforded a grand representation of both delegates and visitors. We left the convention with joy and thanks for the blessings received, for the food we received for our souls and for the fellowship with Christian friends.

How Rent Control Affects You — as a landlord as a tenant

AS a part of the general plan to halt further increases in the Cost of Living, the Government on December 1, 1941, extended the policy of the Price Ceiling to rentals for all commercial and housing accommodation in Canada. Generally speaking the new rental laws provide that:

(1) No oral or written lease for any commercial or housing accommodation (furnished or unfurnished) may legally be made after October 11, 1941, at a rental higher than the rental lawfully payable under the lease in effect on that date unless an application for increased rental has been made to and approved by a local Rentals Committee of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Such an application must be based on specified circumstances arising since October 11, 1941.

NOTE: Land and premises used solely for farm purposes are not subject to rent control.

(2) A tenant is entitled to a renewal of his lease unless the landlord requires the premises for certain reasons named in the Board's Rental Orders and has given the tenant a written notice to vacate within the time and in the manner prescribed therein. If this notice to vacate is contested by the tenant, the landlord must secure a Court Order for possession.

(3) Copies of all Rental Orders and Regulations of the Board and application forms for rental variations are available from any of the regional or sub-offices of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and, in areas where such offices are not yet established, from the Clerk of any County or District Court or local Rentals Committee.

VIOLATIONS of these orders are punishable by law and should be reported in writing to the Prices and Supply Representative Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, at the nearest of any of the following cities: Vancouver, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, North Bay, London, Toronto, Brockville, Montreal, Quebec, Saint John, Halifax or Charlottetown.

Precautions Taken To Safeguard Liberty of Individual Under War Measures Act

Only on the unanimous report of a committee of three high officials from the Department of Labor, External Affairs and Immigration, are persons other than enemy aliens interned in Canada, Justice Louis St. Laurent told a press conference in his office Friday.

Evidence is presented to this committee on which neither the Department of Justice nor the Mounted Police are represented.

Other steps taken before any Canadian is sent to an internment camp mentioned by Mr. St. Laurent were:

1. The accused is lodged in the local jail and notified of the reasons why he is detained.

2. Opportunity is given of seeing his family and his lawyer. The lawyer is given a copy of the reasons for detention.

3. He is not moved to the internment camp until his case has been heard by an advisory committee of three men headed by a judge and a decision rendered.

Making his first comment on internment operations since he became Minister of Justice, Mr. St. Laurent stresses that the regulations were designed for the sole purpose of protecting the state. Internment was not a punishment for past offences; it was purely a precautionary measure.

To date, Mr. St. Laurent revealed, 1,556 persons, including enemy aliens, have been interned in Canada. Of these 493 have been released. Canadians interned totalled 1,114, of whom 106 were Communists and the rest Nazis and Fascists.

Ever since the entry into war of Russia, Canadian Communists have been active in attempts to sew dissention in the armed forces, the Minister said. He quoted from a pamphlet widely distributed among soldiers calling for fighting men to protest against existing conditions and ending as follows:

"We must expose all mismanagement and incapableness of the higher officers and all Fascists officers and careerists must be thrown out."

To a direct question Mr. St. Laurent said releases had been refused in 19 cases in which release had been recommended by a Judicial Committee. In Great Britain Mr. St. Laurent stated—release of 132 cases had been refused in a similar way for similar reasons that governed the 19 cases in Canada.

Explaining the holding of the 19 men Mr. St. Laurent said that important evidence of a strictly confidential nature received from the Secret Service or other countries could not in every instance be revealed to the Advisory Committee. In particular cases this evidence had resulted in the Minister rejecting recommendations for release. However, several of the 19 cases referred to after further investigation were released.

Not a man has been interned in Canada because he was a labor leader or associated with a particular trade union, the Minister told questioners. Internment in every case had resulted from subversive activities.

Asked about internments of individuals acquited in the courts, Mr. St. Laurent stated that only one individual was interned after being acquited. Five others, however, were detained after their convictions had been either quashed or they had been released from prison on habeas corpus on technicalities.

Press Demands To Ear-Mark Funds

Demands that the provincial government expend motor revenues such as the gasoline tax and motor licenses on highway maintenance and construction will be pressed by the Alberta Motor Association. A resolution passed at the annual meeting of the association asked that any surplus funds be invested in dominion war bonds, and the funds used for a highway program when the war is over.

Under the recently arranged agreement between the province and dominion, under which the province is guaranteed any drop in gasoline tax revenue from the basis of $5,221,000 received in 1940, the provincial revenue to that amount is guaranteed. Thus, the province is protected against any drop in revenue from gasoline tax by reason of fuel rationing.

On the other hand, it has been revealed that the province has increased its collections in 1941 over 1940 by at least $300,000 as the result of adopting the purple colored gasoline plan for farm users. This fuel is sold upon payment of a tax of one cent per gallon, instead of the regular seven cent tax. It is claimed that the new system eliminates a great deal of tax evasion.

Consequently, it appears that the province will still be able to collect millions of dollars in revenue from motorists. The A.M.A. is maintaining its educational campaign that funds taken from motorists should be spent on the roads of this province and not used as has been the case for many years, to finance the government's general operations.

Parity Price For Wheat

A GROWING INTEREST IS DEVELOPING

The opinions which the Searle Grain Company has expressed during the past ten years that our farmers can never be prosperous until the price of wheat is such that a bushel will buy the same quantity of goods as it did in 1913-14, has now caught the popular interest not only in Canada but in the United States.

Wherever the price of wheat is mentioned, the fairness of farmers receiving "parity" for their wheat is usually discussed.

Examined from any point of view this proposal of "parity" appears to have a thoroughly sound basis, and above all seems to be fair not only to farmers themselves but to those who purchase wheat and flour and to those who buy and consume bread. In short "parity" price appears to be a most elementary form of justice to our wheat growers.

In the United States the President has approved a proposal by Congress to extend for five years these benefit payments and loans, made to U.S.A. farmers on their products, which now support and ensure prices up to "parity". This has been described as being a most welcome New Year's notice from the President and Congress to the U.S.A. farmers. The effect of these measures has been to raise the price of wheat at Chicago to $1.30 a bushel in spite of the very large unsold surplus of wheat they have on hand in that country. (The price of wheat at Ft. William in Canada today is 79 cents a bushel.)

Now that all the important resources, including agricultural products, of the Allied countries are as far as possible being pooled in order to fight for the common freedom of mankind, it certainly does seem plain simple justice that our prairie wheat growers should receive the same "parity" price for their wheat as is enjoyed by the U.S.A. farmers, and which parity price moreover ($1.26 a bushel at Montreal) is actually being now received by the wheat growers of Ontario, Canada.

Such a "parity" price for prairie wheat growers would come to just over $1.20 for 1 Northern at Fort William, which means approximately $1.00 at the average country point in the West. It is to be hoped, therefore, considering all these circumstances, that the Canadian Parliament, which is to assemble at Ottawa in a few days, will devise ways and means of giving our prairie wheat growers "parity" price for their wheat. —Searle Grain Co., Ltd.

THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE—

THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT'S announced intention of holding a plebiscite so that the people of the country may express their opinion on the important matter of conscription for overseas service, if it is a good move at all, is a move altogether too long delayed. The war is well into its third year now and surely the government has had plenty of time to test the will of the people concerning being released from its pre-election pledge of no conscription for overseas service.

If current reports are any guide, the province of Quebec is the province to whose will the present Canadian government wish to cater and we hear such remarks as, unity of Canada being endangered, indicating thereby that Quebec would rather break with the Dominion than submit to a breaking of the government's pre-election pledge.

Not being very well acquainted with public thought in Quebec province, we shall say nothing about it, but we believe it quite likely that when and if a plebiscite is taken, Quebec would surprise the rest of the country by its loyalty to the King, Canada, the Empire and British institution generally. Be that as it may, if the Canadian government feels itself to be inadequate as regarding expressing the opinion of the nation on the matter of conscription for overseas service, it should lose no time in arranging an opportunity to let the people of the country express their views themselves. On general principles we heartily agree with any premier who refrains from breaking an election pledge but in the light of what has happened since the fall of France we believe a large majority of Canadians would commend rather than condemn Premier King for breaking this one.

Conscription for military service has never sounded nice to British ears and has only been adopted when deemed absolutely necessary. The old saying, one volunteer is worth three pressed men was used pretty frequently prior to 1914, but the Great War No. 1 swept away old ideas and brought about conscription in Great Britain and also in Canada. As a method of raising a Canadian army, we feel compulsory service with everybody on an even footing is by far the fairest method, and as far as we are concerned the government is released from its pre-election pledge right now. But whether in view of all the known facts it is the wisest thing to do, we must leave to those with more knowledge of things as they are than we have.

It is so easy to become over emphatic on the subject of conscription. Possibly the gaps left by departing boys are more obvious in the country towns than in the city. Even if one is not intimately acquainted with them their faces are missed around the street, etc. Consequently there is the tendency to exclaim in effect, some are gone, all should go! Unfortunately the problem is not quite as simple as that. We hear considerable of the terms "total war" and "all out effort." If these terms mean anything at all, they mean that every Canadian citizen should put his or her personal preferences behind the needs of his or her country. Furthermore "total war" and "all out effort" also mean that the duly elected government should shoulder its responsibilities squarely and direct "all out effort," into its most useful channel. This is what governments are for.

"Total war" and "all out effort" include a great many things. Service in the fighting forces, in the factory, in the store, in the office, on the farm, within the realms of finance, in fact no person should fail to make their contribution to an "all out effort." Just where conscription should begin and end in this list of things is a complex problem. One hears a great deal about conscription of wealth and certainly it is easy to see the unfairness of conscripting youth and leaving capital to wax fat. The country awaits a man with a clear cut and workable plan as to how wealth can be conscripted.

Our idea on conscription of man power is the same now as it was in 1939. Every male of military age should have a number and from these numbers the fighting forces should be drawn. The government knowing how many men they wanted would know how many draws to make. Properly conducted, this seems to us the fairest and at the same time the most effective way of building up an army. Generally speaking, it is the system in vogue in the United States. Voluntary enlistments of those whose numbers were not drawn could continue as at present.

THE SUGAR ORDER—

THERE IS NOT much to be said concerning the newly announced sugar regulations except perhaps, to urge readers to do all in their power to live up to them to the letter. There is no actual shortage of sugar stock and the price of sugar is set for the duration.

The allowance of three-quarters of a pound of sugar per person per week will not be a great hardship, though an allowance of one pound per person per week, to bring the regulations in line with those of the United States would have sounded better. However the order was not given out to be criticized but to be obeyed, and it should be the endeavor of all citizens to co-operate with the board and stay within the limit set. Just as a piece of information which probably every house wife knows, one cup of sugar is approximately half a pound.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Farmers who this year will purchase Registered, Certified or other high quality seed oats and barley will certainly be disappointed with the general appearance of the grain.

Owing to climatic conditions most of the grains of high quality seed oats and barley contain kernels that are either shrunken or tipped with green, and so at first glance this might lead to the impression that the seed is of poor quality.

The fact is, however, that the appearance of the grain is no indication whatsoever of its value as seed. Seed value depends upon trueness-to-variety, germination and low content of weed seeds and of other kinds of grains. On all these counts Registered or Certified seed must be of a high standard, otherwise it could not be Registered or Certified by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and the Dominion Seed Branch. Farmers, therefore, I suggest, should this year pay little or no attention to the mere appearance of the seed they buy, for if the sacks are tagged as Registered and Certified, farmers can be sure they are obtaining high quality stock which in spite of the poor appearance of the seed is true to variety, is of high germination, and contains but little weed seeds or of other kinds of grain.

Prairie Chicken On The Wing

Melfort, Sask., January 26— An accident, unique in the annals of railroading, happened a few miles from here a few days ago and might have been written up in two ways— (a) as a serious accident; (b) as a prelude to a good dinner.

With Canadian National train No. 73 just getting into motion, en route to Hudson Bay Junction from Prince Albert, Fireman W. Parsons suddenly felt the cab window explode in his face leaving him with two cuts on the forehead and two under the left eye. First aid was quickly given by Engineer L. J. Wains.

The official company report covering the accident goes no further, except to say the cause of the breaking glass was a Prairie Chicken flying through the window. The report does not give the disposition of the chicken but it is doubtful whether it left the engine cab under its own power.

LITTLE THINGS

It's not so much the things I do
That bring to me regret.
It's the little things I leave undone;
The things that I forget.
The kind deeds I could do but don't;
The hand I fail to give
To those I pass along life's road,
As day by day I live.

It's the gentle word I leave unsaid,
The letters I do not write.
The songs of praise I leave unsung
Betwixt the dawn and night.
It's not so much the things I do
That bring to me regret.
It's the little things I leave undone;
The things that I forget.

THE SEARLE INDEX

The Searle Index of the cost of things farmers buy (147 items) now stands at 151.2, (1913-14 equals 100) This means that these things cost farmers of the West at the present time 51.2 per cent more than did similar items of the same quality in 1913-14. (These costs have risen 15.4 per cent since August 1939). The price of wheat is now 14 per cent lower than it was in 1913-14. The purchasing power of a bushel of wheat is now, therefore, only 57 per cent of what it was in 1913-14.

A mass meeting of women backed by eighteen national women's organizations, is to be held in Edmonton on Wednesday, February 25, in support of the price ceiling policy of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Prominent speakers will take part. Similar meetings are to be held in all the large population centres across Canada.

While most manufactured and processed goods come under price ceilings of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, there are no price ceilings on fresh water fish, cod, herring, haddock, smelts, hake, clams and halibut. Nor are there price ceilings on fresh fruit and greenhouse products. There are no ceilings on live stock, poultry, eggs, milk, cream, dairy butter, farm-made cheese, honey and maple syrup, when these are sold to dealers. If sold to consumers, prices must not exceed those charged in the basic period between Sept. 15 and October 11 last.

All vegetables, save onions, are exempted from price ceilings. Onions were exempt until January 12 last, when it became apparent that speculative buying was taking place. To prevent profiteering, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, promptly announced a "ceiling" on onions, fixing prices to wholesalers at those current on January 10. The Board reserves the right to fix ceilings on all exempt commodities should prices become other than "just and reasonable."

WINTER FARROWING AND BROODING OF PIGS

Designed particularly for the farrowing and brooding of pigs during the winter or when artificial heat is needed, a pig brooder of the six-sided building type was first tried out by a few practical pig breeders in Alberta to help in Canada's war effort to produce more bacon. Later it was experimented with on the Dominion Experimental Stations at Rosthern, Sask., and Lacombe, Alta. The pig brooder has many advantages, such as (1), it saves pigs—an important item in every pig raiser's business; (2) it assists in the two-litter a year program, enabling the producer to market pigs at off seasons, for winter farrowing can be made successful by this means. The 500-chick brooder stove is an economical means of heating a building accomodating six sows and their litters.

But, as pointed out in the Agricultural Supplies Board War-Time Production Series Bulletin "The Hexagonal Pig Brooder House" (Bulletin 10), there are certain limitations which should be considered by anyone contemplating building a pig brooder house. The pig brooder is a fairly expensive structure, considering the amount of service it renders. It is a specialized building not particularly suitable for any other live stock. It can be used to house growing and finishing pigs, but the pen arrangement makes it rather unhandy for feeding large numbers. The construction of a six-sided house possibly requires the services of a skilled carpenter. The usefulness and economy of the pig brooder is dependent on keeping it filled to capacity during the winter months.

On the other hand, it is an ideal addition to the swine accomodation when the sows can be moved through it in rotation. The pig brooder is most useful with the medium to large sized herd where it can be employed full time as a farrowing and brooder house and the little pigs moved with their mothers to other quarters when they are a month old or less.

Mrs. George Smith of Edmonton known in this vicinity as Helen Donald, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alex Donald for the week end.

A boxing bout ring would be an acquisition for those desiring to box. What about it, gang?

There were a number of people from here attended the Ingram sale on Monday.

LAKESHORE

John Warner jr., enlisted last week with the R.C.A.F. and is now training as a pilot. Happy Landings John Jr.!

Miss Craig spent the week end with her folks at Viking.

George Abernethy arrived on the flyer on Tuesday morning to spend his leave here. It is nice to have George back even if it is for only a short time. He is very much missed, especially by the boys of the district.

About ten of the Lakeshore ladies pulled a fast one on Mrs. John Wood last Friday when they surprised her by arriving in force early in the afternoon, laden with cards, card tables, and a delicious lunch. Mrs. Wood's birthday was on Saturday, which was the reason for the surprise. A jolly afternoon was spent, the party was complete in detail, even to birthday cake with candles and favors, birthday gift, and prizes.

A very merry house dance was held at Mr. and Mrs. Herman Tiedeman's on Friday night. There was a large crowd and everyone reports a splendid time.

Mildred Graham spent the week end at home with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Graham.

Mrs. W. E. Seale is gathering eggs to ship to the hatchery already and next week several others will be doing it too. We wonder if the hatching season will be a come-on sign for forty below weather.

'THE TOFIELD MERCURY

Vol. XXI., No. 45 | Thursday, February 5th, 1942 | $2.00 Per Year. To U.S.A. $2.50

Explanation Column

Last week we finished "Receipts (Municipal Only)" and this week are commencing the "Payments (Municipal Only)" section. The first item of $37.10 consists of outstanding cheques. These are cheques issued prior to December 31, 1940 and not cashed until some time in 1941. Coming to the items under the sub-heading "Administration", the first is secretary's salary of $1675.00, which is $75.00 above that of last year, the secretary receiving a small raise during the year. $100 is allowed for office assistant and $41.00 paid out for assessing.

†—†—†

Secretary's bond takes $20.00; audit fees $120.10 which is $10.10 less than last year; elections $19.25 which is $14.25 more than last year; and legal $250.00. The legal costs are $17.50 under last year. For purposes of economy and convenience, the Municipality pays a solicitor a retaining fee of $250.00. During the year many matters come up that require legal advice and attention.

†—†—†

L.T.O. (Land Titles Office) $150.00, is in regard to money paid to that office regarding titles, searches, etc., and is $5.00 less than paid out for the same purpose last year. Postage $111.11 shows a saving of about $5.00. Printing $600.00 is the same as last year; and stationery $316.44 shows an increase of $130.50.

†—†—†

Regarding the $600.00 for printing. This is exclusively for the Tofield Mercury being sent to each resident ratepayer. It includes the publishing of the financial statement, the publishing of all necessary advertisements, publishing the minutes of council meetings and list of accounts paid. The original motion called for $1.00 per year for each paper sent to resident ratepayers, but when it was found that considerably more than 600 papers were going out a flat rate of $600.00 was quoted. Regarding cost per quarter section, if we allow $150.00 as being an ordinary appropriation for advertising only, which is about the amount paid prior to this agreement going into force, the cost per quarter section for the Mercury for the year is between 30c and 31c.

†—†—†

Office expense was $51.50 and telephone $79.90. Both these items were up some over last year but not a great deal. Delegates expenses to the annual convention $100.00 was the same as last year, as also was the Association fee of $30.00. Council fees for meetings only amounted to $578.70. This is up about $70.00 from last year. Other payments to councillors mostly committee work, amounted to $28.20 which is $10.00 less than last year for the same purpose. Some Government Acts cost $3.55 and there was an $8.00 expense connected with a piece of land near Miquelon lake; appraisals cost $1.50 and taxes on the office building amounted to $36.06.

†—†—†

A Municipal directory purchased cost $2.00, and tax sale costs amounted to $11.55. Wheat Acreage Reduction 212.50 was the amount first received from the government and then paid to the secretary. Fuel cost $46.50, light $47.50, and post office box $3.00.

†—†—†

The "Protection of Person and Property" sub head lists but three items all of which are easily understood. Pound expenses $32.25; Pest and Weeds $363.63; and ground fires $127.91. Pound expenses are up $20.70 from last year and pests and weeds are up $129.20. Last year there was no listed ground fire expense. (Note that there is a $193.90 receipt item under pests and weeds.

†—†—†

Going on to the sub heading "Social Services", Old Age Pensions took $1677.14 and Mothers' Allowance $1750.00. Both these items were outstanding, last year's statement showing them as liabilities $827.14 and $1031.25 respectively. Now both accounts are practically paid up to date. In both these items the M.D. pays a portion and the government pays a portion, the amounts mentioned as being paid being the M.D.'s portion. Child welfare cost $242.66 and aged men $62.28. Both child welfare and aged men accounts show a saving of $83.17 and $580.12 respectively.

†—†—†

Under the sub heading "Health", comes hospital bills $1612.50 which is up $237.50 from last year. Doctors (M.H.O.) cost $566.70. Some of this was for 1940 and some for 1941.

†—†—†

Under the heading "Relief and Grants" Unemployment relief calls for $275.86. Of this amount the government has repaid $222.36,

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. Truman Jacobson on January 29th, a son. Mrs. Geo. Francis is looking after Mrs. Jacobson and the baby, who are both doing well.

Mrs. T. W. Ferguson was taken to Lamont hospital last Tuesday.

The annual meeting of the War Workers was held at Mrs. Warner's on Thursday. The club will carry on with the same ladies in the various offices as last year. The February meeting will be held on Thursday the 26, at Mrs. R. H. Phillip's. And let's all remember that meetings of such a service club as the War Workers are worth making an effort to attend—a real effort.

Mr. and Mrs. Abernethy drove to Viking on Friday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Rollans, and attend a program presented by Horace McIlreffey. They returned Saturday so that George was able to meet with the boys and afterwards go skating with them. On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Abernethy were guests of the Walker's, Monday they dined with Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer Hunter and on Tuesday they had supper with Mrs. T. E. Seale.

Several people have lost calves recently from what seems to be a new type of blackleg, at least it is new to this district, and there has been a real demand at the local drug stores for the cutter vaccine that will prevent both this and the commoner kind of blackleg.

The best shots during the Mixed Spiel were made from behind the glass and along the Board Walk. The best skips were among the spectators. They call the shots and cheer their favorites. It is quite a game, this Curling, and one can have a little luck too, the same as in any other game. And how these Glass Gazers talk, "He's short," "He missed the brush," "What a lucky rub," "They are not curling, they are just throwing rocks." And so on it goes. But most of the Mixed rinks are well balanced. In fact, some are stream-lined. They all get a terrific bang out of throwing rocks, sweeping and winning. When they win, they go walking home on Air, sleep well, and tomorrow is just another day.

Tragic Death Of Young School Teacher

The tragic death in the early hours of Friday morning, January 31st, of Miss Ruth Hayward Cash, caused a pall of gloom to descend upon the town.

On the previous Sunday evening, Miss Cash, together with a number of other young people, assisted in the regular evening service at the United Church. After courageously doing her part, which was done exceptionally well, she complained of a severe headache and was taken home to the McCauley residence where she resided.. After a bad night she lapsed into unconsciousness and Dr. Sorenson of Ryley was called and Miss Cash's parents were notified. Mr. and Mrs. Cash, together with Dr. Stevens of Vermilion arrived, but no noticeable change occurred in the patient, and without regaining consciousness, Miss Cash passed away early Friday morning.

Ruth Hayward Cash was 28 years of age and leaves to mourn her loss, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Cash and one sister, Miriam, of Elk Point. The funeral was held on Sunday, February 1st, at Vermilion, service taking place at First United Church, Rev. S. Sieber officiating. Interment took place at Vermilion cemetery. A number from Tofield attended the last sad rites of the departed.

Floral tributes were very beautiful and numerous and included offerings from both Vermilion and Tofield.

Tofield—Mr. and Mrs. Dodds and Margaret; Joanie, Marg and Rennie; Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair and Buddy; Tofield Curling Clubs; Girls' Bridge Club; Bert and Marj Everitt; Ruth Wingrove; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Abbott; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Swinton, the girls and Allan; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Brace and Jim; Joy, Mac and Arlene; Junior and Senior Choir, United Church Tofield; Young People's Society, United Church Tofield; Room 3 of Tofield School; Pupils of Tofield School; Tofield School District 1939.

Miss Cash had taught grades seven and eight in the public school here for the past two and a half years. Very popular in and out of school she took an active part in affairs of the United Church and other young people's activities. Her loss to the school, church and town generally is a severe and tragic one.

J. E. Stinson, Tofield, Funeral Director.

Crown Lumber Brightens Up Store

During the past week or so, the interior of the Crown Lumber has undergone a transformation. Bright and gleaming with new Monarch Enamel paint, including ceiling, walls, tables, cabinets, etc., and a new hardwood (cottage maple) floor, a great improvement has been made. This together with the new lights recently installed gives the store quite a modern appearance. Mr. Burke informs us that it is planned to put in a new store front in the near future. Mr. Kregan did the paint job and Mr. Kleinschroth laid the floor.

WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

Monthly charge accounts for January 1942 must be liquidated or arranged for by "the tenth day after the due date", i.e., by March 10th, otherwise merchants are prohibited by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from making further credit sales of listed articles to such defaulting customers.

Farmers, fishermen, prospectors, trappers, hunters and other persons engaged in a primary or extractive industry, and ordinarily receiving the main part of their income in one season of the year may purchase "listed articles" on an open charge account to the amount of $100, without being subject to the "due date" for charge accounts provided in Section 1, subsection (c) of Order 75. The period of credit may be as long as twelve months from the date of such purchase.

NORTHERNERS BUY BONDS

Ottawa, Feb. 1— Winter winds may howl, the mercury may hug the zero line, and Canada may be snowbound when the Victory Loan Campaign gets under way next month, but G. W. Spinney, chairman of the National War Finance Committee, will not worry about the results of the campaign if all Canadians follow the example of their fellow-citizens who reside in the far north, eastern Arctic area.

Details of a separate little Victory Loan drive which was carried out in the ice field up North last July and August have just been released at Ottawa for the benefit of the large crew of bond salesmen who will be approaching the people of Canada from February 16th on. Fur traders, mounted policemen and others engaged in the ice-bound Arctic eagerly bought every bond that was taken up North on the Nascopie by Major D. A. McKeand. When this allotment was sold out before the Major reached the farthest point of his trip, others up there who also wanted bonds gave cheques and cash to be taken back to Ottawa for bonds to be sent along to them later.

There were a few in Ottawa who were very skeptical about Major McKeand's idea when he first broached it. They thought that $10,000 worth of bonds was too much. Yet the total subscription by those men up in the Arctic was $11,500.

Interestingly enough, practically all the bonds taken up into the Arctic were sold through Victory Loan posters which were pasted on the boat. At each stop, these out-post pioneers took a look at the posters and then asked how they could invest. Some were actually joyful when they were told that there were some bonds on board.

When the Nascopie sets out again on its annual tour of the Eastern Arctic next July, there is no doubt that the amount of bonds on board will exceed that of last year. And those who know the Northerners will feel sure that the boat will not bring back one single bond.

A HUNDRED TONS OF FOOD

In his life a human being consumes a tremendous amount of food. In 70 years he eats 1,400 times his body weight—over 200,000 pounds of material.

The amount of food that he will take includes 6,000 loaves of bread, 3 oxen, 4 calves, 8 hogs, 4 sheep and 300 chickens. The amount of fish taken will include 2,000 large fish, 3,000 sardines, flounders and herring.

He will eat about 9,000 pounds of potatoes; 12,000 pounds of other vegetables; 14,000 pounds of fruit and 6,000 quarts of milk. He will take in also 12,000 quarts of coffee; 1,000 pounds of salt; 5,000 eggs; 8,000 pounds of sugar; 2,000 pounds of cheese; 10,000 quarts of water; and a lot of smaller delicacies. — Youth Today.

Red Cross Special

London— Joining up of broken heart-threads is a nonstop labor of love wherein Canada has an extensive interest. One end of the thread is in some war-prisoners' camp; the other may be in some bombed town in Britain. In one is a captured airman writing a mother or sweetheart, not knowing that the home to which the letter is addressed is now a heap of rubble. When no replies to his letters are received, the pangs of isolation and neglect are added to the pain of loneliness.

He cannot know, of course, that his mother's or sweetheart's house no longer has a postal address—that it is a patch of debris surrounded by ruined buildings, and that his loved one is wandering from friend to friend for temporary shelter, aching to hear from him, while his letter to her lies in the "dead" letter box of a London office.

That office is in the headquarters of the Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmen Families association, with whom the Canadian Red Cross is in close and constant co-operation. I have just seen a pile of nearly 1,200 such "dead" letters lying there. Patiently and methodically, inquiries regarding the whereabouts of the persons to whom these letters are addressed will be made through the 400 divisions with which the association networks the entire country.

In the majority of cases, the addressee, when located, is found to be in need, often from the after-effects of bombing. It is then that the Canadian Red Cross enters the scene. Already nearly a quarter of a million garments from Canada have been supplied by the Red Cross to families of servicemen, including hundreds who are now in enemy prison camps.

It is on the Canadian Red Cross supplies of clothing, boots and babies' wear that the association relies to a great extent. When the broken threads have been mended by tracing mother or sweetheart and the letter from the lad in captivity is delivered, the association provides any assistance which the woman or the family may need, relieving the lonely man in enemy's hands of this particular worry.

Every day more than 2,000 articles are dispatched to needy families of servicemen. That is a ministry of mercy which the Red Cross makes possible in Canada's name.

Please send your donations to the Red Cross British Bomb Victims' Fund either through your local society or direct to the Canadian Red Cross society, 95 Wellesley St., Toronto.

WAR AS WAGED by a country like Canada is a strange combination of softheartedness, steely determination, and a false feeling of frustration.

We read about and reflect on Nazi atrocities. The Huns bomb old ladies and little children out of cities into the highways in order to choke the roads and impede the military movements of their enemies. Nazis and Japs seize innocent people as hostages and shoot them down when their fellow countrymen dare to oppose Nazi oppression.

These inhuman acts sicken us. Loving peace, we grow tender as we realize that but for geographical reasons, Canadian mothers and Canadian children might be similar victims of these bestial races.

Out of that softness of heart rises a great personal urge to stamp out these tyrants—to make the whole world free for decent human beings.

And then comes the moment when some in Canada feel frustrated.

That shouldn't be. Those of us left back in Canada can fling our dollars into the war effort with as much vigour as Canadian sailors, soldiers and airmen apply to the battle at the front. And those dollars are as important as the operations of the military forces overseas. Every dollar subscribed to the Victory Loan means another step forward towards the end of brutal tyranny.

Fight with your dollars as the Canadian boys fight with their machine guns. Don't hold back your fire.

And then they tell the one about the supersalesman who was selling automatic milking machines.

One of his prospects was a farmer who only owned one cow. This boy was so good that he sold the farmer two machines and took the cow as a down payment.

LINDBROOK

Fine weather still continuing fine! In fact some are getting quite apprehensive, think it is too good and presages some terrific "comeback" later on. What's the use of worrying anyway? If it comes we'll have to take it, and we can too! We've done it before.

Mrs. Roy Foss, former resident of this district, is here on a round of visits to old friends here.

The Hall Dance went off well last Friday night and was well attended and we trust that the Hall's funds benefited by same.

The above was held over from last week's news, considered as too small a column to be printed, so here comes this week's stuff.

The sympathy of the Lindbrook folk is extended to the Todd family on the sad loss of their son and brother Jimmie, whose tragic accident which terminated fatally was published in last week's Edmonton Journal, which gave all the details. The funeral was held at Edmonton, Feb. 3, at 11:00 a.m.

The ladies of the W.S.B.D. club gave a Whist Drive last Friday evening, Jan. 30th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Scott. It was one of the largest turnouts for some time for a whist drive, 10 tables being in play, not to mention several of the club ladies who acting as hostesses, did not play. Court whist was the order and much fun and "mix" occurred, such as "Where do we go from here, boys?" etc. A dainty lunch was served at the close of the game and everyone voted the affair A1. So come again, ladies!

A charivari, or whatever they call these surprise parties that are sprung on newlyweds, was sprung on the new Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Bailey, at the home of the groom's parents last Saturday evening. All their young friends attended and we hear that it was a very jolly affair.

Heard often these days, "Say guy, you don't happen to have an old tire that you don't want?" "Why?" "They are worth something these days." Too bad it isn't old rubber boots, there's lots of those knocking about.

A motion picture show was given at the School last Monday evening, February 2nd. We understand that it was sponsored by the Holden S.D. The admission price was 10c, which is levied to eventually pay for the equipment, etc., and then the district will be able to give these shows regularly. The programme was both educational and amusing. The attendance was good, but owing to the uncertainty of just when the show could be held, prevented advertising same, so many didn't hear of it until too late. So we hope the next will be well and truly advertised.

The McCauley Concert Group featuring singing, dancing, magician, acrobats, comics, music, dance and lunch will be at the Lindbrook Hall, February 10th at 8:30. Proceeds for Queen's Canadian Fund for Air-Raid Victims.

Come on Canada BUY VICTORY BONDS

The Purchase of Sugar is Now Regulated by Law

As a prudent precaution, the quantity of sugar which may lawfully be consumed in any household is now restricted by law to an amount of three-quarters of one pound per person per week, and it is now unlawful to purchase more than two weeks' supply at any one time or to make any purchase if present supplies are sufficient for more than two weeks.

This step has been taken to conserve the satisfactory reserve stock of sugar in Canada and is an assurance to the consumer that there is no reason for heavy buying of sugar.

Ration coupons will not be used to enforce the sugar limitations in Canada. The supply of sugar in our country has been under control for more than two and a half years and the homekeeper has always been able to satisfy her needs; she will continue to be able to do so and the price ceiling law protects her against any increase in price.

The maintenance of the new regulation governing the purchase of sugar rests, as the success of all laws in a democratic country must rest, upon the loyal support of the people. Any consumption of sugar in excess of the quantity stipulated by this regulation is not only an offence against the law, but is also a betrayal of the war effort and consequently an offence against decency.

Reports received from retailers indicate that in some districts there has been misunderstanding of the requirements of the law. In some cases, people are under the impression that they should at once lay in a sufficient supply for two weeks; this of course is not necessary because a continued supply of sugar is assured. In other cases it has been assumed that a greatly restricted ration is to be made effective in the near future. This is incorrect because The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has already stated that the sugar supply situation is such that requirements of the consumer at the rate of three-quarters of a pound per week can readily be supplied.

As a means of protecting consumers from unknowingly breaking the law, it is suggested to retailers that, for the present, they limit sales to any one customer to an amount of not more than five pounds.

Summary of Sugar Rationing Regulations

1. The ration is ¾ pounds per person per week, including adults, children and infants, members of the family, boarders, servants, and guests who remain for four days or more.

2. Purchase your sugar in the ordinary way, but not more than two weeks' supply at a time. No coupons, stamps or tickets are required.

3. Do not purchase any sugar if you have two weeks' or more supply on hand.

4. Persons in remote areas who are not able to buy every week or two weeks may continue to buy more than two weeks' supply at a time, but should measure their consumption at the ration rate, namely ¾ pounds per person per week.

5. Lumber camps and other firms providing board for their employees must see that consumption is restricted to ¾ pounds per week per person, effective immediately.

6. Economize on sugar in every way you can; some people can get along on less than the ration. Persons dining in hotels, restaurants, etc., are expected to restrict their sugar consumption.

7. Additional supplies of sugar will be made available for home preserving and canning.

8. The restriction applies only to cane and beet sugars of all kinds—granulated sugar, icing sugar, fruit sugar, brown sugar, raw sugar, etc.

9. Industrial users of sugar, hospitals and other institutions, hotels and restaurants, will be advised by the Sugar Administrator how the sugar restrictions will affect them.

10. Retailers are entitled to refuse sale or to limit sales to any person they have reason to believe is attempting to disregard this law.

Vigorous steps will be taken to punish wilful infractions of the law. The penalties provided are imprisonment for as long as two years and a fine up to $5,000

Issued Under the Authority of THE WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD, Ottawa, Canada

MUCH TRAVELLED CAMERA ON LAST LEG OF JOURNEY

Winnipeg, Man. Feb. 2—A much-tarvelled camera has started on the last leg of a journey which began in Western Canada and will end "somewhere in England." Last June, when a Canadian National Railways' coach was being cleaned in Edmonton, a valuable Leica camera was found. It was immediately turned over to the representative of the Sleeping and Dining Car Department at Edmonton, who started the hunt for the owner.

The coach had last been occupied by a group of R.C.A.F. boys who were being transferred from a Western Canadian station to Rivers, Man. A wire was immediately sent to the C.N.R. agent at Rivers, advising him that a camera had been found which was believed to be the property of one of the airforce boys who had just been posted to that station, and if any enquiry were made, he should inform the owner that the camera would be along on the train the following day in care of the Conductor.

As no enquiry was forthcoming, the camera was brought into Winnipeg and turned over to the Regional office of the C.N.R. Sleeping and Dining Car Department—and the search continued.

Through the agent at Rivers it was finally ascertained that a Sgt. R. J. Metheral, R.C.A.F., had lost a valuable camera, but by this time Sgt. Metheral was at an East Coast station—so the camera was carefully packed and sent along for delivery. By the time the camera reached the eastern station Sgt. Metheral could not be found—and back the camera came to Winnipeg.

Still the search continued—and it was finally learned that Sgt. Metheral was overseas. Another letter was written and just a few days ago, word came back from Sgt. Metheral, giving full particulars of the camera, including serial number of both camera and lens, and proving beyond doubt that he was the rightful owner. So once more, the camera was carefully packed and more than seven months after it was lost, was speeding on its way.

Explanation . . .

which is 80 per cent of the total. Indigent relief took $513.27, all of this being a responsibility of the M.D.

Special grants amount to $150.00, which is made up of Salvation Army, $85.00; Beulah Home $40.00; Canadian Institute for the Blind $25.00. There was a refund of $15.00 to E. McDonald.

Under the heading "Public Work" some fairly large items are listed. The first, labour (cash payments), $12,375.04 is $4,538.48 above the amount spent for the same purpose last year. Part of this is accounted for by the government grant and part of it is due to there being a fairly large expenditure of public works appropriation during 1940. The 1941 public works appropriation was over-expended by $99.34. Workmen's Compensation Board took $99.68, and Council Fees (Supervision Only) amounted to $561.50. This is within ten dollars of the amount for the same purpose last year. Machine notes and interest amounted to $1848.11. This is $1395.17 less than last year's amount for the same item. The initial payment on the new 311 patrol unit amounted to $2000.00. Power unit operation of No. 12 (the large unit) took $1614.82, and operation costs of No. 20 patrol grader was $679.96; operating costs of No. 311 patro grader was $972.69. These make a total of $3267.47, which is $1242.78 more than was spent for the same purpose last year. The $16.70 item is the cost of work done for the town of Tofield, and the $47.33 unemployment insurance is money expended for unemployment stamps on behalf of employees.

Going on to the sub heading "Sundry" we find refunds of taxes took $7.97 and National Defence Tax $206.17, both these items were also listed as receipts and were paid in and paid out of the M.D. general fund. Drainage tax amounted to $204.15 which is nearly $70.00 less than last year. This is for a drainage scheme in the Hay Lake area. A small item of $5.54 refund of freight charges and an expenditure of $299.80 for forage crop seed completes the payments (municipal only). Most of the forage crop expense will come back when the seed is sold.

The other figures are balances and finally show a bank, treasury branch and cash on hand balance of $6537.53, winding up as we did last week with a grand total of $39,546.38.

HENRY McGINITIE

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, February 2— Second Session of the Ninth Legislature was opened by the Lieutenant Governor Thursday last in a ceremony shorn of all pomp. War time simplicity marked the entrance of His Honor. In the Throne Speech, harbinger of measures to come, reference was made to impending debt legislation extension of free cancer clinics, expansion of the health unit program, continuation of the municipal unit program, inquiry into The Workmen's Compensation Act. Also mentioned was the movement to push Alberta's boundaries northward and a survey of natural resources are preliminary to a program of post-war reconstruction.

V V V

Of interest to electors throughout the province was the announcement issued prior to the opening by members J. H. MacDonald, K.C. and J.J. Bowlen that they would sit in the House as liberals, and were not to be considered members of the Independent Group. The two members pointed out that their relations with the Independents will continue on a friendly basis, and they will be free to oppose or support legislation according to their views.

V V V

Premier Aberhart introduced the first act, thus setting into motion the legislative machinery. A special committee to name standing committees was then selected, and after other formalities the house adjourned. On Friday, Gordon Taylor, Drumheller government member, began the reply address, thus launching debate on the Speech from the Throne. He was seconded by Gordon Lee, Athabasca. Alfred Speakman, Independent house leader, will resume the debate.

V V V

Inaugurating plans for post-war reconstruction, a three-member committee has been named by the provincial government to make a survey of the natural resources of Alberta. Members are Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, Hon. E. C. Manning, minister of trade and industry, and Dr. Robert Newton, acting president of the University of Alberta. The committee is still in the preliminary stage, and it may be enlarged later. Research and survey work will be carried out, and the various data accumulated will be made available to the dominion.

V V V

Pre-session caucus of government members was occupied with a variety of topics, among which were the proposed conscription plebiscite, parity prices for farm products, price controls and the issuance of debt-free money. "In the present situation," said Premier Aberhart afterwards "it was felt that there was need for the utmost effort toward winning the war. It was felt that financial restrictions should not be allowed to hinder an all-out effort in winning the war, and that the lack of money was keeping back the use of all the material resources of the country in winning the war. Members felt that people must know what they fight and what they fight for."

V V V

Old Age Pensions came in for discussion among government members at the caucus sessions, and it was stated by the Premier that the caucus favored increases in these and mothers' allowance payments. Some weeks ago it was announced that the government is prepared to pay $5.00 monthly to pensioners immediately federal legislation is revised to permit payment without loss to the pensioners.

V V V

The market for horses has been decreasing over a period of months, according to the statistical reports of the department of trade and industry, but a note of optimism was sounded by the department of agriculture this week. Because of gasoline rationing and rubber shortages agricultural officials believe that the demand for horses will show an early increase. To the end of avoiding losses, the department is organizing promotional plans for an early inoculation campaign against sleeping sickness. Alberta has a horse population of 657,000. Several city firms have already declared that they will return to horse deliveries.

V V V

Death of Major Charles A. Lyndon, formerly Alberta Live Stock Commissioner, we officially reported this week. He was killed in action at Hong Kong. Major Lyndon was popular among his fellow civil servants and was widely known and admired in agricultural and military circles throughout the province. He commanded the 19th Alberta Dragoons, went on active service immediately at the outbreak of war, was in Iceland and survived the British blitz, returned to Canada to take a staff course, and was ordered to Hong Kong with the ill-fated Canadian contingent. The British War Office reported him missing some days before the capitulation. His wife received word of his death Tuesday.

The Annual Meeting of the Dr. Tofield Chapter, I.O.D.E. will be held in the Church hall on Tuesday, February 10th, at 2:30 p.m. It is hoped all will make a special effort to attend. Election of officers.

Mrs. Vera Hay came from Edmonton to help out at the Walter Kendall home this week. Mrs. Kendall has been very ill with pneumonia but we understand she is improving now.

IN NORWAY TODAY

Montreal, Quebec— Two proud fathers came to church in a Norwegian village to have their baby boys christened. One, a follower of Quisling, asked that his son be named Adolf. After the christening, the pastor turned to the second father and asked what name he had chosen for his boy.

"My son shall be named with a proud Norwegian name. Christen him Bjarne," said the second father. "But, first, please, change the baptismal water."

The pastor complied and next day was dismissed. He was lucky he was not sent to a concentration camp, or shot.

Wet Paint!

A German aircraft was shot down by German anti-aircraft fire aimed at British bombers on their way to the Rhineland.

In the early morning hours a couple of Dutch painters from a neighboring town were ordered to cover up the German markings on the wrecked airplane with those of the R.A.F..

The painters did their work with obvious reluctance, but thought of a clever way to spoil the German game. They left a prominently displayed notice: "Wet paint." —Tit-Bits.

Restriction by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board on the sale of new rubber tires has created a demand for "re-treads". The new tires are needed to roll Canada's machines of war to victory.

Dealers must not charge more for used tires or tubes than during the basic period between Sept. 15 and Oct. 11 last, and must satisfy themselves that the customer has a real need for the tire or tube, for the essential operation of his car.

A "used tire" is defined as one that has been used for more than 300 miles.

Explanation Column

For the past two years, this column, after going through Receipts and Expenditures (Municipal Only) has gone on and dealt with Assets and Liabilities (Municipal) and wound up with an attempted description of Trust accounts.

†—†—†

This year, chiefly for the sake of variety, we are omitting a detailed description of assets and liabilities and will try to give a little information regarding school taxes.

†—†—†

School taxes are in principle computed in the same manner as municipal taxes, though there is a difference in method. There is the same land and property basic assessment, upon which is levied a mill rate sufficient to raise a certain amount of money. The difference in method lies in the fact that whereas regarding municipal taxes the municipal council have full authority as to what the mill rate shall be, regarding school taxes this authority is vested in the school board. A few years ago it was vested in the local school board, now it is vested in the Divisional school boards.

†—†—†

At present the Divisional school boards at the beginning of the year make a levy of a certain sum of money on the Municipal Council. The Municipal Council, knowing the assessed value of the Municipal District land within the boundaries of any Divisional school district proceed to work out a mill rate in order to collect sufficient money to pay the levy. The responsibility for payment to the Divisional school district rests upon the Municipal Council and in practice a mill rate slightly higher than the levy demands is set to allow for non collections.

†—†—†

If there is not sufficient money collected to meet the levy the Municipal District has to make up the difference; if there is more money collected than is necessary to meet the levy, the money, which is always deposited in a separate account at the bank, just lays there until needed, the M.D. cannot touch it. Some ratepayers will remember that a few years ago, quite a surplus accumulated, running into 13 or 14 thousand dollars. This has since, by a combination of larger levies and correspondingly lower mill rates, been cut down to a much smaller amount.

†—†—†

Looking up the Cornhill 1937 financial statement we see that on December 31st of that year there was a school tax trust account balance at the bank amounting to $14,042.86. The corresponding amount for 1941 was $4000.06, over $10,000 less. There is a possibility that the Council will be able to pay the Divisional school boards' first quarterly requisition without resort to borrowing, but it is doubtful. The requisitions paid in 1941 was $23,038.00. Requisitions are paid quarterly and close to $6000 will be required soon. It is possible there may be sufficient school taxes paid between January 1st and requisition date to boost the $4000.00 balance close to $6000.00, but it is also possible that there may not. When there is unsufficient money on deposit in the bank to meet the school requisitions, borrowing from the bank is usually resorted to.

†—†—†

Up to and including 1937 there were 24 school districts making levies on M. D. of Cornhill. In addition to this there were four schools known as "Reporting Schools." A reporting school is one who collects its own current taxes, but whose arrears of taxes are collected by the municipal district concerned. An exception is made where a ratepayer has consolidated his taxes, then the M.D. collects both current and arrears.

†—†—†

One often hears discussions as to the relative amount of school taxes levied under the old small school district system and the present Divisional board system. As far as the school districts within the M.D. of Cornhill are concerned there is an increase. In the 1937 statement the

HOCKEY

During the past week Tofield hockey circles have been quite active, no less than three games being played by the intermediate team.

Last Thursday night Tofield and Holden played at Tofield, the final score being 6-1 for Holden. This was quite a good game, the Tofielders putting up a little better showing than the score indicates. Percy Owens of Holden refereed the game, doing a pretty fair job.

On Saturday the Tofield team journeyed to Viking and met the local team there. The score was close, 2-1 for Viking. The score was a good indication of the play. Archie McEachern refereed the game, and was only called on to award one or two penalties.

On Tuesday, Tofield and Ross Creek played here, Tofield winning by a score of 3-1. The game was fairly fast and at times rough. Mr. Burke refereed and was kept busy keeping check on everything.

HONEY AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR SUGAR

Honey may be used as a substitute for sugar in or on any food.

Hints For Using Honey

1. When using honey in breads or muffins, or such recipes that only call for a small amount of sugar, use the same amount of honey as the recipe gives for sugar.

2 In cakes or cookies, or recipes that call for a large amount of sugar, other changes are necessary. Reduce the liquid by one-fifth for every cup of honey used (three tablespoons plus one teaspoon). Use one-quarter to one-half teaspoon of baking soda to each cup of honey and increase the salt by one-eighth to one-quarter teaspoon Some prefer using half honey and half sugar for cakes

3. It is important to avoid high cooking temperatures when using honey

4 Cakes and cookies keep fresh for a much longer time when made with honey than if sugar alone is used Cookie doughs to be rolled, should be chilled well to prevent sticking Drop cookies may require a little more flour to prevent spreading, when substituting with honey.

5. Honey has a tendency to foam and boil over in heating, so watch it carefully at first

6 Warm honey is easier to use than cold because it drizzles in a thin stream, whereas cold honey pours in a heavy stream.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

A most fascinating and interesting piece of work that all farmers should attempt at this time of the year, is the germinating of the grain they propose to use as seed. It is quite practicable for farmers to test their own seeds at home, and no special equipment is needed.

A fair-sized flower pot, or even a wooden box, say twelve inches by six by six inches deep, with a few holes drilled in the bottom to allow drainage will do. The container should be filled with nice loamy earth such as can be dug out of a summer-fallowed field. Then 100 seeds should be planted about 1½ inches deep in this soil. The soil should be watered daily. The box should be placed in front of a window and where the temperature will be the ordinary house temperature. It should not be placed too near a stove.

In a few days the sprouts will begin to appear and they can be counted and so the percentage of germination can be figured, and the farmer can also observe whether the sprouts are strong and vital, or weak and feeble

In the event that the germination is low, then a sample of the seed should be submitted for official testing. Any Elevator Agent can have such a test made.

WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

Ottawa, Canada, February 9 — A plan to inform business men about price ceiling regulations by sending bulletins to all firms under license, to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is announced today.

"Every business which has already applied for or obtained a Wartime Prices and Trade Board license is now on the mailing list to receive these business bulletins", explained C. R. Murphy, Director of Licensing. "As each new application for licence is received, the name of the applicant will be added."

Apart from the legal requirements which make it obligatory for every licensee to notify the Board after March 31 of any change in name, ownership or character of his business within ten days after such change, such notification will enable the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to keep its mailing list for information up to date.

Every person who buys for resale, sells or offers for sale any goods must obtain a Wartime Prices and Trade Board license, unless he has already [illegible] one under a previous Board licensing order. Farmers, gardeners, livestock and poultry producers, and fishermen, need no licence unless buying for resale. Operators of private boarding houses and employees of persons or firms themselves subject to licence are also exempt.

The current licensing order also applies to those providing services which have been brought under the price ceiling. These include: the supplying of electricity, gas, steam and water; telegraph, wireless and telephone services; transportation of goods and persons and the provision of dock and harbour facilities; warehousing and storage; undertaking and embalming; laundering, cleaning, tailoring and dressmaking; hairdressing and beauty parlor services; plumbing, heating, painting, decorating, cleaning and renovating; repairing of all kinds; supplying meals and beverages; exhibiting motion pictures; process manufacturing on a custom or commission basis.

Licence application forms have been distributed to all Post Offices. Upon completion these are to be mailed, post free, to the Director of Licensing, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Ottawa. There is no licence fee.

Upon receipt of completed forms, the Director of Licensing will mail to each applicant, a licence identification card bearing his licence number which will be valid for the duration of the Maximum Prices Regulations After March 31, any official or investigator of the Board may require the production of this identification card by any business subject to the price ceiling regulations.

Enquiries for further information should be addressed to the Regional Directors of Licensing at Halifax, Saint John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton or Vancouver.

INVASION OF OTTAWA

In 1917, three years after the Great War started, farmers on the Canadian prairies raised 233,742,356 bushels of wheat and received therefore at local shipping point $453,-033,000, or an average net price of $1.94 a bushel.

In 1941, when the present war had been in progress for two years, farmers on the prairies produced 279 million bushels of wheat and received therefor $139,500,000, or 50c a bushel.

Thus, while the wheat production in 1917 was 45,257,150 bushels LESS than in 1941, farmers in the earlier year received $313,[illegible],000 MORE than the wheat farmers in 1941 received for their greater production. These figures show clearer than words the basic cause for unrest throughout the wheat growing areas of Western Canada. In the face of the abnormally low price now prevailing for wheat, the costs of goods and services have mounted to extremely high levels. Caught between the millstones of low prices for his own products and high prices for everything that must be bought, the prairie farmer is justified in feeling that he has been shabbily treated. Hence, the success of the plan to obtain the vast sign-up (185,000) of a petition to the federal government outlining the new "bill of rights" for the western farmer, and the collection of enough money to send more than 400 farmers in two trains to Ottawa to present the petition to Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his cabinet. —Wheat Pool Bulletin.

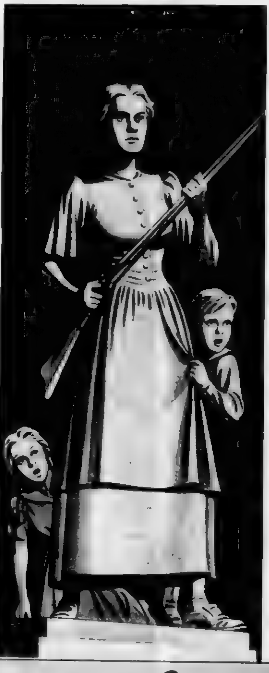
SWEET CAPORAL
"THE PUREST FORM IN WHICH TOBACCO CAN BE SMOKED."



The Spirit of The Pioneer Mother Flames Anew Today

THINK BACK to the old days—when Canada was young.

Think of the high courage, the indomitable will of those pioneer women. Within the stockade or in the open field, they toiled—yes, fought—by the side of their men for the safeguarding of everything they held dear.

In the hearts of the women of Canada, this old spirit flames anew today! Gone are the heavy muskets, the log barricades—but the love of freedom, the stubborn resolve to win through at all costs—these things remain unchanged, unchangeable!

Grimly quenching their tears, mothers say "God bless you" to their fighting sons—everywhere young women are serving where duty calls—the women of Canada are bound together in one common cause.

In thousands of Canadian homes, women are revising their family budgets, planning new economies, making extra sacrifices—so that more and more money will be available for the purchase of Victory Bonds.

They know—these women of Canada—that every dollar loaned now means more tanks—more guns—more planes—more ships—more of everything which is needed to smash Hitlerism and bring Peace to all the family hearths of the world.

VICTORY BOND DRIVE COMMENCES MONDAY—

Jack Spratt could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean,
And so betwixt them both
They licked the platter clean.

It really does not matter whether you are a Victory Bond man or a Savings Certificate man, the cold facts are that both plans for raising money are necessary for the successful prosecution of Canada's war effort. Victory bond people and Savings Certificate people are all loyal Canadians trying with their dollars, few or many, to bring world order out of world chaos.

On Monday, February 16th, the second Canadian Victory Loan will get under way and the Tofield area is being asked to raise the same amount as before, $24,000.00. Practically the same organization is conducting this drive as conducted the last with Geo. Brace, chairman and A. J. H. McCauley, unit organizer. Every inducement has been made to spread the bond issue over the entire Canadian population. Bonds go as high as $5000.00 and run as low as $50.00 and even these may be bought on the installment plan. There are Victory bonds for every purse.

AN ILLUSION DISPELLED—

QUITE RECENTLY, when approached for a donation to the Red Cross, a good citizen explained he was not in sympathy, "when they paid those women for working Wednesday and Saturday afternoons." He was referring to the sewing being done by the Red Cross workers at the Tofield Town Hall on those afternoons. A person lacking definite knowledge to the contrary, is we suppose, to be excused for believing those workers attending the sewing meetings are paid, but it is not easy to believe that any reasonably well informed person could hold this belief for very long.

The truth of the matter is that this work, and much more that is done out in the country, is all voluntary and is often done at considerable personal sacrifice to those doing it. No person need hesitate to give a donation for fear that the money is not being wisely spent. Naturally, in as large an organization as the Red Cross, there must be a few full time paid workers, perhaps one or two in Edmonton and the same in Calgary, but there certainly are not any paid Red Cross workers in Tofield or in any one of the hundreds of small towns throughout Canada.

The work of the Red Cross is a work of service. If you could see a cold and hungry child who had been blasted out of its warm bed by a Nazi bomb, you would rush forward to help it. If you could see a wounded and exhausted soldier struggling toward shelter, you would eagerly reach out to pull him in. If you could see a semi-conscious half drowned human being dragged from the icy waters of the North Atlantic, you would willingly give him or her your coat so that his or her sufferings might be lessened. If from the clouds there dropped a dazed and bewildered airman you would give him succor. All of these things the Red Cross sees and all these acts of mercy it does. For every paid full time Red Cross worker, there are literally thousands of voluntary workers who gladly give of their time, talent and money so that these acts of mercy may continue. Individually we cannot all be in a war zone, a bombed area, on the Atlantic or in the skies, but we can all individually contribute our small portion so that those Red Cross workers who are there may have those things necessary to relieve suffering and distress no matter where it occurs.

COUNCILLOR SWABEY—

THE NEWS of the passing of Mr. D. R. Swabey was, we feel sure, received by his many friends with much regret and considerable shock. Long before Christmas we had learned that Mr. Swabey was in the hospital but at that time it was expected he would recover and carry on his duties as usual. Lacking further definite information, we, at least, assumed he was home re-cuperating and was pained and shocked to hear of his passing.

During the past few years we have attended almost every meeting of the Municipal District of Cornhill Council as newspaper reporter and have seen Councillor Swabey, with the others, trying to find a solution to many a difficult problem. In council deliberations, kindness toward his fellowmen and a real desire to help the "underdog," was constantly evident in Councillor Swabey's reasoning. We know of no better tribute to a man than to remember that when passing through life he paused in his own endeavors to lend a helping hand to those situated less fortunately than he. Such a man was Mr. D. R. Swabey.

The Old Timer is of the opinion that more people will get to know what the mountain folks meant by "long sweetenin' "before many months.

LINDBROOK

A "wedding shower" was given by Mrs. F. Shupe, at her home here, last Thursday afternoon in honor of our latest bride, Mrs. Leslie Bailey, nee Miss C. Robinson. Nearly all the bride's friends, that is, lady friends, attended and she was the recipient of many dainty and useful presents, the shower being a miscellaneous one, there was quite a variety of presents. Games, etc., were played during the afternoon and later a dainty lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. F. Shupe.

On Friday evening a combination Whist and Bridge drive was given by the ladies of the L.C.C. in the school, "by kind permission of the O.C." Many of the members of the W.S.B.D. club attended this party, so that made quite a large turnout. There being 10 tables of whist and 8 of bridge in play. Court whist was the style the whist players played, the bridge players, well, each had their own style, generally different from their partner's style. Anyhow, all enjoyed themselves, also the lunch put up by the club at the finish.

The free movie put on by the National Film Board, Dominion Government at the hall last Saturday night, was very, very sparsley attended, in fact, made those who did attend, ashamed of the response our district made to this generous offer. Probably a lot of this was due to it being Saturday night, some being up late the night before, some following their usual Saturday night trip to town, and also the fact that it had not been well enough advertised. The machine is of the latest type has sound effects, also technicolor, just the same as any town movie. The size is the same and the pictures are clear and large, and very interesting and educational. There also was a Disney film for the kiddies (and grown ups too). It is well worth seeing and we sincerely hope that owing to the poor attendance shown, that the Government won't cut us off the list of places where these are to be shown. There is to be one a month, and the next is March 7th so far as we know. Anyway, look for the ads, and we will keep reminding you, so turn out next time in force to make up for this showing. It's well worth it, and we are sure that you will all enjoy same.

The people of Lindbrook were saddened to hear of the death of their old friend "Bob" Swabey of Minbeth. Deceased was well known to many here and liked by all who knew him. We extend our deepest sympathy to Mrs. D. R. Swabey and family in their sad loss of husband and father.

A.M.A. WILL ISSUE 100,000 NEW MAPS

More than 100,000 strip maps will be issued shortly by the Alberta Motor Association. These maps have been improved from year to year and now are welcomed by motorists who look forward to the distribution.

The maps contain a great deal of valuable information dealing with highway routes, garages and service stations and showing the official appointments of the A.M.A., hotels, lake resorts and other data eagerly sought by the motor visitor.

The maps are available at all official appointments of the A.M.A. in addition to being made available at branches of the organization at Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge

Prior to the maps being prepared, they are carefully revised by officials to make certain that they are up to date and accurate in every particular. They are checked with the latest information on highways as issued by the public works department of the province.

Consequently, the Alberta strip map is one of the most dependable of the kind issued in the country and serves a useful purpose in making it easier for the motor tourist who may be a stranger here to follow the highway he desires to travel and to see the scenic spots he has set his heart on seeing

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

Notwithstanding all outward signs in the nation's capital indicating that politics, politics, and more politics with no little oratory, are coming out of the latest doings in the wartime session, yet a well-informed observer along Parliament Hill can report at this momentous time that behind the scenes there is now developing in Ottawa a united, not divided, political front to co-operate in true statesmanship manner for the bigger objectives or larger aims to be achieved by this warring nation than are contained in the usual politician's handbook. This is a late date for the beginning of a thing so fundamental in wartime. However, it can also be reported at the same time that the public anxiety and private deprivations of this war have only begun for the man in the street, too, and they are going to be unusual and serious with the result that everyone will have to put an end for the duration of this war to ideas of carrying on their way of life as usual, business as usual, profits as usual, politics as usual, and oratory as usual

That, as everyone in Canada, will realise, is news, no matter from what strange and unaccustomed source it may spring

There is something very good or very bad in the Canadian way of parliamentary life now developing out of this backstage trend or desire to end bitter political struggles and to bring together certain political factors under unified and competent leadership, though those who follow closely the course of such developments in Ottawa fear that it may be bedevilled or delayed by temporary unfortunate splits within some political ranks. But it is coming definitely, even if somewhat delayed.

In the midst of the greatest war in world history, when human life is being destroyed wholesale, the tip-off is that lawmakers or leaders of all political parties in Ottawa are more in actual agreement on "two essential and basic principals" for solving Canada's war problems than may be appearing on the surface of heated debates in face of the fact that in the spread to cover everything in this session the political blanket is somewhat torn

One basic principle is that political dictatorship cannot be put over on this nation with its background of a long struggle for constitutional liberty that goes back several centuries and that is the cultural inheritance of the people, this being something that in fact was dead in other lands or it had never time enough really to live While desperate factions or radical politicians may try to manipulate by sheer dogmatism that tends to divide people, to drive them to extremes, to force sensible men to take sides on issues which are at best only half true, and to cause many persons to lose their judgements yet they represent a minority, not the nation or masses In other words political dictatorship in Ottawa is impossible

The other basic principle is that since Canada is engaged in this war as a full partner of the democracies and their allies it is bound to make decisive changes in the organism of this young and growing country as history has shown again and again

It is only necessary to recall what happened in Canada after the last World War As a direct result of Canada accepting full responsibilities in that terrible war and giving quite freely in men money and other resources, this country gained constitutional, political and economic independence She became a nation among the nations of the world

Although that World War No 1 cost Canada an average of $300,000,-000 and 30,000 men for each year of the five years of struggle, yet she came out of that war a more united, a stronger people spiritually and a much wealthier nation economically The United States and Great Britain invested in Canada over two billion dollars and they did it for the purposes of producing necessities of war, though in actuality this created in Canada a great economic structure in excess of the requirements of the population in this country at that time But when the war was over Canada did not abandon this giant structure and she did not return to obscurity as a manufacturing and exporting nation of industrial products Instead she continued on the path started in that World War and she competed for world markets with all other manufacturing nations of the globe, succeeding in a remarkable manner She became one of the few money-lending nations of the world She produced wealth of almost unbelievable amounts for export. Without any worthwhile position amongst the manufacturing nations of the world in 1914, she was in fifth position in this respect in 1928 Though her strength before that struggle was concentrated in primary productions, such as agriculture, forestry and mining, yet secondary productions rose to great heights. She developed economically all along the line by using her natural resources, such as those obtained from her fisheries, mines, forests, water power, and farm lands, in a manner to keep pace with the phenomenal technological progress of the times. In simple language, Canada really found herself in world affairs in the last World war by accepting the full responsibilities of a nation amongst nations in the democratic orbit Just as in the lives of individuals, benefits amongst nations cannot be obtained by any nation which avoids or tries to avoid its duty or accepting its full responsibility

Every war must end and every war must have a post-war period. Canada's lawmakers and leaders along Parliament Hill know it Therefore, there is not the slightest doubt about the effects of this second basic principle influencing or inducing the solutions of Canada's war problems.

Beneath the surface of these waves of oratory, political parties in this session are more in agreement on the "two essential and basic principles" for solving this nation's war problems than they care to admit openly for various reasons

The man in the street throughout Canada may not realize it, but a veteran observer along Parliament Hill can detect it current tax on 24 school districts as shown as $19,847 77. This was the last year of the old system. The 1941 current school tax is shown as $22,292 47, an increase of $3444 70 However, two schools, Franklin and Kingman, listed as Reporting schools in the 1937 statement are included in the Divisional board in the 1941 statement This makes it difficult to arrive at an exact increase because information required to do this does not appear in M D of Cornhill's 1937 statement but in the 1937 statements of Franklin and Kingman [illegible]

† — † — †

We can, however come fairly close to the percentage of increase by working it this way Estimating the [illegible] tax of Franklin and Kingman as $1444 70, which, we believe, is a fair estimate, we have an even $2000 00 increase To make the 1937 and 1941 school current tax figures correspond, we have to add the $1444 70 to $19,847 77. This gives us $22,292 47 and $2000.00 is approximately 10 per cent of this figure. So in terms of percentage, school taxes in the districts within Cornhill Municipal District have increased 10 per cent since 1937

† — † — †

Actually we believe the 10 per cent school tax increase to be a very conservative one There are other factors that enter into the question One of these is the drop in the school taxes trust account of over $10,000 . 00 already mentioned, and the other is the difference between the amount of school tax arrears as at December 31st, 1937 and as at December 31st, 1941 This amounts to $3442 93 less in 1941 than in 1937 In other words, this, counting the $10,000 above mentioned, makes between 13 and 14 thousand dollars paid out in requisitions since 1937 over and above the monies received from current tax levies. Strangely enough, the average mill rate of the 24 school districts included in the 1937 Cornhill statement is exactly the same as the average mill rate of the four divisional boards listed in the 1941 Cornhill statement, namely 12½ mills.

† — † — †

The above is not written with the idea of comparing one school district system against the other, but solely to give information as to the trend school taxation has taken in the last few years. If the school children are better educated and better housed, the increase is probably justified.

IT WAS HIGH WATER

A travelling salesman, caught in a torrential downpour, stopped overnight at a farmer's house. Next morning, looking out at the flood, he saw a derby hat floating slowly to and fro in front of the house. Fearing that someone may have drowned, he called to the farmer's daughter, "Look at that hat."

"Oh," said the girl, "that must be Grandpa. He allowed yesterday that in spite of hell or high water he was going to mow the grass today."

IN APPRECIATION OF THE MANY KINDNESSES [illegible]

Editor's Note: The following letter from the family of the late Ruth Cash will be read, we feel sure, with earnestness and understanding

To the friends and acquaintances from Tofield who have come to our aid at this time

Not one kindly thought, or word, or deed has gone unappreciated, and we take this way of making sure that not one shall go unacknowledged.

It seems, at such times, that one's senses are heightened to more surely detect and feel the world of friendliness and fellowship that lies about The goodness, the kindness, the comrade-like feeling and interest have been a solid support More than this, there is the confidence and assurance that she, and all the dear ones who pass over, are " . . . faring on, as dear in the love of There as the love of Here . . . She is not dead, she is just away "

Life is full of these, and all solemn and lofty events that are common to all Indeed, in these days, the whole world is shaken with stress and anguish There is so much to do and to bear, that no one should selfishly lose himself in his own grief or burdens

For the present, as we ponder all these things from personal grief to world grief, there can be no worthier aims for us all than to ". . . address ourselves to our task . . . in good heart and sober confidence, resolved that we shall stand by one another . . . and do our duty, God helping us, to the end "

Knowing that no one can suffer grief, or harm, or be in need, without ill to all, let us hope and pray and strive for a livelier sense and recognition of the unity of mankind. We are truly, and inescapably brethren, and members of one family Yet slowly and painfully, by disasters and calamities, do we come to understand this sublime fact and all that it involves

We send this out with a feeling that somehow we are discharging an obligation to the departed and to the public, within the sphere of our acquaintance.

WARBLES NOW APPEARING

Reports have reached the Department of Agriculture that the lumps caused by the grub of the warble fly are now appearing on the backs of cattle It is unusual for these grubs to appear so early in the year, but it is believed the extremely mild weather may have hastened the "ripening "

Now is the time to treat these cattle to destroy the warble grubs. The procedure is simple and inexpensive

1 When the lumps are conspicuous brush the backs of infested cattle to remove the scab thus opening the breathing hole.

2. Apply a wash containing derris powder, brushing it well into the animal's back.

3 After an interval of 28 days repeat the treatment.

Warble fly powder may be obtained at drug stores at small cost. The saving which may be made in higher quality beef, undamaged hides, higher milk production, and better general condition of cattle will repay many times over the cost of treatment.

Warble flies can be almost entirely destroyed in a district through a community campaign and treatment of individual herds will do much to get rid of this pest.

CHECK EQUIPMENT NOW AND SAVE TIME LATER

Many farmers have adopted the practice of repairing their equipment during the winter months. This is particularly desirable now when a shortage of labour is possible in some districts.

A break down during the busy spring season is not unavoidable but the chances of it occurring are least when equipment has been thoroughly repaired. A shortage of repairs may cause delays too, which can be largely avoided if worn parts are replaced during winter months.

Where horses are used, the harness may be oiled and repaired so that time is not wasted in the summer. Worn belts, clevices, doubletrees and other hitch equipment are frequent causes of stops. These should be avoided in the new order of working for victory that farmers are adopting.

We are in receipt of a list of articles made by Alberta Red Cross workers and forwarded to eastern headquarters. More detailed mention of this will be made later.

Local Victory Loan Going Well

Commencing right on time the local Victory Loan Drive got off to a good start Monday morning. Bonds ranging in amounts from $1200.00 to $50 00 have been sold and as we write (Thursday morning) over a third of the total quota has been subscribed, $10650 00 is the exact figure

The first person to buy a bond locally was Jim Campbell, town policeman, and the largest amount in one bond was $1200 00

In order that those of the Mennonite faith throughout the dominion, might purchase bonds and still adhere to their beliefs, a special sticker was prepared by the Dominion Government to be paced on the bond. The wording on the sticker reads:

"The proceeds received from the sale of this bond will be used by the Government of Canada to finance expenditures to alleviate distress or human suffering due to war.

J. L. ILSLEY,
Minister of Finance.

One purchaser, Hans Christensen, walked into A. J. H. McCauley's office with almost $50.00 in quarters and purchased a bond. And so it goes, large, small, and in-between bonds are being purchased by persons of all means.

Active workers include A J H McCauley, unit organizer; Geo B. Bruce, committee chairman; Walter Bellamy, J. E. Stinson, J. Bracegirdle, Ingvald Ness, S. E. Beaman, W E Huston, canvassers.

Mrs. T. W. Ferguson underwent an operation last week at Lamont hospital.

Douglas Murray was home from school three days last week due to a broken arm, which he suffered when he fell while skating. Misfortune has dogged Douglas' heels the last month or two—we wondered what Friday the 13th would do to him. However, he had no bad luck last Friday so we hope the jinx was broken when the arm was.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Carl Neimitz, a daughter. Congratulations.

Miss Craig spent the week end with her folks at Viking.

The news announcers and newspapers have mentioned lately the horrible plight of the gallant Greeks, who are now suffering a terrible famine. Everyone of us a year ago was remarking on their brave stand against overwhelming odds, but words of praise do not lessen their suffering one iota. If we could see them there isn't one of us but would share his last crust to alleviate their sufferings—as it is we are miles away and the only way to help as the news casters said, is through the Red Cross. Britain has made arrangements with the Turkish Red Cross to send a shipment of food to Greece and is endeavoring to have such shipments continued as often as possible. So—send in your donation to the Red Cross, no matter how small, it will be very acceptable, and a dollar or more makes you a member of this fine organization. This war has now struck at so many places, and the Red Cross stands by, ready to help innocent victims of war with medical supplies, food and clothing. Many of you are working for the Red Cross but they need your money so that they can supply drugs, etc. In town, Mr. A. E. Allan, Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. E. Rogers will be glad to accept your donation, and in the country points, Mrs. Brucegirdle, Mrs. J. B. Warner and Mrs. Mel Wood will take it. Don't wait to be asked—it is needed now.

And don't forget War Workers' Club meets at Mrs. R. H. Phillips on February 26.

LINDBROOK

The visit of the McCauley troupe to the Lindbrook Hall last Tuesday night, Feb. 10th, was a gala night for this district. The Hall was crowded, and outside it looked like a city parking lot. In fact, some who wanted to go home after the show had to wait until the dance was finished, for the simple reason that it was impossible to get their cars out. We won't attempt to describe the show, it was swell, and went over well, everyone was pleased with it, and our thanks are due to the troupe for the entertainment given. They deserve great credit for their gift of time and talent to their cause, which is, as you know, to raise funds for the Queen's Canadian Fund for Bomb Victims in Britain. We wish them every success in all future ventures. The secretary of our Hall Board, Mr. Robt. Smith, turned over the sum of $130.50 from sale of tickets and the sum of $11.20 was derived from sale of quilt tickets, making a total of $141.70 from this concert. From this was deducted 12 dollars for bus expenses, 12 dollars paid to orchestra that played for the dance that followed, making a total of $117.70 from here. The Hall board, assisted by the ladies of the L.C.C. provided coffee and lunch, quite a proposition, considering the size of the crowd. After supper the group orchestra played for a dance [illegible] kept up till 2 or 3 a.m., after which all dispersed voting it a good show and dance, and hoping that they may have the pleasure again in the near future.

A smoker was held at the Hall last Saturday night in honor of Mr. Burke, formerly of the Crown Lumber Co., Tofield, who is moving to Edmonton shortly. Mr. Burke is well known and having supplied the Hall Board with their lumber requirements for the building, it is only fitting that a party composed of the men who worked on the building and the representative of the Lumber Co. should get together for an enjoyable evening, and it surely was. So here's the best of luck! Mr. Burke, and may you have every success in your new position, from your friends in Lindbrook.

Mrs. W. C. Lancaster visited Edmonton over the week end, where she visited with Mrs. D. McCaw, former resident here. She returned Monday evening.

HASTINGS LAKE

Quite a number from this vicinity attended the concert held at Lindbrook Hall on February 10th. All report a good time. A sleigh containing some people had a spill near the Lindbrook store. The sleigh pole came off and the sleigh tipped over, fortunately no one was hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Swanbey were supper guests at the home of Mr. A. [illegible] Hoover on Friday evening.

Miss Ella Landberg left last Friday for Camrose. It is expected she will stay a while with her aunt, Mrs. W. [illegible] and her sister, Miss Clara Landberg.

Mrs. I. Beiecore of St. Albert spent a one-day visit with Mrs. P. Donald last week end.

Melvin [illegible] left for the city last Thursday with the intention of joining the army, but had to return [illegible] proof of age. He left again Saturday hoping that he would pass his medical.

Mr. Bill Riske and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Riske motored to the city last week end.

The Wenzel truck brought out a tractor for Bill Riske to the farm of Fred Riske on Monday. It won't be long now before we'll hear the tractor humming, the saw buzzing and see Sam working.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

All farmers are waiting anxiously to hear the decision of the Government about an increased price for wheat, and about the quantity of wheat that farmers may deliver from the forthcoming crop at that increased price. Some of the fears about a burdensome surplus of wheat that could not be stored or sold, which were expressed by many persons a year ago, fortunately have not materialized. These fears were first that there would be insufficient storage space to hold the grain from the 1941 crop:—that is why the delivery quota allotted to farmers was set at a comparatively low figure—then that only a comparatively small amount of wheat could be sold overseas and only at an extremely low price. Today there is a great deal more storage space available for this coming crop than anyone thought possible, and Canada this present year will export much more wheat than was considered could be done, and now the open market price is increasing. (The price of wheat on U.S.A. markets has increased considerably.)

The Government, therefore, in fairness to our farmers should this year pay a considerably higher price for wheat, and in addition can accept much more wheat than it did last year without crowding available storage space.

SWEET CAPORAL
"THE PUREST FORM IN WHICH TOBACCO CAN BE SMOKED."

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

Without being aggressive or combative but strictly realistic, this veteran observer must report that by no stretch of the imagination can he recall another period along Parliament Hill when so much difficulty was encountered by a Government in order to discover some means of adjustment of a national problem than that being endured right now by the King Government in regard to conscription for overseas service. Although everyone in Canada is either fighting or working for the same objective in this war and it should not be difficult to find a common denominator in a political sense, yet well-informed sources in the capital know that the King Government's methods in attempting to affect this wartime adjustment in its own manner have not decreased difficulties but rather increased them in toto, though behind the scenes there are some reasons to justify these manoeuvres on the part of the King Government. Nevertheless, the pressure both in and out of Parliament is steadily increasing for and against compulsory service for overseas and the impending flood threatens national unity at a time when every part of the country is essential to the whole war effort of Canada.

Of course, it is no secret why the King Government has acted in this manner in regard to conscription for overseas service and it is supposed to be on account of the Province of Quebec. The Government might have taken an easier way out of its difficulty by adopting the measures necessary for its enactment, but that would not have been consistent. The Government could not ignore certain facts, though unfortunately it is often recognized along Parliament Hill that the man-in-the-street throughout Canada does not know the real cause or source of the opinion in the Province of Quebec which has influenced the present Government's policies.

In the province of Quebec, there has been a strong opinion for many years that "Imperialism" must be looked down upon with "suspicion." For years and years, the masses have been told again and again by politicians and demagogues, who desired to sway or to influence the people by plausible words in order to obtain power for themselves or their party, that "Imperialism" was not good for the French-Canadian. It created a virtual wall between Quebec and the rest of Canada and this wall reached great heights from the time that Henri Bourassa rose in Parliament one day to protest strongly against the sending of a Canadian expeditionary force to fight in the Boer War in South Africa. That happened a long time ago, but from that event onwards there has been a continuous agitation of a so-called "nationalist" movement which emphasized the rights or claims of Canadians in respect to wars involving the Motherland. In the last World War No. 1, two bad errors were made that aggravated the situation. First in the beginning of 1916, the late Premier Sir Robert Borden gave a pledge not unlike that of Premier Mackenzie King in this war. He had promised that conscription for overseas service would not be made without consulting the people, but a year later it was established. Second, the method of enforcing conscription in the Province of Quebec was very provocative of anger on the part of the French-Canadians, this being a major mistake of strategy which has often been acknowledged by historians. The bitterness and wrath of that occasion never died in the Province of Quebec. They have never forgotten the insults and abuses.

In this war, the same misunderstanding and artifices are being employed by politicians outside of the Province of Quebec. They refuse or they do not know how to understand the mentality and feeling of the people of that old Province. They have been directly responsible for encouraging the growth or revival of this "nationalist" movement in that Province. Now, two members of the House of Commons, Lacroix and Lacombe, have come out in the open favouring the "nationalist" movement, though it must be emphasized that they are not looked upon seriously, nor is the Government responsible for their actions or speeches. In fact, Lacombe is known as an opponent of the Mackenzie King Government, and in the last general elections, the King Government put a candidate in the field to oppose him. Lacroix is also opposed to the ideals of the King Government. But, most important of all, both of these men are not properly speaking or acting for the masses of the Province of Quebec in face of their efforts. The people of that Province are not influenced by these men to any marked degree as yet. So far they have a very small following.

Of course, the masses of Quebec are opposed to compulsory overseas service at this time because certain politicians and demagogues have made it their business to keep alive certain old, antiquated, and out-of-date ideas for reasons best known to themselves. They do not allow memories to fade away. But statesmen in that Province and elsewhere have recognized that education and strategic h[illegible] of the problem could [illegible]. They believed that the co[illegible] were not those of an old, chronic and wasting invalid, but rather growing pains of a temporary and acute nature. This was the motive and strategy of the King Government from the day that war was declared in September 1939. The King Government did not want that national unity should suffer from any drastic or non-strategic action since in a war emergency a divided nation was an impingent belligerent force at a crucial time when it must be assertive, definite, realistic, confident and united. Moreover, from the opening day of this war the need of conscription for overseas service has been argued not by the professional generals or others qualified to judge a nation's military requirements in specific situations but the main contention has been offered by the more than "eleven million generals" throughout the land, known individually as the man-in-the-street. Indeed, it has been said that most of the people do not even know much about conscription itself, its history or origin.

Conscription came into existence as a result of the French Revolution when the old Royalist Army of France was put aside. This brought about a problem of national defence. The convention of 1792 decided upon a compromise, with combatant units to be composed of volunteers only and with all single men between 18 and 40 years to be placed in reserve "citizen militia". The rest of the male population formed a National Guard for home defence. After eight months of this system, France had to abandon it because it was a complete failure. Out of 169 combatant battalions required by the Republic of France, only sixty were raised. The Convention decided to create a compulsory military force of 500,000 men, but this failed because the population was against it and one province, Vendee, rose in revolt against the plan. However, the Government moderated the law, educated the people, applied strategic tactics, and raised easily a conscript army of not 500,000 but 770,000 men. In other words, the lesson of Old France is a lesson for New France. While compulsion and free will do not mix well in a country like Canada for raising men for the armed forces, causing dissonance in national harmony, yet the principle of conscription need not be abandoned, though it must be brought into existence by strategy and means not common amongst Canada's politicians but an essential requirement amongst true statesmen. This is the common denominator for adjusting this nation's greatest and most delicate national problem in this war, and well-informed sources along Parliament Hill know it.

GALLINGER SELLS THREE YOUNG BULLS

Charles D. McDougall, Champion, visited the Killearn Farms of Claude Gallinger last week in search of a new herd sire and found one to his liking in Killearn Paymaster 3rd. This is a beautiful low set dark roan calf that will be a year old soon. His sire is Peter of Killearn, by Balmuchy Jasper, by Balmuchy Landlord, grand champion American Royal. His dam is the grand breeding cow Lovely Minnie 7th, that was [illegible]ior and grand champion C.N.E. [illegible] and junior champion Toronto Royal the same year.

Breeders will watch the development of this calf in the good hands of Charlie McDougall and he should develop into a good sire.

L. W. Wilson of Daphne, Sask., was at Killearn last week and was so well pleased with the young bull Old Bar Messenger that he had him shipped over from Tofield to Daphne on Monday.

This dark red-roan March calf is sired by Killearn Royal Banker (present herd sire in the J. L. Walters Clive herd) and he is sired by Danny Boy imp., whose grand sire, Royal Banker, sold in the Argentine for a near record price. His dam, Roan Lady 5th, bred by F. M. Rothrock, Spokane, was sired by Hercules Cupbearer, by the $4000 bull Gainford Diamond, by imp. Gainford Marquis.

Sinclair Bros. of Rumsey picked up another March calf, Killearn Perfection 2nd, also sired by Peter of Killearn. His dam, sired by Danny Boy 2nd, is from Bruce Augusta cow Augusta 21st and she is the dam of the two good breeding bulls Danny's August Lad and Danny's Augusta Lad 2nd, herd sires for W. L. McCollister, Dalroy, and Yellowlees Bros., Crossfield, respectively.

This is a nice straight dark red calf that looks like making a real herd sire, following a grandson of Danny Boy imp. in the Sinclair herd.

High School Students' Carnival Great Success

The ominous "Friday the 13th" seemed to be proven quite the contrary for the Tofield High School Students' Union, as it was on that date that their successful Ice Carnival came to pass.

This carnival took the place of the annual concert which the students have endeavored to put on each winter for the past 3 years.

The programme of the evening included skating to music, dress competitions, followed by a moccasin pow wow.

The Carnival Queen, Miss Joyce Innes, was crowned, Joe Kallal officiating.

One special feature of the programme was the bullfight, a hilarious afair which included the famous Ferdinand and a noteworthy [illegible]

MR AND [illegible] OF HONOR AT DANCE

A dance held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Burke, put on by the young people of Tofield, was held last Thursday evening in the Lindbrook Hall. Between fifty and sixty friends of "the Burkes" gathered at the hall and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Lunch comprising of hot dogs and coffee was served after which Harold Schultz, in a very capable manner, presented Mr. and Mrs. Burke with a lovely picture of "The Blue Boy." Mr. Burke on behalf of his wife and himself, thanked those present, stressing that Edmonton and Tofield were not very far apart, and that their new home would always have a welcome for their friends from Tofield. The gathering then joined hands and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and "Auld Lang Syne," followed with three lusty cheers. Dancing continued after which everyone departed for their homes, wishing Mr and Mrs. Burke the best in their new home.

Cornhill Annual Ratepayers' Meeting Well Attended

A good turn out of ratepayers was present at the Annual Ratepayers' Meeting of Cornhill M.D. held at the Tofield Curling rink on Saturday afternoon last.

Returning officer Dodds called the meeting to order and asked for nominations for chairman.

Mr. Chas. Morden and Mrs. Chas. Oulton were nominated as chairman but Mr. Oulton withdrew and Mr. Morden occupied the chair. W Worton was appointed as secretary.

The minutes of last year's annual meeting were read Considerable discussion centred around a resolution passed at that meeting regarding discount for payment of taxes, Messrs. Oulton, Spilsted, Kortzman, Foreman and some others taking part. Finally it was moved by Geo. A. Clark and seconded by M. B. Ness that the discussion on this subject cease —Carried

Mr. I. Ness asked for information regarding petitions circulated for a tubercular restricted area. He was informed that some petitions had been taken out both last year and the year before that Some had been returned to the office. Throughout the M D. as a whole the required 66 per cent sign-up was not obtained, though there may have been this percentage on some of the petitions. Mr. Morden told of his own experience which entailed the loss of quite a number of cattle but he believed the plan to be a good one as it was better to lose a cow than a child.

It was moved by Mr. I. Ness, seconded by Mr. Swabey, that the councillors take hold of this problem and get helpers to circulate the petitions.

Mr. Dodds speaking to the motion said bovine tuberculosis was a serious thing

Mr Clark said in the last test in Strathcona M.D. only two cows re-acted They were in a restricted area.

Councillors Coombes and Anderson said they had been around with petitions twice but were willing to do what they could.

A showing of hands indicated that the majority of those present were in favor of a bovine tubercular restricted area.

The above discussion arose out of the reading of the minutes.

Moved by Mr. M. B. Ness, seconded by Mr. Swabey, that minutes be adopted as read.

General discussion centred around the remuneration of the secretary-treasurer, but after a few heated remarks, Mr. Moen said he for one, was satisfied with the secretary's work and appreciated his work in connection with the Wheat Acreage Reduction plan This expression found favor with the majority of those present, applause resulting.

The new enlarged M.D.'s unit then came in for some attention. Except for the information that M.D. units were to be enlarged, there was no definite information given.

It was moved by Mr. I. Ness, seconded by Mr. M. B. Ness, that this meeting go on record as not being in favor of the enlarged M.D. units at this time.

Mr. Dodds spoke in favor of the change using the enlarged school districts as an illustration.

Mr. M. B. Ness was not in favor and said he knew of no place where the people were in favor of it.

Mr Geo. Clark pointed out that while the school districts were enlarged, the local school boards still functioned and local interest was sustained. There was no similar set up in the enlarged M.D. plan.

Mr. I. Ness [illegible] the poorer districts would benefit at the expense of the richer ones.

Mr. Murray was of the opinion the meeting was not in a position to vote upon it. The heaviest work of present councillors is in connection with roads and the collection of taxes The government, he said, wanted to put in a provincial road system and they can do it better when there is a continuity of road building. One M.D.'s roads might be good and the next M D.'s bad.

Councillor Anderson said the Municipal District's convention voted 200 to 1 against the proposed changes

Mr. Morton said that instead of passing the resolution we should see to it when the change was made we were in the right district.

It was moved by Mr. Murray and seconded by Mr. Bruce that motion be tabled until next annual meeting. After considerable discussion as to whether this was an amendment or a new motion it was accepted as a new motion and put to the vote. The result was 23 in favor of Mr. Murray's motion and 17 against.

Mr Murray spoke regarding [illegible]taining a doctor. He believed we should try and get one.

Mr. A. Anderson said if there is anything that should be done [illegible]garding this we should do it.

Mr. Dodds mentioned that in Division 3 there was only one polling place and settlement had now made it wise to have two. Mr. O. Johnson was suggested deputy returning officer at Hastings Lake school and Mr. Barnhard was suggested deputy returning officer at Spilsted school.

Nominations for Councillors were: Div. 3—Geo. A. Clark, Herbert Spilsted, J. W. Swabey.

Div. 4— Jack Blake, Wellington Glenn, F. Kortzman

Div. 5— Chester Coombes, Chas. M. Oulton.

After nominations were received, meeting adjourned.

Election will be held on Saturday, February 28th, from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

BEHIND THE [illegible]
By A.B.C.

Now the Bonspiel is over, someone thought up the bright idea of having another little do. They call it the Coffee and Jam event. They also are using the Hat trick in this event, that is, they pull them out of the Hat like rabbits. They are all scared to look how they are drawn. This is a knock-out in two sections (for men only). The rinks look like this:

Skip, Stinson, 3rd, Bonnie, 2nd, Innes, Lead, Rasmussen.
Skip, Yakabuski, 3rd, Sobey, 2nd, Glover, Lead, Gauthier.
Skip, Currie, 3rd, McClymont, 2nd, Dodds, Lead, Patterson.
Skip, Imler, 3rd, Chandler, 2nd, Hill, Lead, McGinitie.
Skip, Patterson, 3rd, Warner, 2nd, Everitt, Lead, McCarthy.
Skip, McFadzean, 3rd, Kimmitt, 2nd, McIntosh, Lead, Stevens.
Skip, Coutts, 3rd, McDonnell, 2nd, Schmeltzer, Lead, Billman
Skip, Francis, 3rd, Clutterham, 2nd, Whyte, Lead, Boyles

And this time may the best team win. They never do

When the attempt is made to get rocks to the house, theories may or may not work. But at least they are more apt to do so if those applying them will only work too.

A lot of curlers knock 'em about. Others just knock, but for gosh sake, while knocking at the rink, please use hammer and nails

And now try this one on your piano In the bonspiel we rolled a total of 8748 rocks Each rock should have rolled some 120 feet. We had 64 curlers and if each curler followed his rocks what total mileage would be made. A celluloid sticker for the best answer.

And curlers a curling game is just like a Dog Fight. We usually are just interested in one side.

And this is the song of the skipper,
As he squats in the hack alone,
Oh, give me the strength to deliver
With weight and broom, this stone.

I have to work. I used to like to play, but now I'm getting old.

Optimists and Pessimists at the rink:
The President sees the sunshine,
The secretary sees the gloom,
The visitors see the starlight,
And the locals see no broom.
Some just see the beauty
Some see just the smudge,
The gallery sees the craftsman,
And the curlers see the drudge.
The kids, they see the progress,
The Old Boys see retreat,
The Club sees some achievement,
But I only see defeat

And some self-made curlers stop construction too soon They are still rough just above the shoulders.

This week's Brain Wave: Most of the Curlers think that we use a gallon of words to express a teaspoonful of thoughts.

LAKESHORE

"Oh, hadn't we the gaiety at Phil the Fluter's ball!" But it wasn't at Phil's—it was at T A Jones' on Friday night, and was in honor of Mr Jones sr of Clover Bar who has been visiting with his children and grandchildren in this district.

Sunday was a day for triple celebration, when Mr. Jones, Mrs. Leslie Jones and Glen all had a get-together on their birthdays. Mr. Jones is 82 but is so full of vim and vigor and vitality, that he is amazingly young.

Mrs. Bethel is another who had a birthday party when neighbors surprised her on Friday afternoon, bringing with them a gift, a delicious lunch and staying to play bridge Mrs. Bethel's looks and vigor belie her age, and each birthday seems to find her younger To her and to Mr. Jones we wish many more happy years and birthdays

While we are on the birthday theme, we would like to extend to Mrs. Englesham and to Elmer Geoglein our best birthday wishes. Last Monday a number of ladies from Lakeshore joined those of the McKenzie district to surprise Mrs. Englesham on her birthday, and on Saturday, several carloads of Lakeshore folk helped Mrs Geoglein to pull a dandy birthday surprise on Elmer.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. J B Warner had as supper guests, Mr and Mrs. Murray, Malcolm and Douglas, Mrs. T. E Seale and Miriam, and Mrs. Bethel. The occasion was Mr. and Mrs. Murray's wedding anniversary and Mrs. Warner surprised them after supper when she had in a number of friends for bridge. Our congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Murray and to Mrs. Warner also, for putting on what one might call an ideal wartime party. She served a delicious lunch, and didn't break the sugar ration regulations doing it, and for prizes gave war savings stamps. Prize winners were Mrs. Bethel and Mrs. John Wood, high, and Mrs. Abernethy and Douglas Murray, consolation.

LINDBROOK

We have had so far, a "winter of whimsical weather" blows hot and then blows cold, but so far it has been good. Now if only March will behave itself like its predecessors, we shall have no kick coming.

We hear that Mr Oulton our "goose man" kindly donated some pheasants of his raising to the Macauley Group on their recent visit here, to use or sell to swell their funds. Mr Oulton, as most of you know, raises pheasants and native geese, and also looks after wild birds that camp at his farm during the summer. That is how he derives the above title, a kind of an Albertan "Jack Miner."

We note that notices are out that the Dominion Government will show another movie at the Hall here on Saturday, March 7th at 8 p.m. This has sound effects too, also technicolor and is quite the equal of the city machines. There has been some talk of a dance to follow or some kind of social evening, but nothing definite on this can be learned to date. Anyway make an effort to attend, it is well worth it, and besides it is absolutely free, although a collection should be made to defray Hall expences, the Dominion Government sees to the rest. So don't forget, at 8 p.m., March 7th.

Don't forget to vote for your choice of Councillor for the next 3 years. And don't kick if you don't vote. You've lost the right to kick if you don't vote. Under Hitler you would and how! or else!!!

They also feel that, in these strenuous times, entertainment claims an important place in well-balanced living. Therein lies the reason behind the enormous bulk of entertaining features, stories, serials and contests the Family Herald provides.

By all who love fun, puzzling and the thrill of trying for worthwhile prizes (the top prize in the Crossword Puzzle Contest is $300.00) this new Family Herald Contest should most decidedly not be missed.

LEARN A TRADE

Young Albertans of military age who wish to learn a trade on entering the Army, which will be of great benefit to them on their return to civil life, and at the same time fit themselves to do a "specialized" job in the war effort, are provided with the opportunity under "The Army Tradesmen Training Plan", officials of Military District No. 13 announced today.

The courses are thorough in every respect and under the plan, the candidates learn a trade which would cost from $1,000.00 up to $1,500.00, depending on the course, in civilian life. Another feature is that if accepted for a course, they receive regular active service rates of pay and allowances while taking the course.

In these courses men are trained to become experts as artificers, blacksmiths, carpenters, clerks, coppersmiths, sheet metal workers, draughtsmen, electricians, engine artificers, fitters, mechanists, motor mechanics, tinsmiths, radio mechanics and wireless operators.

The courses, which are divided into four phases, last from six to eight months for the first three phases, after which comes the fourth phase, which is the military application of the particular trade.

When a recruit joins the Army, it is his privilege to state that he would like to learn a trade. He is interviewed by an officer of the Personnel Selection Board. During this interview the recruit is advised in detail about the courses, and an effort is made to determine the trade for which he is best suited.

The highest qualification a recruit requires is an earnest desire to learn a trade, together with a reasonable standard of education.

On enlisting and being selected for a trades course, the recruit is sent to a training centre for basic and advanced military training as the first phase. In the second phase of his training he is sent to the trades school in the district in which he enlisted. On graduating from there he enters the third phase which is advanced trades training at one of the Canadian Army Trades Schools in Eastern Canada.

From there he graduates to a unit where he puts his knowledge of his particular trade to practical application.

When the candidate graduates from the Canadian Army Trades School, he must have passed a trades test and he is then eligible to receive trades pay. This pay, ranging from 25 cents to 75 cents a day, according to the trade and qualifications of the tradesman, is in addition to the regular pay of rank and allowances paid in the Canadian Army.

At the present time there are Six Hundred men taking the second phase of trades training in M.D. 13, at trades schools in Calgary, Edmonton and Lethbridge.

BUFFALO GRASS AND GRAMA GRASS

The short grass of the southern prairies is often referred to as buffalo grass, but actually it is grama grass, for the true buffalo grass is not native to Western Canada, says H. J. Hargrave, superintendent of the Dominion Range E[illegible] Station at Manyberries, Alberta. However, grama grass is a fine short grass, very palatable and nutritious for all livestock. It makes its main growth when the June rains come. If these rains don't come, this grass does not head out to any great extent, and very little growth occurs.

Grama grass is easily identified by the flag-like, dark-colored head. It is hardy, drouth resistant, and is usually propagated by seeds. It cures on the stem and makes the best kind of winter grazing.

Mr. Hargrave brought a few plants of buffalo grass from Montana and planted them at the Manyberries station. In a short time the plants spread out and took complete possession of a plot of two square rods. Buffalo grass resembles grama grass but it has solid stems which contain more nutriment than the hollow stems of grama grass. It is propagated mainly by stolons, or creeping root stocks, as is the case with the common strawberry plant. One plant will rapidly cover a considerable area by spreading in this way. THE RATEPAYERS' ANNUAL MEETING—

JUDGING BY THE number present, the annual meeting of M.D. of Cornhill ratepayers can truthfully be said to be one of the best ever held. There must have been well over one hundred ratepayers present, and the discussions were lively and interesting. The criticism raised, while expressed harshly, was in connection with matters upon which any ratepayer had a right to speak.

During the discussion on the tax discount question it was quite obvious that the principle of the Aug. discount and the object of it was none too well understood, many believing that it made no difference at what time of the year a discount was extended to, the ratepayer paying his taxes and taking the discount would gain anyway. This is not so. The longer the discount period is extended, the less beneficial it is both to the ratepayer paying his taxes and taking advantage of the discount, and the collecting body. And if it was extended to the end of the year there would be no object in having a discount at all. It would benefit no one and would just make additional book-keeping work.

As matters now stand it is not correct to say the council allows ten per cent even on taxes paid in August. What actually happens is this: every municipality is compelled by law to allow five per cent discount on current taxes paid by December 15. What the Cornhill Council does is to allow an additional five per cent on taxes paid by a suitable summer date. The two discounts together have become erronously known as the ten per cent discount.

We readily see the ratepayers' point of view who complained about the discount. There IS a tendency to benefit the ratepayer with capital and penalize the ratepayer without capital, but under the present system of municipal financing, which as far as yearly revenues are concerned, is done on a hand to mouth basis, the mid-summer extra five per cent does bring in the money at a time when it is most needed. Under existing circumstances the money must be obtained and it is either a question of getting it from the ratepayers or borrowing it from the bank.

LET'S BE MORE ENTHUSIASTIC—

EVERY ONCE in a while, some of us look over the Canadian scene and experience a feeling that we are too tightly laced. Some of us are so bound up by decorum, ideas of dignity, by reserve, and by timidity, that we haven't breath enough to run, laugh or cheer.

Spontaneous enthusiasm does not spring from such tightly-bound people.

When Canadian boys are banded into a huge military force, they very quickly leave behind all the inhibitions of their civilian lives. One soldier doesn't hesitate to speak to another, even if he be a total stranger. Strangers and friends join in impromptu entertainment; and when their training period is over, they rush into battle with enthusiasm which has been engendered by a total lack of [illegible]

Great benefit would accrue to the Second Victory Loan Campaign if throughout all Canada people deliberately set out to acquire enthusiasm. If people would make the Victory Loan the subject of bright conversation in trains, buses and street cars; if people would unloosen their girdles of reserve at public meetings and in the movie shows and let out some hearty cheers; and if people would go out of their way to praise and applaud the hundreds of men and women who are giving up their own time to put the loan over, we might be surprised at the astonishing effect it would have on the final returns announced at Ottawa.

WELCOME—

THE SNOW LIES on the ground and it crunches when walked upon. There is some frost on the windows and the inside of the door is specked with white where frost is gleaming on nail heads. Curling, hockey and skiing are live sport subjects and the old stove still has to be "pushed" a little if one is to be comfortably warm. Outside the stars shine with a steely glitter from a half illuminated firmament and the contrast from outside chill to inside warmth feels reassuring.

The evening mail is in with its letters, circulars and papers, by and through which one learns of a world sorely distressed. And, as we have said, there is snow upon the ground and it still crunches. But what's this, as I live and breathe, a seed catalogue, and we give a little laugh, knowing full well that seed catalogues have arrived about this time of year for the past quarter century, yet never have arrived without bringing with them that delightful air of surprise.

It is still winter and the stars still appear made of blue steel, but somehow or other that big red lucious tomato on the catalogue cover softens the stars up some and the more one looks at its improved beauty, it is always "improved," the less irksome the winter has become. Frosted windows fade into insignificance compared to giant green peas, and the old stove is somewhat neglected as beautiful appearing carrots, beets, cabbage, cauliflower, corn and a host of other old favorites, almost literally dance before your eyes. Curling, hockey and skiing are forgotten in the admiration accorded the beautifully colored flowers and in no time at all—even within an evening—months have flown by and one stands amid green verdure under warm sunny skies. Truly the seed catalogue is a wonderful thing.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Edmonton, February 23— Alberta may soon witness the building of one of the world's strategic military highways, if current anticipations resolve into action. Arrival of a U.S. army commission to study the proposed route to Alaska through Edmonton, Grande Prairie, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson, Whitehorse was simultaneous with Washington reports that President Roosevelt had declared the road an immediate necessity and that negotiations had been opened with Ottawa.

V V V

For a considerable time the Alberta Government has been pressing the advantages of the Inland Route to Alaska as the cheapest, fastest, easiest to be maintained of all four proposed. Now that official interest is aroused, Hon. W. A. Fallow is assembling information to present in an intensified effort to have the potentialities of the Alberta route appreciated. The American commission now in Edmonton is under instructions to make recommendations to Washington.

V V V

Although criticism of certain details of the Alberta Budget has been made, the feeling among legislators was that Hon. Solon E. Low turned in a very satisfactory job of accounting last week when he presented his estimates for the coming year. Budgeting for a surplus, the Treasurer announced that there would be no new taxes and no increase in present taxes; that refunding operations may be completed; that increased appropriations for highway construction, public health, education will be met out of existing revenue. Announcement that Old Age Pensions will be increased by $5 a month brought satisfaction to the aged.

V V V

Without one dissenting voice, the Legislature gave unanimous approval to a resolution requesting the provincial government to extend the private debt moratorium to March 15. This was to "enable this Assembly to discuss the vital question of private debt and to consider the measures to be submitted to this Assembly to relieve honest debtors who, due to circumstances over which they have no control, have been unable to meet their obligations and face the danger of losing their homes."

V V V

Growth of the credit union movement in Alberta is evidenced in figures pertaining to operations and in new charters granted. Among these recently empowered to operate are East Coulee, a credit union of the community type serving residents of the East Coulee area, and the Northern Telephones union, serving employes of the Northern District, Alberta Government Telephones, with the exception of commission agents. The number of unions now operating nears the 50 mark. At the end of December, results of operations among 47 unions showed assets at $161,494.43, members, 4,564. Out of these assets loans totalling $528,591.13 have been made for provident and productive purposes.

V V V

In the Legislature, Hon. E. C. Manning has introduced amendments to the Credit Union Act which are designed to make smoother the operations of these savings and credit associations. All amendments are in line with similar changes found necessary and workable in provinces and states where the movement has gained by experience. Included are amendments to permit officers to dispose of shares, permit credit unions to change names, and to realize on securities held for loans, whether the securities are real or personal property.

Called by Dr. A. M. Bow, Deputy Minister of Health for the province, a meeting of representatives from 50 organizations discussed problems of nutrition in the Legislative Buildings Friday. Principle speaker was Dr. L. B. Pett, director of nutritional services for the federal health department. Women's organizations, dentists, nurses, doctors and others were invited and the meeting was open to all interested.

While tire and gasoline restrictions may affect the tourist trade to some extent along highway routes, it is anticipated by U.S. travel authorities that the forthcoming season [illegible]ing a revival of rail travel. Tourist officials of the provincial government are already receiving many enquiries regarding hunting possibilities in Alberta from potential U.S. visitors. Announcement that Alberta will organize a Game Festival October 1 to 15 has stimulated much interest throughout Canada and U.S. The Festival is unique in that all game —bird and furred— may be hunted during the period.

Alberta has 101 co-operatives active at the end of December, compared with 163 one year previous. In addition, there were 16 recently incorporated and about to commence operations, and 78 associations in process of organization. The number includes co-operatives in the retail, farm supply, live stock marketing, live stock feeding, dairy and poultry business. According to the co-operative branch, Department of Trade and Industry, there are actually 481 registered co-operatives under provincial legislation, but many of these are dissolved or inactive, while a few are alive, but inactive at the moment. Lack of loyalty and of education in co-operation are blamed for the failures.

WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

"Canadians may have to change their eating habits ere long, as a consequence of the war in the Pacific, which has lost Canada 100 million pounds of vegetable oils annually," says J. G. Taggart, food administrator for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

It isn't possible to make up this loss with animal fats, even if double the number of hogs were produced. Canada's highest production of lard has been 90 million pounds.

"Great Britain's loss is more than ten times the loss to Canada, much of it went into the production of oleomargarine," says Mr. Taggart, who foresees the probable rationing of fats and oils and an increased consumption of potatoes, bread and vegetables.

CANADIAN LEGION STRESSES PERIL REAFFIRMS NEED FOR TOTAL WAR

Ottawa, Feb 23—It is possible to lose this war this year, the sub-executive council of the Canadian Legion warned today, declaring that the disasters in the Far East, the threat to both the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards from enemy forces and the lack of allied success in other theatres of war have intensified the need for immediate adoption of a total war program.

Tens of thousands of citizens, and powerful and representative organizations have endorsed the Canadian Legion stand, and the Prime Minister himself has stated his belief in the necessity for total war and his intention of adopting it, yet no practical method has yet been submitted to parliament, the delegates stated.

They further clarified the manifesto issued to Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and certain members of his cabinet on October 21, 1941, by pointing out that compulsory military service outside of Canada is only one phase of the question. Not only are men needed to increase the Armed Forces, but there must be scientific selection of personnel for industry, on the farm, or wherever the war effort demands.

The sub-executive members declared that the present situation demands action, instead of endless discussion and warned that lack of having a concrete plan before Parliament to meet current perils may lead to incalculable disaster.

TRUE, TOO TRUE

The Negro sexton of a wealthy church had a stylish—and expensive—wife whose extravagance was creating an ever-widening gap between his income and his expenses. He decided to write the church officials and apply for an increase in salary. His letter, as a whole, was not a masterpiece, but its final sentence was. It read:

"It's mighty hard to keep a sealskin wife on a muskrat salary."

I.O.D.E. SECRETARIAL REPORT FOR 1941

Twelve regular monthly meetings were held in the Anglican Church Hall and three executive meetings at the home of the Regent.

At the September meeting special guests were Mrs. Marshall, Prov. Pres., Mrs. Morton, Prov. Treas., and Mrs. Jones, a Prov. Councillor. Mrs. Marshall addressed us and thanked us all for our effort in our Chapter. At the close of the meeting the Regent invited us to her home for tea and we also had the honor of having our Honorary Regent, Mrs. Tofield, present at the tea hour. Five new members were enrolled during the year making a membership of thirty-five.

Tofield was well represented at the opening ceremonies at the Provincial Annual meeting which was held at the Macdonald hotel, Edmonton, from April 1st to 3rd. Mrs. Clutterham as Regent was delegate and Mesdames Bruce, Coutts, A. E. Allan, James, Malcolm, Robinson and the Misses Ross and Edith Grace Robinson, as visitors. The Regent and Secretary also attended the Wednesday sessions.

During the year money has been raised by teas, sales of home cooking, garden produce, etc., a pirate bridge, whist drive, sale of candy and donations. On May 30th a Musical Recital was an added asset this year for which we say thank you to Mrs. Stinson.

The Poppy Campaign also proved successful, 200 small and 100 large ones were ordered and sold—also some left over from the previous year. In addition each member either donated or raised one dollar towards the Coronation Fund. This is one undertaking in our Province for our own boys and girls. (Six bursaries at $4.00 each are being given this year.) All members subscribe to the "Echoes" Magazine, a very useful, interesting and instructive magazine published quarterly. The members also knit, sew, make quilts, etc., as reported by the War Work convenor.

The Memorial Grounds were kept clean under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. We also had an Armistice Day Service at the Cenotaph, on Remembrance Day. The I.O.D.E. and the school children paraded. We assisted in the Canadian War Service Fund campaign. Special films were shown in the Curling rink the afternoon of Nov. 11th for the school children. I.O.D.E. members also attended.

Contributions have also been made to our local school, Picture fund, and Naval Hospitality Houses, Camp Library fund, Work in India, Milk for Britain fund, etc.

Presentations were made to Mrs. Foran on the occasion of her wedding, also to Mrs. Chevrenut, former treasurer, on leaving for Killam, and flowers given to the sick.

The Secretary wrote sixty-nine letters during the year. Many interesting letters have been received—also Christmas cards and thank you cards from our boys at home and Overseas. Also from parents whose children have been remembered at Christmas time, which makes us feel our work has been appreciated. We would gladly have done more had it been in our power to do so.

Thanking all who have co-operated and trusting we as a group will continue to go forward. Respectfully submitted,

Isabel Robinson, (Mrs. J. W.)
Sec., Dr. Tofield Chapter, I.O.D.E.

AT LAST WE REALIZE

Editorial From Country Gentleman, Philadelphia, Pa., February, 1942

The weeks of war behind us have given clearer shape to our common task. It is now apparent to everyone that the strength of the enemy in the Pacific was seriously underestimated. Moreover, the nation understands at last what it is fighting for and what it is fighting against.

In our issue of May, 1941, months before we were forced into the war, we said editorially: "It is no ordinary war. It is a contest to the death between two ways of life. One of them represents our inborn hopes and principles, the other almost everything contrary to them." Events both before and after have made this fact starkly evident. The acts of Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese have all been of the same pattern. They constitute a ruthless assault upon civilization by criminal elements in the world, motivated by greed for power and unrestrained by any morality.

Criminals have always had the initial advantage over the forces of law and order, because they know how and when they will strike and lay their plans accordingly. The Japanese, like the Nazis, had been girding their country for years for world aggression. They had built a powerful war machine in complete disregard of international treaties. We now know this to be true, but we didn't know it before the treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor.

The reverses suffered in the early months of this war are a tragic testimonial to the unrealistic attitude which we Americans have held toward the world at large. Because we are essentially kindly and decent folks, we have been reluctant to believe that the reverse could be true of other peoples. Moreover we have been complacent about our own safety, slow to understand that modern warfare has simply banished all possibility of national isolation.

Fortunately, we are awake at last to realities. In the end we will show the bandit nations of this earth how cleanly and powerfully American we really are. But first, as with England, there must be blood and sorrow and sacrifice.

Every community has its sons in the fighting forces, and some have already given their lives—in ways that kindle pride in the heart of every American. But an all-out war is a job for the entire population. The sacrifices required of those back of the lines have little glory, but they are no less real. Before us lie unremitting toil, self-denial, the payment of heavy taxes and the patient endurance of difficulty and deprival.

The response of this country since the shocking events of that first Sunday in December has been magnificent. It will continue to be so, for we realize now that there can be no security for any of us until the forces of evil at large in the world are crushed. —Reprinted for Distribution by Alberta Wheat Pool.

High School Bonspiel

All day Saturday the high school students held a bonspiel, and according to all reports had a very enjoyable time. We have no details of the games, but as a brief spectator, we saw plenty of enthusiasm and energy displayed. Principal McDonnell was wielding the broom with vigor, giving encouragement to his charges.

Daylight saving time makes the early morning dark and gloomy, but at least one quite young curling enthusiast feared naught the day the contest was to be held.

Gerald Hosler, the caretaker, had just arrived at the rink shortly after seven Saturday morning when hearing the door open, he looked around and saw a lad entering, bundled up and white frost from head to foot. Surprised, Gerald asked the lad why he had come so early, the lad replying, he had to walk in from the country and did not want to be late. The bonspiel commenced at 8:00 a.m.

Victory Loan Drive Forging Ahead Here

Wednesday night figures for the Tofield Territory in the 2nd Victory Loan Drive totalled a little over the $34,000.00 mark. This is 140 per cent of the original total of $24,000 for this district. Since the officials in Ottawa raised the grand total mark from $600,000,000 to $900,000,000, quotas all over the country were automatically raised 50 per cent. This of course, makes the Tofield district's new mark $36,000. Workers are going at it very steadily and by Saturday night it is expected the new increased quota will be reached.

The following telegram was received by the Mercury Wednesday and gives the national picture up to Tuesday night.

"Officials in charge of Canada's Second Victory Loan have raised their sights and are now driving toward a new mark of $900,000,000. The nominal and minimum goal of $600,000,000 was passed at midnight with announcement that total subscriptions to close of business day amounted to $615,298,750 from 722,727 subscribers. Appeal for over subscription was issued by Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance and G. W. Spinney, Chairman of the National War Finance Committee. Big new subscriptions made public the middle of the week included Noranda Mines Limited and Associated Companies for $4,500,000.

New Here's Something Really

On a hot summer's night, Mr. Frog often comes out of his nice cool slough to wander through the garden for a feed of insects. This is common enough, but a frog hopping around on the 19th of February is something else again. On this date, Mr. William Dunham found a live frog hopping around near his well. He picked it up and put it in a can and the teacher took it to the Woodlawn school for the children to see. It was probably one of the very few times in their lives that they will be able to say that they saw a live frog which was picked up from the outside in Alberta on February 19th.

KETCHAMOOT

Miss Marguerite Whillans, who is taking a business course at Alberta College in Edmonton, spent the week end at the parental home.

Mrs Albert Sutton underwent an operation at an Edmonton hospital Friday of last week. While it was of a serious nature, she is now progressing favorably.

Some class to Mr. Schultz, eh? He went to Peace river to visit his brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schultz, and when he returned home the first of the week he came by aeroplane to Edmonton.

Believe it or not! Stanley Sears has a cow that has presented him with four calves within a year.

The Pie Social put on at the school house under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid last Friday night was a decided success. Rev. Allan kindly acted as chairman and a splendid program was given. We wish to thank one and all who kindly donated their time and talent toward the entertainment, especially the ones outside the district. All numbers were good, as we haven't the programme we can not mention the different artists. Refreshments were served consisting of pie, ice cream, sandwiches and coffee. Proceeds of the evening amounted to $29.45, which will be used for church purposes.

Mrs. Lorne Lee is entertaining the Ladies' Aid this Wednesday, March 4. We were glad to welcome three new members last month, these were: Mrs Berrecloth, Mrs Chas. Sears, and Mrs Lorne Lee.

The many friends of Mrs. Oscar Barnes are sorry to hear of her serious illness. It will be remembered she fell and injured her knees, and just when she started to get around, further trouble set in. She has been confined to bed for several weeks and will be some time longer.

Misses Elizabeth Findley, Gladys Olson, Lilian Haugen and Messrs. William Dawson, Stanley Sears and Harold Schultz, attended the annual Vermilion College dance in Edmonton Friday night of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears and son Gary visited Mrs. Sears' home folks in Ryley Sunday.

Mrs. William Carter passed away at her home in Edmonton Tuesday, March 3, due to a heart attack. Mrs. Carter lived many years in Tofield and had many friends there and in the surrounding district. Our sympathy is extended to the family.

Mrs. G. W. Sears and brother, Mr. C. A. Ingram returned home February 24, after a three week's visit being the guests of their brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ingram at Victoria, B.C. While it was a pleasant trip and we left green grass, flowers blooming, and gardeners making gardens, etc., we were glad to get out of the war zone, as that is practically what it is now. Signs on large buildings point to air raid shelters which are stocked with provisions. A very hostile feeling is shown towards the Japanese. We happened to be on the same train when the first 100 Japs were sent to west of Jasper, tho' they were on separate coaches.

While in Victoria we visited several old timers of Tofield. There were Mr. and Mrs. James Secord, who have rooms with Mr. and Mrs. Ingram. Mrs. Secord is much improved in health, while the climate does not agree with Mr. Secord, as he was suffering from Asthma. They expect to return to Tofield at Easter.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cookson, their son Cecil is in the navy overseas and their daughter, Eileen, is working as a furrier. Mr. Cookson got out his violin and gave us some old time music.

Mr. Douglas Black is much stouter and looks like the country agrees with him. He has a nice home and lives alone. He also has a large house next to Wes. Ingram's which he rents.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris are doing well. Mrs. Harris runs a rooming house and Mr. Harris works, I think at ship building. They have a family of eight but only two left at home.

[illegible] Jessie and Stella Ingram daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Ingram, are carrying on well alone. Jessie is a music teacher and has a class of 40 pupils. Stella is taking a business course.

Mrs Grossman, nee Margaret Ingram, sister of Mrs. Ed Cookson, has a nice home and a beautiful apartment house. She is a very enthusiastic war worker.

On our way home we stopped off in Vancouver to visit Mrs. Jean Dawe, nee Jennie Mitchell. She is fine but has had no direct word from her son who was injured overseas some time ago, but is looking forward to meeting him in Eastern Canada [illegible]

Former Tofielder Addresses Liberal Club at Nanaimo

"There is evidence from all sides that numbers of farmers have decided to cut down their acreage and their herds this year because no relief to the labor situation is in sight," said Mr R. W. Pincott, president of the Farmers' Co-Operative Association here, and market clerk, in an address as guest speaker to the Nanaimo Central Liberal Association Tuesday night.

He cited some significant evidence of declining production on Vancouver Island, and declared:

"At least a year ago a campaign should have been started to arouse a 'productive consciousness' among holders of small acreage to utilize their small holdings for some productive purpose."

Potato Shortage

He pointed to the present scarcity of B. C. grown potatoes and other root crops, and said that these would shortly be exhausted and residents would have to depend upon importation. While the reason for this decrease in production was partly due to a disastrous season last year, the dearth of farm labor, coupled with the fact that both the male and female young adult members of the farm family had left to take up some more remunerative occupation, was largely responsible. "And even yet," Mr. Pincott continued, "prices of farm products are not on a parity with industrial wages and its eight hour day."

He mentioned the shortage also in parsnips, carrots, and green vegetables, stocks being insufficient to meet the demand.

There was going to be a serious shortage of seed potatoes this year for planting, he added. The time was coming when the Texas vegetables would make their appearance in the stores, when the seasonable embargo was lifted.

Starvation of Stock Threat

Stressing the dependence of the Island for its feed for livestock on imported material, Mr. Pincott said that if anything happened to prevent through rail traffic from the prairies, or interruption occurred on communication between the Mainland and Island, the livestock of this island would be starving within about three weeks.

To the public there was of course the aspect of the expected shortage in the milk supply of the towns which would immediately follow.

Dealing with the milk question Mr. Pincott pointed out that so attractive was the price for the product in the fluid market in Victoria that trucks were carrying the product daily there, and disposing of it in Victoria within three hours from the time the farmer had his can on the roadside.

The effect was that the creameries could not hope to get milk at a price which it could pay for better making, and as a consequence Island creameries were producing in many cases less than half the amount of butter which was formerly the output thereof.

The result had been the killing off of calves when born within a day or two.

"And for years," he said, "killing of calves, both male and female for veal has been going on because a calf at two months old is usually worth as much as can be obtained for it when a year old." "The situation therefore," he explained, "is that young cows are very hard to find and dairymen are being forced to buy back cows that were discarded two and three years ago." This threatens within two or three years to put the milk supply considerably below the demand.

A remedy had been suggested to encourage the farmer to rear his calves to maturity, that the value of the calf at two months (about $24) should be advanced by the state, on the understanding that if the animal was reared to the age of two years and became a producer, the bonus earned would be regarded as liquidated.

Substitution of this method of early destruction of calves was highly desirable, he argued in the interest of the cattle industry of the Island.

Unless action were taken he foresaw a time when milk would have to be rationed.

Egg Prices

Forecasting that egg prices were likely to drop again, Mr. Pincott traced some of the developments in that form of poultry industry.

"It is regrettable," he said, "that since the reduction of feed grain prices due to the absorption of the freight rate by the government, eggs have dropped something like 12 cents, although Britain's order of 30 million dozen is, I understand, not yet filled."

He referred to egg prices in January and February 1941 when producers were receiving as low as 15c and 16c per dozen with no export market in sight. This unfortunately led to large cancellations for chicks at hatcheries so that when the British order came, flocks had been drastically reduced. It had been estimated, Mr. Pincott said, that over a quarter of a million birds in B.C. had been killed off last February.

Hogs Killed Off

Speaking of hogs, so far as the Island was concerned, it had been found that a serious shortage was developing, a number of [illegible] having ceased to keep pigs. He attributed this to a discovery by the farmer that of all the various things raised, pigs were giving the poorest returns. Therefore, with insufficient labor the farmer cut the poorest paying line out.

Mr. Pincott agreed that they would regard his remarks as pessimistic, but he would rather have them regarded as a word of warning. Matters which he had placed on record in June 1940, when he spoke on supply shortages due to labor uncertainty, had since been completely demonstrated in the actual conditions on the Island.

He therefore appealed for support for the agricultural industry, and recognition of its acute problems.

During the present season curling in Tofield has become almost universal. Mens' bonspiel, Ladies' bonspiel, Mixed bonspiel, High school bonspiel, Young People's bonspiel, in addition to ordinary schedules, have all added to the pleasure of an unusually mild winter.

••••••

We notice that this year, after an absence of a year or more, the late Mr John Chapman's picture again hanging on the wall. And without becoming unduly sentimental, it might be good to remember that the present excellent layout was brought about largely by his efforts.

••••••

The suggestion of a cup of Java bore fruit. Anyway we hear the Young People's Society had a lovely time at their spiel and are sold on the idea that curling interspersed with coffee and hamburgers is great fun.

••••••

In these bonspiels there are many who have never thrown a rock before and many more whose knowledge of the procedure of curling is meagre. This throws work on to the caretaker who helps to rustle rocks, find a broom, tell them what sheet they are curling on, etc. Gerald Hosler as caretaker has met these demands splendidly and has rendered real service to the rink, the club and the young curlers.

••••••

It is not out of place at this time to give Gerald a hand.

SOMEBODY'S SON

By G. L. Creed
(Squadron Leader R.C.A.F.)

Somebody's Son has volunteered to risk his life for you . . .
Somebody's Son is far from home and the things that homefolk do . . .
Somebody's Son for your Freedom's sake is preparing himself for war . . .
Somebody's Son deserves your help for it's YOU he is fighting for!

Somebody's Mother is giving her boy
in a Cause that is yours as well . . .
Somebody's Wife knows a loneliness that only her heart can tell . . .
Somebody's Mother and Somebody's Wife are doing all they can do . . .
Somebody prays that some other may care and the answer is up to YOU!

Somebody's Son in the days to come must meet the bitter Test . . .
Somebody's Man for our Freedom's plan
in a foreign field may rest . . .
Somebody's Job is to care for them NOW for on them all our hopes depend . .
Somebody's Job is to dig up the cash and that Somebody's YOU, my friend!

Bill Bailey Tries To Enlist Eight Times

Bill Bailey, mail driver on route one has done his best to get into uniform again. Bill was in the last war and feels that while perhaps he is not in the class to go into the front line of battle, he is still good enough to do many of the things that have to be done around military establishments, such as guard, orderly, etc. However age and a slight physical defect has prevented him being accepted in spite of eight separate tries. Anyway, Bill is still trying and who knows, the ninth may be successful.

TRAVELLER USED GUM IN UNEXPECTED WAY

Toronto, March 2— The delightful old lady traveller has been the subject of possibly as many alleged comic stories as the much-maligned mother-in-law, but every now and then a true incident occurs which puts even the best invented story to shame Recently one of these old lady travellers made her first air trip on a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane. She had ear trouble, she said, and was afraid of the liner's taking off and landing Supervisory Stewardess Margaret Dixon of Trans-Canada Air Lines, gave her a package of gum and assured her that if she would chew it there would be no trouble to her ears. The plane rose steadily and all was well but the old lady She called Stewardess Dixon and shouted she was "stone deaf." Margaret was worried The old lady could not hear She pointed to the gum The old lady pointed to her ears She had chewed the gum and plugged her ears with it A minor operation with a hairpin restored the old lady's hearing.

SUGAR RATIONING

A warning to merchants who without question, fill requests for sugar in excess of the sugar-rationing regulations is given by Walter S. Campbell, Prices and Supply representative for Alberta under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board

"As a result of information given to me", says Mr Campbell, "we have sent out certain persons to make sugar purchases for the Board, in excess of the amounts allowed for their families In many cases it was found that merchants filled these orders without any question whatever, and without taking the name of the purchaser. Retailers, as well as consumers, are bound by the sugar-rationing regulations and must observe them."

The regulations allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar per person. 50 per cent more than the allowance in Great Britain, and supplies may be bought for two weeks in advance. A family of four may buy 6 pounds of sugar each two weeks and a family of six, 9 pounds

Where the housewife wishes to make marmalade, she can obtain the extra proportionate amount of sugar required when buying the oranges, or on production of the purchase slip.

LINDBROOK

On Wednesday evening, February 25th, a moving picture show was put on by the associate schools of the Holden S D The attendance was not as large as it might have been, owing to the cold, which kept some home hugging the stove. Those who did show up however, spent a very interesting couple of hours, so be on hand for the next one when it comes.

The turnout of the voters to the polls on last Saturday's election for the office of councillor for this, Div. 4, Cornhill M D , was probably the largest for years A total of 78 votes being polled at the Lindbrook school poll the count ran as follows: J Blake, 31; W. Glenn, 21; F. Kortzman, 24; Spoiled ballots 2. So, you take your kicks to Mr Jack Blake for the next three years, but don't forget he is only human like the rest of us, so don't look for superhuman efforts

WILL ISSUE 20,000 HIGHWAY MAPS

Twenty thousand new road maps of this province will be issued early in March by the provincial government

Arrangements for early issuance of these maps have been completed, according to information received by the Alberta Motor Association.

The maps show the extent of the provincial system, road mileages and other material which will be of value to the motorists, no matter whether he is familiar with the Alberta highways or is a stranger.

Motorists also will welcome an issue of 100,000 strip or sectional maps being sent out to official appointments such as hotels, garages, service stations and similar services by the A.M A. These also will be available at branches of the A M.A. in Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge

The maps have been checked up carefully to ensure that they are up-to-date in every particular, while showing the routes to be taken to any particular point in the province

Alberta is looked upon as one of the most attractive tourist centres in Canada, and it is only in keeping with this fact that the visitor should be able to obtain highly dependable and informative maps.

ALBERTA MOTOR CAR ACCIDENT REPORT

There were 8,188 motor vehicle accidents in this province in which the damage to property exceeded $25 in the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1941, according to a report of the provincial secretary's department which has been tabled in the legislature.

In the previous year, there were 6,254 motor vehicle accidents but in 40 per cent of these the property damage in each was less than $50.

In the 1940-41 fiscal year, there were 68 fatal motor accidents in this province, compared with 62 in 1940, 72 in 1939, 55 in 1938 and 56 in 1937.

During the period covered by the report, 40 persons were sent to jail for being intoxicated while in charge of a motor vehicle and 62 were given jail terms for reckless driving or other charges which involved a motor vehicle.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association state that the figures on the number of motor accidents again stress the need of maintaining the campaigns in this province to bring about safer driving on the streets and highways.

AN ACRE OF CANE—

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article by Mary Kirkle taken from the Christian Science Monitor, deals with areas unlike those of Canada. Yet there are many of our readers whose boyhood and girlhood days were spent in the United States and many more who have relatives and friends there Moreover the long sweetening of the south is a close relative of maple syrup of the north in their connection with early pioneer family raising.

THERE ARE still, in Monroe County, which might be in any State in the Union, old-fashioned sorghum mills that operate by horse power. On autumn afternoons, with the soft sunlight falling in a golden haze on hills ablaze with sassafras, sumach, and maple, cars stop along the highway to watch the teams pull the long wooden sweeps, while succulent cane stalks are fed into the hopper and juice trickles into pails, later to be boiled down into sorghum molasses. There are more modern mills that perform the same function, but this leisurely process being carried on in the open air has a harvest fascination, and small boys in the cars envy the lad who drives the horses, as he is well aware and thinks it right and proper that they should.

This year the hoppers of these mills will be kept well filled; for each farmer is being urged to plant at least an acre of cane so that, no matter what happens to the sugar market, there will be enough of this old-time sweetening to go around. The sugar bowl may be empty, but who cares, while the molasses pitcher is full? Not the man who was brought up on hot biscuits or corn bread liberally drenched in sorghum, or the growing boy who concocts unheard-of but delicious mixtures from a cup of molasses and a jar of peanut butter. Nor the cook who has rediscovered what real country sorghum does for gingerbread, or how even the lowly bread pudding is touched up by the addition of a spoonful or two of this amber product of the canefields.

This sorghum molasses has had its part in American history no less than the bean and the cod or the black-eyed pea, the salmon and the catfish. It was the accepted sweetening in the Middle West and the Southwest during the lean years of the frontier when white sugar was a luxury to be used only when the folks from "Back East" came to visit or the minister stopped for dinner. It entered into folk speech—who has not at some time or other known someone who was as slow as molasses in January?

What a picture that conjures up, of winter breakfast in the kitchen by lamplight, with the corners of the room not yet warm; the table near the stove spread with corn cakes, sausages, and eggs and the molasses still cold and stiff in the pitcher but melting magically on the hot cakes. That beginning of the day would send children off to school and men to the rail splitting and fodder hauling, strong to build a country where labor and education might meet and blend.

There were, it may be recalled, endless debates, and schools of thought as to whether molasses was, or were, singular or plural. Not that it greatly mattered, if we accept the dictum that the function of language is to make oneself understood; for it would be hard to miss the meaning of a request to "pass them molasses down this way, please." Those who preferred not to expose themselves to ridicule from one side or the other could take refuge in a non-committal, "Molasses, please."

This is one of the roots from which we grew; a part of the debates and pleasant fooling and friendly arguments, and, incidentally, the good robust eating, of so short a time ago and yet a time almost forgotten now, so that its very mechanics are a curiosity to men and women of today. It is good to recall it for a little while, although we will not be able to turn back the clock to that earlier day, but must abide by the decisions and problems of our times.

They were looking forward, those ancestors of ours who used the long sweetenin' instead of the short, through difficulties that were as great to them as those of today are to us, although it appears now to us that their perplexities resolved themselves inevitably. Rather, they were cleared away by toil and sacrifice, by burdens cheerfully borne and by everyday common sense, or gumption, hitched to the star of imagination and determination to build something better than the pioneers had known before. These are the things we must carry with us from the world that is passing to the one that we are entering.

There could be worse reminders than sorghum molasses that the plastic age and the homespun are not completely unlike; that the proud engines of progress could yet slow down to the point where an acre of cane, and a neighbor with a sorghum mill, would be a mighty comfort to a man.

The poor man may derive a bit of satisfaction through reflecting that he can buy just as many automobile tires now as a millionaire can. —St. Louis Star-Times.

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

It must be reported by an impartial observer that wartime patriotism and peace time politics do not mix well along Parliament Hill, and if this truism is born in mind, the man-in-the-street throughout this country will be in a much better position to understand what is really happening at the present time in the stormy sessional drama in the nation's capital with the gentle hint or suggestion that no political elements in Ottawa have any monopoly on patriotism or loyalty in the heated discussions or argumentations over the principles or necessity of conscription for overseas service at this stage of the war In other words, though each representative of the people is entitled to express and to defend an opinion on this main issue of the moment, yet a veteran and impartial observer must confess quite readily that in the debates in the House of Commons, Senate or lobbies, those labyrinthe passages where much more takes place than the man-in-the-street can realize, there has been a strong and diabolic admixture of sectional feelings, political feuds and personal passions of a kind that sometimes may produce a national concoction that is most undesirable at a crucial period such as the present time. Indeed, some of the expressions or arguments used do not require the services of an expert to analyse and to diagnose as indicative of the existence of such feelings, feuds or passions, particularly when the interests of national unity demand that the cool facts only shall be discussed in considering Canada's war effort up to this point in the struggle.

In all other English-speaking nations, there is a concerted effort to drive politics out of the life of the nation for the duration of the war They consider that national unity is the greatest need of the moment This does not mean that only those representatives of the people, who support the opinion of the Government one hundred per cent have a monopoly on patriotism or loyalty because they approve of these policies. This is not true. It is in the best interests of national unity and defence that a strong Official Opposition should function and that criticisms should exist where these are necessary It is recognized that a strong Official Opposition is even more important and more essential in wartime than in peacetime But mere dissention based on sectional feelings, political feuds, and personal passions is most harmful at this time.

In the Motherland, while legitimate criticisms are even invited by the Government yet strife between political parties has been suspended entirely for the duration of the war. But Parliament functions as usual and the representatives of the people have the fullest scope to criticise the Government and to control its policies. And indeed, they do

In the United States, political activities have been suspended completely and a state of armistice exists, if not final peace. But both the Senat and Congress carry on as usual, with the two political parties system in opposition or check upon one another's actions only for the purposes of achieving a maximum war effort by that nation, without any political strife being tolerated by either Republican or Democratic sides. In fact, there has always been a two political parties system during wartime in the United States. The opposition has always existed in peace or war. This was the case when the United States was at war against England in 1812 This was the case when the United States was at war against Mexico in 1846 This was the case when the United States was engaged in World War No. 1.

However, in Canada, the conscription for overseas issue has revived feelings, passions, and feuds of a nature that should not exist if a united war effort is to be waged according to long-range plans, if the people, parliament, patriotism, politics, and a maximum war effort are to be elements of the body politics in complete unison and if the leaders charged with their responsible duties are to carry them out in total agreement with one another. In plain language, statements or expressions have been made by leaders in answer to continued provocations, though there is no doubt that much time had to be wasted in these activities, especially at a time when leaders have tremendous work of a more important kind to carry out in connection with war responsibilities in their Departments instead of engaging in debate which is unlikely to affect the situation

When Hon. J. L Ralston, Minister of National Defence, was forced to lift the veil on the Government's manpower question, he merely stated "We cannot know what is ahead, and I feel impelled to say that if the Voluntary System does not meet the needs of the fateful days ahead of us, then I shall feel it my duty as part of my responsibility to advocate adoption of the other method".

When Hon. James Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, decided to answer critics of the Government, he merely stated: "I shall never say that under no circumstances will I support conscription, but I will say that until such time as I am convinced that we can get in Canada a more effective force under conscription than under voluntary enlistment for overseas service I am against conscription. 'Yes' on the plebiscite will leave me free to make my decision with all the facts known"

When Hon Ian MacKenzie, Minister of Pensions and Health, deemed it necessary to reply to affirm his position, he merely stated: "If we get a mandate in the affirmative to release us from our pledges, and if voluntary enlistments should not be sufficient to provide these reinforcements, as far as I am concerned, my recommendation would be to resort to all measures and means that may be necessary to see that these essential reinforcements of trained men are forthcoming and forthcoming in time"

When Hon Angus Macdonald, Minister of Naval Affairs, found it advisable to answer a critic of the Government, he merely stated, "We'll do the right thing."

These and other remarks made in the House of Commons on various occasions by responsible voices of the Government do not change the situation, nor pledge, of the leaders in regard to conscription for overseas service. It is obviously merely repitition over and over again of the same truism that, when a nation is at war and a voluntary method does not avail, then compulsory means must be adopted, if this is in the public interest. Nevertheless, the debates and argumentations over the conscription for overseas service took up much time of the representatives of the people in Parliament and in lobbies, produced many heated exchanges between members of all political parties where there was revival of political passions, sectional feuds, and personal feelings, and caused leaders to spend much energy as well as valuable time in futile or fruitless debate

In reality, well informed observers along Parliament Hill hold that much of the discussions on the issue of conscription for overseas service did not only fail to produce a cure or remedy for the chronic dissention over this delicate point but they did not revolve about the real facts of the war and Canada's effort up to this stage of the struggle, with the storm clouds bringing forth not much more than a whirlwind of fiery words and a flood of passionate feelings that often beclouded the true issues as well as damaged national unity, political peace, and attempts to avoid undue lengthening of the session

TREAT YOUR SEED

(Science Service News)

During the past three years a large number of samples of seed of wheat, oats, barley and rye have been examined for disease content at the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, states W. C. Broadfoot. The object of this work was to determine to what extent the presence of disease-producing fungi in or on the seed would damage the seed or the young plant when it was growing in soil under laboratory or field conditions, and also to ascertain how effective the treating of this seed with a mercury dust would be in protecting the young plant from disease

It was found that, while practically all samples carried the spores of many kinds of fungi, including those of the smuts and the rootrots, and that some were in fact heavily infected, only a few carried a dangerous load of spores of fungi that would attack the plant.

On planting the samples in the soil, whether in the field or under greenhouse conditions, it was found that smut developed if the seed carried more than a trace of smut spores. It was also ascertained that the plants would be practically free from rootrots if clean seed was sown in clean soil, and also that the seedlings would be attacked if diseased seed was sown in clean soil, or if clean seed was sown in soil infested with root rotting fungi

The general wisdom of treating all seed samples with an approved mercury dust was demonstrated For example, the covered smuts were controlled and the damage arising from the root rotting fungi carried on the seed was definitely reduced if the soil was not too severely infested Moreover the vigour of the seedlings was, in general, increased However, the beneficial effect of seed treatment was not apparent when even clean seed was planted in severely infested soil. Indeed, it is doubtful if it could be measured under such adverse conditions Thus, it is evident that while the use of disease-free seed and a disease-free soil is—other factors being favourable—the best guarantee of satisfactory yields of good quality from grain crops, treatment of the seed with an approved mercury dust is, in the long run, a sound practice

Allies in Arms

By R. H Markham in Christian Science Monitor, Boston, Mass.

Americans have at last taken sides. Or, rather, a side has taken them. They have been rudely pushed off the fence into a large and worthy company of fighters From now on, for a while, we shall be in very close contact with our 25 companion nations, and we can make our relations pleasanter by becoming better acquainted with them

Nearer to us among our warrior companions are the British and the white members of the British Commonwealth of Nations Their outstanding trait seems to be voluntary unity in the midst of diversity. The British personify balanced growth. They have been the most balanced great nation in modern history.

They are of a complex racial composition. Two German tribes gave them the name Anglo-Saxons. Britain was repeatedly invaded by Scandinavians It was once conquered and dominated by Normans from France Among them are Irish, Scotch, and Welsh But in spite of this intricate combination of foreign elements, no people in modern times has shown greater unity One may say that aggressive, creative nationalism first appeared in the world among these Anglo Saxon-Norman-Scotch-Welsh-Latin-Norwegian Britons

Socially, a similar unity in diversity is found In spite of marked class differences, the British have shown more social cohesion and steadier social progress than any other large nation in the Old World.

Another remarkable combination of British qualities is pugnacity with piety This may be considered shocking, but the Britons have long been among the world's best fighters and also very religious. They think themselves "tough" and they are They encourage hardiness of character even in children They pride themselves in being able to take and give rough treatment Yet Great Britain is also a land of churches, preachers, and Bibles It [illegible] a cradle of Quakerism, Methodism, and Puritanism.

Britons are known for their practicality They hesitate to run after panaceas They don't take stock in new "isms" They plod along, take each problem as it comes, stand up for their rights, fight, pray, write to the newspapers, complain, vote, grumble and move ahead, one short step at a time

The British have passed through many extreme crises, for which they seemed completely unprepared and in which their defeat seemed inescapable But they have surmounted them all and emerged from almost every one in triumph

With the United States in this fight are four members of the British Commonwealth of Nations: Australia, Canada, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa The 11,000,000 Canadians closely resembling our own nation, live in a land considerably larger than the United States; the 7,000,000 Australians, many of whom might be taken for Texans, inhabit an island about the size of the United States; a million and a half New Zealanders occupy islands about the size of Nevada All of these people are among the world's foremost champions of self-government, liberty and social progress They are independent of all outside control and are no more "owned by England" than Kansas is owned by Massachusetts, whence came many of Kansas's settlers

The Union of South Africa faces difficult problems It covers a territory nearly twice as large as Texas and four-fifths of its 10,000,000 inhabitants are native Negroes, while the white elements are divided between Boers (Dutch) and British. As a result, there is much friction, which hampers the war effort. Nevertheless, South Africa voted to go into the war against Hitlerism and has played a vital role in freeing Africa of Nazi forces and defending the Suez Canal

The 69,000,000 white inhabitants of the British Commonwealth of Nations are very close to the Americans, in religion, methods of government, education, and ways of living. They and we together outnumber the Japanese, Germans, and Italians. The 200,000,000 Anglo-Saxons constitute the most powerful, homogeneous world block in history We are not as numerous as the Chinese or Indians and are almost equaled in number by the Russians, but in economic, commercial, financial, and naval strength we surpass any other group of people speaking one language. No other group has made such a contribution to self-government, freedom, and social progress.

Cereal Variety Recommendations

No less than eight varieties of wheat are officially recommended in the prairie provinces. Due to the striking differences in soil and climate found in various regions, it is natural that some varieties should be particularly well adapted to certain regions Each year standard and new varieties are tested at widely separated points. Hundreds of such tests are conducted, and the results carefully examined by provincial cereal variety committees.

On the basis of experimental results, official recommendations are published and these are distributed to all grain buyers of line elevator companies associated with the Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association. Recommendations respecting oats, barley and flax are also included.

In order to achieve the best results in grain production, the farmer must be sure to grow the variety best suited to his local conditions, and he must have reasonably pure seed which will germinate and grow vigorously

Crop Improvement Associations are now functioning in each of the three prairie provinces and through them the country elevator grain buyer becomes the recognized distributor of registered and certified cereal seeds. He will be glad to advise respecting recommended varieties, and will place seed orders with the Crop Improvement Association.

Several new varieties of oats and barley have been released during the past few years. The emphasis now placed on livestock products justifies more attention to securing the best varieties of coarse grains. Also, the Government is asking for more and more flax.

Sow only good seed of a good variety

Mr. and Mrs. R. Bruce and daughter visited Edmonton for two days last week. Their son, Pte Jim Bruce accompanied them home.

The Bruce girls were Sunday visitors at the home of Marcella Campeau.

Mrs R G Donald and Mrs Henry Donald and Mr and Mrs Percy Donald of Deville were Sunday visitors at Mrs P Donald's.

Those visiting Edmonton last Friday included Mr J Gladue, Mr G E Donald, Mr Young and Miss Isabelle Kyle.

Mrs Robert Donald of Deville visited with Marcella Campion, also Mrs Alex Donald and kiddies for the week end.

George Donald and Dutch Campion left Monday for Edmonton with the intention of joining the army. We both wish ourselves luck. So long, gang, till we meet again.

Editor's Note. We appreciate very much Mr. Donald's services as correspondent. We know by the experience and handling a great deal of country news correspondence over a period of many years, that Mr Donald put real serious effort into this gratuitous work. To his remark "We both wish ourselves luck," we would like to chorus "So say all of us."

TO PREVENT LOSSES AT LAMBING TIME

It is profitable to have early lambs. Saving lambs in March and April adds to the number that can be marketed in July and August, just the time when early lamb meat is in most demand. The following ten points are important in the reduction of lamb losses provided that the ewe flock is watched carefully and given good management at this season of the year.

1. Go over the ewe flock carefully to find ewes that are developing udders. Sometimes a ram lamb or a stray ram has bred some ewes early. Such ewes may be the most profitable if the lambs are saved;

2. Early lambing ewes should be placed by themselves in the warmest part of the barn, preferably in clean sunny quarters;

3. Give close attention day and night to ewes expected to lamb early. Just before lambing, ewes become restless and are sunken in front of the hips and over the rump. Place such ewes in a warm pen or box stall.

4. A quarter to one-half pound of grain should be fed to ewes heavy in lamb at this season. Two parts whole oats and one part bran makes an excellent grain ration. Feed the best of clover or alfalfa hay as a roughage;

5. Give each ewe a separate pen at lambing time, 3 feet by 4 feet is about the right size. A box stall 12 feet by 15 feet will provide lambing pens for seven or eight ewes;

6. Lambs weak at birth can often be revived. Remove any mucous or membrane from the mouth, rub and slap the lamb gently on the ribs. Endeavour to get the ewe to clean the lamb at once and see that it nurses as quickly as possible. Chilled lambs may be warmed up by putting them in a warm box wrapped in a light wool blanket. Stubborn cases may require some stimulant.

7. Give the ewe a warm drink, to which has been added about a quart of bran. Do not feed any grain for at least 24 hours and then only sparingly for a couple of days. Feed all she will eat of good clover or alfalfa hay. Shear the wool away from the udder;

8. Make sure there is milk in the udder. Ewes that have been well fed and have had plenty of exercise usually have plenty of milk.

9. Early lambs being nursed by good milking ewes will gain from one-half to a pound a day. Increase the grain gradually until ewes with twin lambs get 1½ pounds to 2 pounds daily. One to two pounds of silage daily will also stimulate the milk flow.

10. At ten days of age, young lambs start to nibble at clover or alfalfa leaves. Give them a creep where they can be encouraged to eat specially selected clover or alfalfa and a grain mixture of rolled oats 2 pints, cracked corn 1 pint, bran 1 pint, and 10 per cent oilcake.

A NEW DISEASE OF ALFALFA
(Science Service News)

In recent years a destructive crown rot has been found in many alfalfa fields in central and northern Alberta and Saskatchewan. This disease has not yet been reported from other regions. It appears to be most prevalent and severe in the seed-producing areas of the gray-wooded and transition soils, where, last year, there was over 50 per cent killing in several stands.

As crown rot damage occurs in the early spring, it is sometimes confused with winter injury. The plants are killed in irregular patches which occur most commonly on slopes or in hollows in the field. The amount of damage varies greatly from year to year and in different localities. Large areas in a field may become bare in a single year, or the dead patches may be small at first and enlarge from year to year. These bare areas usually grow up with dandelions, quack grass, or other weeds, and the alfalfa stand soon becomes worthless. If the dead plants are dug up and examined, dark brown, rotted areas will be found at the crowns, and less frequently on the roots. When the crown buds are destroyed the plants cannot grow and the roots eventually decay.

This disease is caused by a low-temperature fungus which lives in the soil and attacks the plants about the time of the first spring thaw. Progress of the disease ceases after the soil warms up and growth of the plants begins. However the fungus remains dormant in the dead plants and soil until the following spring. In field experiments at Edmonton, states M. W. Cormack, Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Edmonton, all varieties tested of alfalfa, sweet clover, common clover, winter wheat and a number of grasses were completely killed in the early spring.

When an alfalfa field is plowed up because of severe crown rot damage, it should not be seeded down to alfalfa, other legumes, winter wheat, or grasses for at least three years. Spring-sown cereals or other non-susceptible annual crops can be grown. The fungus may be carried to a healthy field in soil or machinery.

The use of resistant varieties of alfalfa would be the best method of controlling crown rot damage. Unfortunately, most of the existing varieties of alfalfa are highly susceptible, but attempts are being made to select resistant plants from severely damaged fields. Growers can assist greatly in this work by notifying this laboratory of diseased fields of alfalfa in early spring.

United Church News

The Junior Choir was greatly appreciated by the congregation on Sunday evening.

Their singing of three anthems during the service revealed the fine progress the choir is making under the leadership of Mrs. Stinson. "Praise" was the pastor's theme and the singing of the hymns and the music by the choir made the worship hour a service of praise.

The Senior and Junior Choirs are preparing now their Easter music.

During this Lenten season our hearts ought to be stirred with the important and significant events in our Lord's life on earth. Again we are being reminded "To Remember the Lord Jesus Christ." His Passion and His Resurrection should be in our thoughts.

A Communicants class will soon be started and it is hoped many of our young people will attend.

I.O.D.E. NOTES

In the I.O.D.E. Secretarial Report as published in last week's Mercury there was a slight misprint. Re Coronation Fund the Bursary amount should have read $400 each instead of $4.00 each. The Provincial Educational Secretary informed us that $2,800 is required yearly to care for the six bursaries at $400 each and the supplying of text books to needy schools. These bursaries are open to pupils from all over our Province graduating from grade twelve with a high percentage and proceeding to University. Six students are now at University. The amount required for these bursaries is based on $1.00 per member on a paid-up membership. Thus the amount for any chapter is not above its ability.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By

To Treat or not to Treat

This article is not, as the title suggests, a discussion of barroom etiquette. It is concerned with the more important, if less stimulating(!) subject of seed treatment.

Seed treatment is insurance and, like all insurance, costs something. We are all obliged to decide whether it pays to insure our buildings, cars, lives or crops, and if we decide that in the long run we shall gain by carrying the risks ourselves, we don't insure.

So it is with seed treatment except that sometimes we can be almost certain that treatment will save money. If, in 1941, we had smut in oats, covered smut in barley, or stinking smut (bunt) in wheat, there is no argument—we should treat.

In Alberta, plant pathologists have agreed to recommend treatment of cereal seed with an organic mercury dust as a regular practice. In Manitoba crop districts 3, 4, 6, 9 and 10, farmers using their own wheat seed are advised to treat with Ceresan or Leytosan due to the prevalence of root-rotting and leaf-spotting fungi. Elsewhere in Manitoba and in Saskatchewan, farmers must make the decision for themselves.

The Associated Laboratory Services, with laboratories in Saskatoon, have undertaken to examine seed samples and to advise for or against treatment. This is, undoubtedly, a good test. But, though treatment may have been considered unnecessary last year, this does not mean that it need not be done this year. Also, if one farmer is advised not to treat, his neighbours should on no account assume that they would get the same advice.

HOCKEY

On Wednesday last, the 25th, Tofield entertained the Viking squad in a fast hockey game. The game was kept under control by Jack Whyte handling the whistle. The final score was 3-1 for the visitors. M. Langhans scored Tofield's only counter.

Playing before a very hockey minded crowd, Tofield took on the fast stepping Ross Creek team on Wednesday, March 4. The game was fairly slow due to the warm weather and tempers were running quite high. However the teams were very evenly matched and an overtime period was necessary. Ross Creek were victorious by a 3-2 count. Tofield's goal getters were M. Langhans and Aaron Wiltsen with one apiece.

Cornhill Council Held Special Meeting Friday

BUYS $1,000 VICTORY BOND

Mr. W. Gallinger Suggests Buying Victory Bonds Instead of Doing New Road Work

On Friday, March 6th, Municipal District of Cornhill Council held a special meeting the sole purpose being to pass a bylaw authorizing the purchase of a $1000 Victory Bond.

There were present Reeve Walker; Councillors Coombes, Anderson, Kurtzman and J. Swabey.

Returning Officer Dodds reported J. W. Swabey elected as councillor for Division three.

Councillor J. W. Swabey took the usual oath of office.

The secretary announced that in order for the district to purchase a Victory Bond a bylaw had to be prepared and approved by the Minister of Municipal Affairs. He (the secretary) had prepared a bylaw and had forwarded it to the Department for the Minister's approval. It arrived back that morning fully approved. It was now ready to be voted upon.

The bylaw authorizing the District to purchase a $1000 Victory Bond was then given its first, second and third reading, passing all three unanimously.

On motion of Councillor Coombes it was decided that the councillors receive no pay for this meeting. Carried unanimously.

Mr. Wilbur Gallinger interviewed Council and suggested that instead of making the usual appropriations for new road work this year, the appropriations be made as usual and the money used to purchase Victory Bonds. Some maintenance would have to be done but he was referring mostly to new road construction. He stressed the seriousness of the war situation and said that new road construction money could be loaned to the government, would draw three per cent interest and then when the war was over they would have a nice sum of money with which to do construction work.

Some discussion took place concerning the suggestion, some of the councillors being in favor and others feeling that farmers who had waited so many years for roads would want them.

However beyond pondering the question over, nothing could be done that day as that meeting was called for a special purpose and no other business could be transacted.

Editor's Note: A motion to adjourn had been made, though not passed, before Mr. Gallinger arrived. We left soon after the motion to adjourn was made and thus missed Mr. Gallinger's interview. However we believe the above to be a fair enough report of the interview.

Local Victory Drive Well Over The Top

While a few applications have come in since that time, Saturday at midnight brought active canvassing for applications for Canada's 2nd Victory Loan to a close.

The local committee and canvassers report splendid success, the quota, even with the additional 50 per cent asked for, being oversubscribed.

Up to Saturday night (there have been a few come in since) there had been 202 applications for a total of $42,550.00, a percentage of 177.3 per cent. The amount originally requested by the provincial committee from the Tofield area was $24,000 from 200 applicants.

In the first Victory Loan drive in 1941 $27,200 was subscribed, the number of applicants being 134.

The committee and canvassers were as follows:

Geo. B. Brace, chairman; A. J. H. McCauley, Unit organizer; A. E. Allan, W. C. Swift; W. Worton, (publicity).

Canvassers: Tofield, Messrs Brace, Bellamy, Stinson; Lakeshore and Mackenzie, Wm. Webb; Bardo and Amisk Creek, Ingvald Ness; Kingman, J. A. Anderson; Lindbrook, Deville, Cooking Lake, Ministik, James Bracegirdle; Ketchamoot and Woodlawn, A. J. H. McCauley; Round Hill, S. E. Bossmann.

CHAIRMAN AND UNIT ORGANIZER EXTENDS THANKS

Dear Mr. Editor:

The Tofield Unit, through your paper, wish to thank those who subscribed for bonds of the Second Victory Loan. All the salesmen report being cordially received, the public being anxious to subscribe for one or more bonds, saying they were willing to do what they could for they realized the need was great.

Our quota was $24000.00, but when the Government asked for an increase of 50 per cent, our salesmen were given applications to bring the total for our Unit up to over 175 per cent of our quota.

Our Victory Loan Committee was very much pleased over the result.

GEO. B. BRACE,
Chairman.

Holden Health Unit To Organize Nursing Class At Tofield

The Holden Health Unit is holding a meeting Friday afternoon, March 13th, at 2.30 in the Tofield town hall. The purpose of this meeting will be to discuss with the women of the town and district, the advisability of organizing classes in home nursing.

The Department of Public Health is making a survey of the Province to ascertain the number of nurses, ex-nurses and practical nurses, not now practicing their profession, who might be called upon in the event of an emergency in [illegible]. It is hoped that all married women who were previously [illegible] will submit their names and signify their willingness to assist. Due to a lack of medical practitioners in many rural areas a serious situation could result from an outbreak of disease, and it is with a view to forestalling anything from reaching epidemic proportions that our nursing facilities are being organized.

For the benefit of those interested and desiring to help during the war, and who have had no previous training, the meeting Friday afternoon will be to organize a class for a short course in home nursing. Women of all ages are invited to come and learn simple practical methods for caring for the sick in the home. No charge is made for the course, the only expense being the cost of a First Aid manual, twenty five cents, if desired. It is hoped that all interested will turn out to the organization meeting Friday at 2:30 p.m., in the Town Hall.

LOCAL RED CROSS SOCIETY BRANCH

The Red Cross Society needs money, more and more all the time. Maybe you want to help but haven't any money to spare, but perhaps you have got a table or chair, a pig or a horse, a sack of vegetables, or a candlestick or something else you don't need or won't miss.

If so, bring it in to Mr. Walter Bellamy who has kindly offered to sell any articles so received and all proceeds will be turned over to the local Branch.

Receipts for all articles will be sent in due course to the donors.

The membership campaign decided upon at a recent general meeting of the Tofield Branch has resulted in 78 members (new and renewed) with total donations of $130.25.

Quite a number of these donations were from residents of Tofield but there were also a large number from the surrounding district.

At a recent executive meeting it was decided to serve lunch at conveniently located auction sales, providing the person having the sale was agreeable. Private arrangements for lunch had already been made in regard to sales already advertised, but those contemplating having a sale would confer a favor on the committee if they would notify the secretary, Mr. Allan at the bank, whether they would be willing for the Red Cross to serve lunch at their sale.

PARCELS GET MIXED

Monday, March 2nd, among the passengers carried by the bus from Edmonton to Lindbrook and Tofield were two who possessed brown paper parcels of similar appearance. At Lindbrook one of the passengers left the bus taking one of the parcels and at Tofield another passenger left the bus doing the same thing.

The parcel that should have been taken off at Lindbrook but which was brought on to Tofield contained two shirts, one pair of pants, one cap and one pair of mitts. The parcel taken off at Lindbrook contained two baby shirts, one baby blanket, 10 yards of white flannelette.

The parcel containing the man's apparel is in the Mercury Office so if the other parcel owner will drop in and make the exchange, everything will be set right again.

WILD GEESE RETURNED FROM SOUTH ON MONDAY

Two wild geese that were raised at the Oulton farm just west of town returned from Tennessee or thereabouts on Monday, March 9th. This is the earliest that geese have returned to the farm, says Mr. Oulton, but a few years ago some returned on March 11th. Mr. Oulton has received bands from Tennessee and he believes that the two that returned Monday came from that area.

It is fairly well known that wild geese mate for life and it is interesting to know that one of the geese, a gander, returning on Monday returned to his mate who had remained on the farm all winter.

Mrs. A. Bennie returned from Trochu on Friday last. She spent several weeks visiting her parents there.

CAVEAT TIME IS NOW HERE

Ratepayers are reminded that the secretary-treasurer is compelled by law to make a tax arrears list of all lands upon which the 1940 taxes have not been paid. This list must be made some time in March and duplicate copies forwarded to the Provincial Registrar. The Registrar then files a caveat against the lands listed. It is greatly to the advantage of ratepayers to prevent their lands going on the tax caveat list, and to do this, 1940 taxes must be paid before March 20th, 1942.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Edmonton, March 9—Alberta farmers are again warned by Department of Agriculture veterinarians that there is danger of an outbreak of sleeping sickness this year, and that early vaccination of horses with "chick" vaccine will prevent any outbreak developing into epidemic proportions. Cases reported last year came from widely separated sections of this province, [illegible] wide infection. It is now generally accepted that humans may contract the disease, so vaccination becomes a matter of national concern, in addition to a growing economic factor in the nation at war.

A plan for investment of life insurance profits derived from Alberta in a housing scheme for Albertans was voiced in the Legislature this week, when Hon. Solon E. Low wound up the budget debate. The Provincial Treasurer said that revenue collected by life and fire companies in 1940 exceeded disbursements by $3,073,872, and that this sum was typical of the surplus over four recent years. This profit, he said, could have been used to build 2,400 homes with $5,000 each. What has actually been done? Not one single home in Alberta has been built under the Federal housing act. Mr. Low claimed the province has tried to enter a tri-partite agreement with the dominion government and mortgage concerns to secure investments, but the latter backed down.

Organization plans for the larger municipal districts call for not more than seven erections during the current year, it was stated in the Legislature by Hon. Lucien Maynard. Mr. A. Speakman, Independent leader, had asked for an assurance as to [illegible] scope of present plans. Mr. Maynard said there was no detailed plan for the whole province, that Improvement Districts are not being included, that several M.D.'s have indicated desire to be included in larger units and that natural boundaries are followed where feasible.

A plan for the revision of Alberta's high school curriculum is being started by the department of education, and first changes are expected early this year in Grade 10. One feature is the establishment of curriculum study groups, composed of parents, teachers and administration representatives, to study high school curricula. Some have been already organized and are at work. It is felt, according to Dr. G. Fred McNally, deputy minister, that this method is the more democratic way of altering the curriculum. Local A.T.A. units will aid in setting up the groups.

Many 1942 license plates are beginning to appear, and the provincial secretary's department reports a strong demand for them. The plates are available one month earlier than usual in order to permit drivers to obtain gasoline rations on April 1.

Formulation of a national coal policy and the grading of Alberta coal so that only products of suitable hardness will reach eastern markets were among the policies urged by Gordon E. Taylor, Drumheller M.L.A. when he spoke in the budget debate. Mr. Taylor believed the time is ripe for a grading system to be established. He urged that the Alberta government call together federal, provincial, operator and miner representatives for the purpose of framing policy.

Now that the budget debate is ended, members of the assembly are forecasting prorogation in about two weeks. Practically all major government legislation has been introduced [illegible] scanning of the estimates remains the biggest job on hand. It is expected that another debt protection bill will be introduced, together with amendments to The School Act, The University Act and some minor bills.

Satisfaction was expressed in Government circles Thursday when word came that Prime Minister King had announced in the Commons that the agreement had been reached relative to building an Alaska Highway through Edmonton. Thus was vindicated the claims of many pioneer northerners and the promotional efforts of government to have the Inland Route recognized as that best favoured by nature for a defense highway. U.S. Troops were in Alberta Thursday, and more are expected immediately to commence construction of what may well prove the most important road in the world.

CHANGE IN SHIPMENT OF EGGS TO BRITAIN

On Wednesday, February 11th, it was announced from Ottawa that no more eggs in the shell would be shipped to Britain from Canada for the duration of the War and that all eggs would have to be forwarded in the dry or powdered form. Many have taken this to mean the cancellation of egg contracts to Britain but the fact of the matter is that a Special Products Board in Ottawa have agreed to purchase all the eggs that were to go to Britain on contract and to have these eggs routed to the four drying plants now in operation or to store them and use them as required and they have agreed to take these eggs at the contract prices so that very definitely the market will be stabilized until May the 31st and after that is is quite evident that new contracts will be obtainable.

PHOSPHORUS DEFICIENCY IN LAMBS

A case of phosphorus deficiency in lambs was recently brought to the attention of Dr. T. Lloyd Jones, Animal Pathologist, Department of Agriculture.

A lamb from a district near Edmonton was brought to the Veterinary Laboratory with such severe lameness of both front and hind legs that it could not walk or stand upright without assistance. The owner was advised to put lambs showing similar symptoms on a course of treatment using phosphoric acid. On the third day after treatment a spectacular recovery was reported and on the fourth day the owner abandoned the treatment because of the difficulty of catching the lambs.

The treatment recommended by Dr. Jones was as follows: A dessert spoonful of 10 per cent phosphoric acid to be given twice daily in a little milk for three days. This dose may be reduced to a teaspoonful twice daily for the following four days.

A few cases of this disease show up every spring. It is probable that the condition is essentially a lack of phosphorus in the rations of the breeding flock. Phosphorus can be provided in the ration by feeding a mineral such as mono-calcium phosphate.

THE EXPLOIT WHICH WON A NEW ZEALANDER THE V.C.

During the British fighting in Greece, a German armoured column containing armoured cars, 2" guns, 3" mortars and two 6" guns converged on a large force of British and New Zealand troops. The order to retreat was given to the Allied forces, but Sergt. John Daniel Hinton shouting "To hell with this: who'll come with me?" ran to within several yards of the nearest gun, which fired but missed him. He hurled two grenades which completely wiped out the crew, then went in with his bayonet, as depicted in this artist's impression followed by other New Zealanders. The enemy retreated into two houses, where they were held until overwhelming German forces arrived. Hinton fell with a bullet wound in the stomach and was taken prisoner.

Britain's Share

Editorial from the Christian Science Monitor, Saturday, February 7th

It ought not to be necessary to point out that in this war the people of the British Isles have done their share—and then some. But some folks have short memories—or big ears for Axis propaganda. Too many Americans believe that men from the Dominions or the Colonies have done most of the British fighting. This is one of the fallacies on which they base suspicions which hamper their own contribution to the United Nations war effort. For that reason the figures just released on British casualties may be useful.

They show that up to November more than 70 per cent of the casualties in British land forces came from England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. If the sea and air forces were considered, the share of the United Kingdom would be much larger. For men who have held the oceans and the skies against the Axis come chiefly from the British Isles. If civilians be counted—and who would say that the gallant Britons who dug out of the ruins of their homes and beat back fire and fear were not fighting?—then the percentage would mount again.

This is, of course, no reflection on fighting men from the Dominions and Colonies. For who has not heard of the splendid exploits of the Aussies and New Zealanders? It may be that London has purposely publicized the deeds of men from the Dominions or that a dislike of boasting has played down the part of English, Welsh, Scots, and Irish from the home islands. Other factors too have affected our impressions. The Canadians, although making a magnificent contribution, have to their own disgust, missed most of the action, while the South Africans and Indians have operated chiefly in Ethiopia or Libya, out of news-camera range.

It is not the people of the Dominions or Colonies who carp. They know that the British Isles have furnished more than their share of men and money. It is Americans who seem to be so concerned about the outlying partners in the British Commonwealth. It is the kind of American who boasts of America's role as the arsenal of democracy and forgets that the United State's contribution is still largely in the appropriation stage, and forgets that even as a supplier of weapons [illegible] head Britain has produced more than 90 per cent of the weapons she is using and meanwhile has helped her allies.

The British Isles with roughly one-third of the population of the United States have spent about $48,000,000,000 on the war. Most of this is available now in war material, while despite vast appropriations, the United States has furnished so far only about $20,000,000,000 worth of fighting supplies. Britain has sent 1,000 tanks and 1,000 planes to Russia, while America is lagging behind the amounts promised. America is increasing the rate of her contribution rapidly, but the pace may be speeded by adequate appreciation of what others have done. — Reprinted for Distribution by Alberta Wheat Pool.

SAVE YOUR SACKS

War in the Orient has cut off the main supply of jute, the raw material of burlap, and farmers are advised to take good care of what sacks and bags they have on hand. It is quite important that sacks should be kept dry, as damp rots burlap quickly. They also should be shaken out and spread out of the way of mice. Save your sacks because it may be a long time before ample supplies are again available. The entire output of canvas and duck has been allotted for military purposes.

RUSSIA

By Edna Jaques in the Wheat Pool [illegible]

All their red blood they pour in crimson streams,
To save their country from the conqueror's tread,
Fighting like demons in the blazing dawn
Behind the ghostly windrows of their dead.

From a far hill the smoking cannons [illegible]
Like the cornered beasts who fight to the last breath,
The red hot hammers swing their mighty blows
Speeding their flaming messengers of death.

The tired soldiers dazed with sweat [illegible]
Reel on their feet yet work with desperate haste,
To stem the fearful tide that surges [illegible]
Like the red flood across the country's waste.

We thought them doomed—but now with mounting pride
We watch the brave and valiant fight they wage,
A million heroes writing line by line
Their deathless story on Earth's scarlet page.

As foot by foot and day by breathless day
Back over back the enemy is hurled,
While men fight on, knee deep in their own dead
And hold the precious ramparts of the world.

TESTED RECIPES

Corn syrup may be used as a sweetening agent in many types of foods. In any food product, you can replace 25 per cent of the sugar with syrup. Don't forget that it is only half as sweet as sugar by measure, so you must use twice as much syrup as the amount of sugar specified. In custards, puddings, beverages and sauces you may use corn syrup as the only sweetening, but use twice as much as sugar and reduce liquid by one-fourth. In baking, substitute the syrup for sugar, measure for measure, and reduce the liquid by one-third.

[illegible] rules for sugar substitutes will start you off on the conservation drive. But this is only part of the story. More important, keep a sharp eye out for sugar waste. Experiment to see if the amount of sugar you use on your breakfast cereal, for instance, isn't just a habit. Try a little less and see if you don't like it just as well. Serve fruit with cereal and you'll need less sugar, particularly if you use dried fruits. Or use honey instead of sugar.

Do make liberal use of all fresh dried, or canned fruits. Think how appetizing a colorful fresh fruit salad is for dessert! Try fruit whips made with naturally sweet dried fruits. If you like them a little sweeter, add a little honey.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

Director, Research Department, Searle

Eleven years of work by the "Crop Testing Plan"—during which period some 170,000 farmers' fields of wheat have been tested and analysed—have revealed that an average of 34 per cent of these fields contain bad mixtures instead of one good recommended variety suitable for the district.

These bad mixtures yield less than a good variety, and give grain of a lower quality, so that any farmer growing such a mixture loses considerable money.

The sadness is that most farmers who are growing these mixtures believe they are growing a really good variety, for the [illegible] that usually only a trained Plant Breeder or Cerealist can detect the difference between good and bad varieties.

The only way a farmer can be absolutely sure that his crop is made up of a good variety which will produce the maximum yield and grade, is to have a sample of his seed tested for trueness-to-variety. The "Crop Testing Plan" will gladly [illegible] this free. It is only necessary for any farmer to give a sample of a few ounces of the seed he intends to use to any Elevator Agent of the Companies which are sponsoring the "Crop Testing Plan", or to mail such a sample direct to the "Crop Testing Plan", 341 Grain Exchange Building, Winnipeg.

THREE CENT BONUS ON GRADE A EGGS

As announced some time ago, the Special Products Board in Ottawa are paying the three cent bonus on all grade A eggs required to fill the contract on eggs to Great Britain and many letters and enquiries are being received by wholesalers, grading stations, storemen, etc., as to how the producers can obtain this bonus.

As it is impossible to segregate the eggs for the domestic market from those to be exported, grade A eggs on the market were lifted three cents as soon as the bonus went into effect meaning that all grade A eggs are receiving the three cent bonus whether they are shipped overseas or are used on the domestic market and to our knowledge all wholesalers are paying this bonus.

There is no need for any producer or first receiver to register in any manner to receive the bonus. The only requirement is that A grade eggs be produced and that they be handled in such a way that that quality is maintained as the bonus is only paid on grade A eggs.

ROADS AND VICTORY BONDS—

THE SUGGESTION MADE at the special meeting of council that the money normally spent in new road construction done by the large units be used to purchase Victory Bonds needs considerable thought.

First of all, it might be wise to outline the method adopted by the District in planning and financing road work for a season. At one of the early meetings in the year, a budget is drawn up by the secretary. The budget is really a list of all probable expenditures for the year. The figures in the budget are derived from the experience of previous years and in this way the proposed and probable expenditures in any one budget are based on the accumulated knowledge of a number of years.

On the basis of the total figures in the budget and as applied to the total assessment, a mill rate is set, and the mill rate together with the assessment determine the amount of taxes to be paid.

In the budget is listed a certain amount for public works. This includes roads and this amount is usually equally divided between the six divisions with a small sum to the Hamlet of Kingman. Last year the amount budgeted for public works was $9,000.00. This includes labour, machinery and repairs, and of course included maintenance as well as new construction. Last year the proportion spent on the big unit for road construction and the two patrol graders for maintenance was roughly fifty-fifty. Last year the large unit worked in four divisions of the six.

The proposal is to budget as usual, levy as usual, collect as usual, but instead of spending the amount budgeted for roads to spend only a portion of it for maintenance and purchase Victory Bonds with the remainder. The accumulated savings could be used for road work when the war is over.

There is no doubt that the democracies are just now finding themselves very hard pressed. The adverse Pacific situation has come on so rapidly, that to us here, living as we have always lived with a sense of security from actual warfare, it is difficult to realize the situation is as bad as it really is. It will take many months and at a very great cost to retrieve the Pacific losses of the past two or three months—and there is the Atlantic and the Mediterranean with all that those names imply.

To what extent peace time economy should be cut in order to benefit war time economy is a matter of personal opinion. If you asked most men this question they would say to the limit, but if you asked them what the limit was they would find difficulty in defining it. Obviously there is a point below which normal living conditions should not be lowered except under government order or compulsion, but where that point lies in the matter of rural road construction we hesitate to try and say. Most rural road work has been and still is being done after a period of waiting. The district is still emerging from the pioneer stage and after a group of farmers have waited twenty years or more for a road out from their farms, it is a genuine disappointment not to get it when finally their turn has arrived.

We feel that now the suggestion has been made, the decision lies in the hands of the ratepayers themselves. They could either individually or collectively acquaint their councillor of their wishes in the matter. The occasional meeting might help.

CONGRATULATIONS –

The local and district Victory Bond sales organization are to be congratulated on the success of their recent effort. Under the direction of Geo. B. Brace, chairman, and A. J. H. McCauley, unit organizer, as announced elsewhere, the quota was handsomely over subscribed. The task called for considerable time and effort on the part of the workers and there is genuine satisfaction in knowing that their efforts were crowned with success.

A HOME GUARD FOR TOFIELD?

LAST WEEK'S Vegreville Observer carried a front page article regarding Air Raid Defense for Vegreville. The article was captioned with a quotation from Browning, "How scared they would look and how unprepared!" Written by Helen Evans Reid, the article points out that there is no reason to believe we in this area are immune from attack by air and goes into considerable detail as to air raid precautions for that town.

It had not occurred to us that air raid precautions for this area were immediately required, though many areas that felt quite secure have been disastrously raided, but we have had in mind for some long time, the formation of some kind of a volunteer home guard. As a fighting force it probably would not rank so very high, but in the case of emergency it could take charge of local activities and could be trained along that line. A little drill, a few practices, some rifle instruction and a few well thought out lectures could easily be the means of preventing wide spread confusion should an emergency arise.

SINGLE CAR PLATE PLAN FOR ALBERTA

Alberta motorists may carry one instead of two number plates on their cars next year.

An amendment to the Vehicles and Highway Traffic Act which has been introduced in the legislature gives the provincial secretary (Hon. E. C. Manning) authority to authorize the issue of a single number plate or marker, if such action is deemed expedient.

This action has been taken in view of the expectation that owing to war conditions, there will be considerable difficulty in obtaining metal for number plates.

The marker may be a plastic or any other material which may be secured, while the form, design and manner of display will be covered by according to officials of the Alberta.

Adoption of the single license plan will be discussed at the midsummer meeting of directors of the A.M.A.

On Wednesday evening, March 4, a party was given at the home of Mrs. F. Shupe, by her daughter, Mrs. Irma Simpson, who is home on a visit. The occasion was Mrs. Shupe's birthday. Court whist was the order of the evening and six tables were in play. After the game a dainty lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Adele Goubault, the chief item being a lovely birthday cake replete with candles alight. Mrs. Shupe did a good job of blowing them out, one blow and poof—out. Mrs. Shupe was the recipient of many nice birthday presents from friends around and so here's "Many Happy Returns of the day, Mrs. Shupe, from all the rest of us.

The attendance at the free movie show at the Hall last Saturday was very good, and so was the show, exceptionally so, and everyone present enjoyed it immensely. The next one will be held on Saturday, April 4th, at 8:30 p.m. and the operator reports that the next one will be exceptionally good, so he hopes that all of you will turn out to see it.

After the show last Saturday, an attempt to hold a meeting, or rather a talk on the question as to what subjects the people really wanted taught in the High School curriculum. We didn't seem to get anywhere, chiefly because it's a thing one cannot talk off hand and many don't even know just what subjects are included in the curriculum now. This debate should call for the honor of a special evening to itself where all those interested can get together and air their views on the matter. It is too serious a matter to take up at 11 p.m. after a movie show.

Another thing we would all like to know and that is this: A film was shown called "Bacon for Britain." Well, we folks around here raise a bit of that stuff so naturally this film interested us. We noted the advice to treat our hogs gently, etc., etc., in fact it reminded one of the "Our Sergeant Major" song, "Tuck me in my little trundle bed, etc", and then after the demise of the beloved hog, the kindly care and solicitude with which the remains were handled in the plants, culminating in the final passing for No. 1 fit for export to Britain. It seems that out of about 6 or 7 carcases, only one is fit to represent Canada in the British breakfast nooks in caves, cellars, etc. What we would like to know is, What happens to the 5 or 6 rejected ones?

LAKESHORE

The passing of Mr. T. W. Ferguson means to Lakeshore district the loss of a good neighbor whose sterling character won him many friends during the years he resided here. He was a man who found his greatest pleasure in his home and work, and whose integrity had gained the respect of all who knew him. Because he was seldom away from home he will be greatly missed by the family, and the sincere sympathy of the entire district is extended to them. There was a large attendance of Lakeshore people at the funeral on Sunday in spite of bad roads, which fact as well as the large number of floral tributes attested to the high esteem in which Mr. Ferguson was held by his neighbors.

Mrs. T. W. Ferguson returned home from the hospital last Friday.

Last week saw the start of a series of diminishing teas sponsored by the War Workers' Club. It is hoped that the rounds will be completed before the March meeting on the 26th, at Mrs. G. Bailey's,—and before the pressure of seasonal work is too great.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Tofield United Church parsonage at seven o'clock last Saturday evening, when Eileen Phillips, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Phillips, became the bride of Conrad Simonson of Kingman. Erline White and Patrick Phillips attended the bride and groom. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Simonson extend sincere wishes for a life of happiness and prosperity to the young couple.

Friday of last week, and what we saw was a hay team hooked to a flat sleigh with some five passengers, hitting for the dance at Deville.

It is understood that Isabelle Kyle has joined the C.W.A.A. Here's wishing you luck, Isabelle.

Bill Barrow left for the city on Monday with the intention of joining the army. Bill returned home by bus that evening telling the writer he wasn't old enough. He was told to come back in the month of May. We wish you better luck next time, Bill.

Mr. A. C. Hoover was in the city on Tuesday getting some furniture repaired.

BEHIND THE HOG
By A.B.C.

Now that the Curling season has drawn to a close, it is with relief or regret, according to the way one looks at it, that we close this column till another Curling Season rolls around. At this time we wish to congratulate the officers of the Club for the very efficient manner in which the Club was conducted this season. We also wish to thank Mr. Worton for the space we were allowed in the Mercury.

In making our 3 Star selection, we have to give Rex Hoyles the first star as the most outstanding Rookie of the season, and to our old friend Stan Yakabuski goes the second star as the most graceful curler in the club, while to "Never Imler goes the third star as the best hollerer in the club. If we had any more stars, we would certainly give two or three to Gerald Hosler. Gerald knows his Frozen Water, also his Curling rocks, which he always has placed on the ice for the ladies. And his score boards were a marvel—all lit up.

The three foods that will keep the curlers in condition for next season are breakfast, dinner and supper.

* * *

And it is praiseworthy to note that in the winter—Keep cool in a tight spot—but in the summer it is more fun to keep tight in a cool spot. He was a wholesome [illegible] He holds some six pints.

* * *

And so we close the season with just a little poem to the Always Faithful:

They fill the many offices, and are always in the spot,
No matter what the weather, though
it may be very hot,
It may be cold and rainy, but they are tried and true,
The ones you can rely on are the Always Faithful Few.
If it were not for these curlers, whose shoulders at the wheel,
Keep the institution moving without a halt or heel,
What would be the fate of curling,
where there is so much to do
They surely would be failures but for the Always Faithful Few.

We hope you have enjoyed this column as much as we have enjoyed writing it.

And for my last Brain Wave—Never an Idle Mind, but bred an Idle thought.

BRITISH HEALTH STANDING THE STRAIN

One of the most remarkable features of wartime Britain is the maintenance of the people's health, in spite of all the privation, hardships, long working hours and mental anxiety. The population is much fitter than the experts dared to hope at the outbreak of war. The fear of a serious deterioration in health and of the outbreak of epidemics, has, so far, proved groundless.

If the people's health had shown any serious decline, this would have been reflected in a mounting number of deaths. The quarterly number of deaths (including non-civilian deaths) in England and Wales since 1939 is shown in the table on the second page taken from the returns of the Registrar-General.

Except in the first quarter of 1940, there has been only a comparatively small increase. The sharp rise then was due, in the main, not to the war but to the exceptionally severe weather in the early part of that year which brought an increase in the incidence of influenza, bronchitis and pneumonia. There was a similar increase of deaths for the same reason in the first quarter of 1933.

Some increase in death rates has been unavoidable for reasons that have nothing to do with ill health. Air raids have taken a toll of life, while the blackout has been responsible for a growth in accidents, especially motor vehicle mishaps.

Accidents in factories have been more numerous also because many hundreds of thousands of the new war workers had no previous experience in handling machinery and because of the increase in weekly working hours. While the increase in accidents can be attributed to the war, it does not reflect health deterioration. The Government has taken steps to reduce the accident rate by enforcing precautionary measures and by discouraging excessively long [illegible] of work which lead to fatigue and ill-health.

The toll of life due to diseases such as diptheria, influenza, measles, cancer, rheumatic fever, pneumonia, has shown very little increase. Nor has there been any epidemic of suicides, the figure for which is often an indication of national morale. The rate of suicides has actually fallen. In the first quarter of 1941, the number of suicides in England and Wales was 1,064 against 1,243 in the first quarter of 1939.

Tofield Salvage Campaign Now Under Way

A planned concerted effort is now being made throughout the Tofield area to collect and place in channels where it will do the most good, surplus scrap of all kinds. Sponsored by [illegible] Tofield Town Council plans have been made whereby it is hoped that quite a little scrap may be collected and which in turn [illegible] add appreciably to Canada's war effort.

Mr. Chas. Everitt of Tofield will look after and temporarily store scrap of all kinds and townspeople may take what scrap they have to him.

As regards the country, suitable scrap may be taken to the nearest school, from where if there is 1000 pounds or more it will be picked up and brought to town. Any country people who wish to bring their scrap in to Mr. Everitt direct, of course may do so.

As an indication as to what is useful we list the following:

Paper: This should be, if waste paper, compressed into compact tight bundles. If newspapers or magazines, tying in neat bundles is sufficient.

Rubber: Tires, tubes, broken pieces or whole, balls, sponges, mats, hose, in fact anything made out of live rubber. This is an important salvage item.

Metal: Cast iron, steel, lead, in fact any kind of metal is of value. Parts of broken machinery make a valuable contribution.

Glass, bottles and rags: good clean whole bottles are of more value than broken ones, but broken glass has its value too. It is added to the mass when new glass is being made. Rags should be clean and tied in bundles.

When sufficient scrap has been collected it will be sold and the proceeds turned over to the Tofield branch of the Red Cross Society.

On motion by councillor Swabey, Mrs Donald was issued $14.00 emergency relief.

The secretary's bond came up for attention and was renewed for another year.

Re-engagement of the secretary then took place during which a discussion centred around the secretary's salary. The general feeling was that anyone who understood the amount of work done in the office had few complaints to make.

On motion of Reeve Walker, J. Letourneau was engaged as secretary treasurer at $1700.00 per year with $100.00 allowance for help.

The minutes of the annual ratepayers' meeting were read. As regards the recommendation regarding bovine tubercular restricted area, petitions circulated last year were brought out and looked over.

On the motion of councillor Swabey it was decided to send them into the Department with the information that council desired the department to take steps to make a bovine tubercular restricted area of the territory

F. E. McDaniels Speaks At Poultry Meeting

Saturday afternoon, a Poultry meeting sponsored by the poultrymen of this district and put on by the Department of Agriculture, was held in the Variety Theatre. Mr. J. [illegible], chairman of the meeting, introduced the speaker, Mr. F. E. McDaniels, poultry fieldman, who is well known to poultry raisers here. Mr. McDaniels spoke on "The Care and Management of Poultry." In addition to his address, there were 2 films shown, the first dealing with Poultry and the second with T.B. in swine and cattle. Mr. J. L. Kerns, district agriculturist, also spoke briefly on "Warble Flies in Cattle and Sleeping Sickness in Horses."

During his address, Mr. McDaniels stressed the importance of Grade A eggs. He said in part: The egg market to Great Britain calls for 40 million dozens of eggs. Up to the present, they have allowed up to 60 per cent Grade B eggs, but it is found that these did not stand shipping, so the new quota has been made 87 per cent A's, making it important for farmers to produce highest possible quality eggs. To do this, it is necessary to keep birds confined to buildings, yard property and to keep eggs clean. Birds allowed to have access to barnyards produce lower quality eggs and dark colored yolks, (inferior quality). Eggs exported to Great Britain are now sent in the dried form, taking one-fifth the space as formerly. There are three large drying plants located at Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Trenton. It is expected one will be opened in Edmonton in the near future. In order to produce the goods, these plants are going 24 hours a day. In order of preference, eggs stand third in food to Britain. The Dominion Government is paying a 3-cent bonus on grade A eggs. All grade A eggs sold get this bonus, so it is not necessary to apply for it, as people are already receiving it. The poultry in storage is nearly twice as large as it was last year. The government is advocating "Eat more Poultry" and it has been suggested that a Poultry Day a week may solve the problem.

Also Care and Management of Baby Chicks, Proper Feed Supplements and Poultry Sanitation was touched upon.

Clutterham; Vice-pres., M. W. McDonnel; Sec-Treas., J. E. Stinson, re-elected. The Ice Committee, Ray Coutts and the Executive, Geo McFadzean, Ral Currie and Reg McCarthy. A vote of thanks was proposed to the retiring president, Geo. McFadzean, and a few bouquets were handed to Mr Stinson for his splendid work as secretary during the season.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

The Japanese conquests in the Pacific have almost completely cut off our vital supplies of fats and oils that are required for making paints, varnishes, linoleums, soaps and particularly glycerine which is an essential base of high explosives for war purposes.

These oils and glycerine have been made in the past from cocoanuts, tung, the castor oil plant, palm kernels and soy beans, imported from China, Japan, and the Islands of the Pacific.

It is found that linseed oil from the flax plant as grown in Canada will take the place of most of these imported oils and glycerines. It is most vitally urgent, therefore, for our war purposes, that the flax acreage of Canada should be increased. To encourage our Western prairie farmers to do this the price of flax has been set at a good high price—$2.25 a bushel for No. 1 C.W. flax basis Fort William. This is almost three times the new proposed price of wheat at the average country point.

It will certainly now be a paying proposition for farmers to grow flax on some of the clean summerfallow they have set aside for wheat. Most certainly it will be a highly patriotic thing to do, for it will help to prevent a feared serious shortage of explosives needed for shells and bombs for our Navy, Army and Air Forces.

FEEDS TO MAKE GAINS IN HOGS FOR BRITAIN

For the past 18 years, experiments have been conducted at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta, to determine the feeding of tankage to swine. These tests included comparisons of hogs which were fed tankage indoors and on pasture; hogs in dry lot, fed grain alone and grain and tankage; and hogs, fed grain alone on pasture, and grain and tankage on pasture, as well as tests to determine the best level of feeding tankage both indoors and on pasture. Tankage is a packing-house by-product consisting mainly of thoroughly cooked and sterilized powdered meat and bone scraps.

Experimental results indicate that pigs confined indoors to sanitary feeding pens and fed a grain ration properly supplemented with feeds high in proteins, mineral substances, and vitamins make faster and more economical gains than pigs fed similar feeds under outside conditions in a pasture lot. In one test, Yorkshire pigs fed indoors on a grain ration supplemented with salt, tankage and cod liver oil made more rapid gains and required less feed to make 100 pounds gain than similar pigs fed outside with access to an annual pasture mixture of oats and rye on a ration the same except that cod liver oil was not included. The saving in feed amounted to approximately 40 pounds for each 100 pounds increase in the live weight of the pigs.

The results of this test would indicate that where sanitary feeding pens are available, and when protein supplements are provided in adequate amounts, pasture is not necessary for growing and finishing bacon hogs. However, for growing gilts and boars for breeding purposes, or for carrying breeding stock, boars and sows, pasture and exercise are very valuable. Further information will be found in publication 727 "Tankage: its Value in Swine Feeding", a copy of which may be obtained free by writing to the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, March 16—With the Alaska Highway now in the first stages of construction, government circles are bent on maintaining the campaign for the actual Mackenzie river route, which is considered best of all. The present route, it is obvious is intended as a feeder and an auxiliary to the chain of airports which was constructed since the war began. That work on the project is considered urgent is evidenced by the great quantities of equipment now being rushed by rail to the end of steel.

V V V

Economic aspects of the new route are considered of great importance to Alberta. The vast mineral resources of the North country will be brought within feeder distance of the main road, and development of these will in turn create markets for northern agricultural products. It has been rumored that British capital will seek areas in the north for postwar development, and that this will attract population which will form the basis of a new industrial empire.

V V V

A call for 1,000 additional A.R.P. workers has been sounded in Edmonton by the V.V.R., provincial home guard organization of veteran fighting men which is engaged in local raid precautions. The V.V.R. acted as wardens in the recent trial blackout, and now intends to create a well trained and capable organization prepared for anything.

V V V

Through the co-operation of the provincial minister of Health, Dr. W. W. Cross, and Dr. Robert Newton, acting president of the university, space to house a Red Cross blood-processing plant will be made available in the university buildings. Technical supervision of the plant and its operation will be exercised by the provincial laboratory and the department of biochemistry. Blood donated by Edmontonians will be processed into plasma for use in Alberta and for shipment to other Red Cross centres. A total of 4,000 donors is sought and there are three enrolment depots, at the Banque Canadienne Nationale, the Garneau Theatre foyer and a store-site near 101 street and 102 avenue in the downtown district.

V V V

Alberta farmers were again urged by Hon. D. B. MacMillan, agriculture minister, to increase coarse grain acreage during the present crop year in a statement issued Thursday. Ottawa prices for these grains are "reasonable" he said, but pointed out that the real price is obtained through conversion of the products into meat, dairy or poultry commodities. "Investigations reveal that when barley is fed to hogs that sell for 10 cents a pound live weight the barley so fed makes a return of 85 to 90 cents a bushel on the farm. This is on the farm, with no freight or elevator charges deducted," he said.

V V V

Formal action to increase old age pensions by $5 a month was taken in the Legislature Wednesday when the Bill was introduced and given first reading. Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer, sponsored the Bill. According to the Budget address, the new supplementary allowance would cost $600,000 annually, divided among some 10,300 pensioners at an average of $5. This will raise the pension to $25, on an average basis.

V V V

Including an increase of $96,000 over the previous figures, an appropriation of $2,143,600 for new roads and maintenance was passed by the Legislature this week. The $96,000 increase was earmarked for new main highway work. For district highways the total is $225,000, including an increase of $1,500. Maintenance on main and district highways was given a vote of $775,000 for the first named and $300,000 for the second.

V V V

Introduction of the new bill to amend the University Act brought into prominence the recommendations made by the special survey committee whose report was made to the government January 20. The report recommended that the Governors should control the University and the Senate's power should be reduced. Pending printing of the Bill full details will not be known.

V V V

A bill to amend the Soldiers' Relief Act of 1940 introduced this week gives the government power to appoint a three-member commission to assist and advise soldiers in connection with their monetary obligations, and to co-operate with the public administrator in the performance of duties relating to soldiers' estates. The commission shall also consider and determine applications for permits to take or carry on action against a soldier or his wife or dependents, whether judicial or extra-judicial. This feature is to make up the protective features lost when the Debt Adjustment Act was declared ultra vires.

V V V

The province has no power to stop Japanese from British Columbia entering Alberta, according to Premier Aberhart. Confirming reports that numbers of these people were arriving in Southern Alberta, Mr. Aberhart said in the Legislature that the province could protest and probably would take some action along this line. R.C.M.P. had up to that time informed the Premier that four families had arrived. It is said that much greater numbers are expected, and local Canadian-Legion bodies are protesting.

V V V

Among new bills introduced in the Legislature are: a bill to prohibit Hutterites or enemy aliens from buying lands for the war's duration; bills to amend the Credit Union Act, the Legislative Assembly Act, the Public Services Act and the Solemnization of Marriages Act. Total for the present session is now past the fifty mark, considered light in comparison with previous sessions.

REASON FOR DELAY IN BONUS PAYMENTS

When queried in the House of Commons as to the reason for the delay in the payment of wheat acreage reduction bonuses earned by western farmers in the year 1941, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, said this was due principally to discrepancies in crop acreage statements put in by the farmers.

The minister said that 196,000 farmers made application and 182,000 of them have been paid about $27 million up to the end of February. Most of these have been paid their full amount, but there were between 20,000 and 25,000 whose claims still had to be adjusted.

Stafford Cripps: Prophetic Rebel

Editor's Note: The following is a review of the book "Stafford Cripps, Prophetic Rebel," by Eric Estorick. The Review was written by Mary J. Crawford and published in the People's Weekly of February 28th. The copy of the People's Weekly was sent to us by Mr. F. U. Molme with the request that we reprint it.

Here is a full account of the career of the man whose voice came to us in clear rich tones on Sunday last as he told the story of the heroic Russian crusade against the Nazi scourge, the man on whom attention is focussed today on both sides of the Atlantic; the man who may, indeed, hold the key to the future of the English-speaking world.

Born in 1889 Cripps, like Nehru cratic family whose liberal con- cratic family whose "liberal conscience" led him away from the customary pursuits of his class to the service of the working people. He is the son of the late Lord Parmoor and the nephew of Beatrice Webb. At Oxford he took a degree in science and during World War 1, he was called back from France to manage an explosives factory. From science he turned to law in which his brilliance was at once apparent. By 1930 as a patent lawyer he was commanding by far the highest fees in the country. He always gave freely of his services to defend cases of the workers, and it was largely the knowledge he gained through these professional activities that led him finally into the political arena on the side of the people.

Joins Labor Party

During the 1920's he devoted much time to the work of a World Alliance for promoting International Friendship through the churches. This experience convinced him that the only way to get action was by political methods, so in 1929 he joined the Labor Party. Circumstances and the terrific onrush of events pushed him rapidly to the forefront. In 1930 he became Solicitor-General in Macdonald's second government and was knighted as is the custom of that office.

After the debacle of 1931, Labor took a pretty bad beating at the polls and George Lansbury, Clement Attlee and Stafford Cripps were the only former ministers left to lead the Labour group of forty-six in the House of Commons. In the crisis of 1931-39 Cripps was undoubtedly the ablest debater in the House. He exposed the motives behind every bill by which the Tory government tried to clamp down Fascism on the British people, Fascism of the country-gentleman model, of course, but Fascism none the less.

Predicted Every Move

In foreign affairs he demanded that the government support collective security to which the nation was committed by its membership in the League. When Japan attacked Manchuria, Cripps stripped the cloak of appeasement from off the government policy and laid bare the selfish imperialist interests for what they were. He did it again and again at every new crisis—Ethiopia, Spain, the Rhineland, Austria, Czechoslovakia. With rare insight he predicted every move in the game and foresaw each fatal consequence.

Meanwhile he was pleading with the Labor party not to be caught by the machinations of Baldwin and Co. In 1937 when all was almost lost he entered upon the fore-doomed effort to bring about a united political front of all anti-Chamberlain elements. In that he was supported by Harold Laski, Ellen Wilkinson and D. N. Pritt. In January 1939, Cripps was expelled from the Labor party for a breach of party discipline. This part of his story is carefully documented. It merits thoughtful study.

Visits India, China

In September 1939 the government rejected the offer of his technical services for the duration of the war, so Sir Stafford decided to set off on a tour to discover what was being said and thought in other parts of the world. He visited India, discussed the basic demands of the National Congress with the leaders, and despatched to the Colonial office a draft constitution for Indian Dominion status. Next he met Chiang-Kai-Shek in Chungking and also Sir Archibald Kerr, then British ambassador to China. Cripps speaks highly of Kerr. He describes him as "a rarity in the British Foreign Service". Then he flew to Moscow to talk with Stalin, back to China, on to Japan, and home by way of the United States.

Demands Leadership

He reached England in April 1940. On May 8th he appeared in the House and demanded a change in leadership—or to be more accurate he demanded leadership. On May 11, Churchill succeeded Chamberlain and on May the 28th Cripps left on his mission to Moscow.

Early in 1941 he predicted that Germany would invade Russia before the end of June. He was back in England to report when the attack was launched and at once flew back to Moscow with a strong mission of military and economic experts. Just how much the influence of Cripps had to do with the course of events in the perilous months of 1940-41, we shall not know until the end of hostilities, but we do know that Hitler hates him. He shrieked the name of Cripps over the air the day his troops marched on Russia, blaming the British ambassador for the failure of Germany's non-aggression pact with Russia.

Today Sir Archibald Kerr is in Moscow and Cripps is back in England at his own request, up to something, we may be sure. Possibly he returned to lend a hand in the spring house-cleaning. The changes in the past few days have been heartening.

This book may not be popular biography. It lacks the personal anecdote and the lighter touches that make a best seller. But it is certainly what the writer Eric Estorick intended it to be, a serious sociological study; and as such it will interest profoundly the student of current social and political trends.

Farmers and Maximum Price Regulations

All of us are now subject to regulations which would have seemed impossible three years ago. Undoubtedly we shall be required to conform to many more, and who will complain?

It is quite a job keeping posted on regulations affecting business transactions, and many farmers must be uncertain as to their own responsibilities when selling their own produce or buying from others.

Farmers should know that transactions between primary producers of agricultural products, involving their own produce, are exempt from price ceiling regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Order No. 103 defines these exemptions and, in part, reads as follows:

"1 (a) sales, exchanges, or barters of hay, grain, seed, seed potatoes, onion bulbs, farm implements or repair parts, machinery or repair parts, sacks, fencing, fence posts, milk cans, stockings, nursery stock, cordwood, fertilizers, bees, bee supplies, livestock, meats, poultry, poultry products, farm-made dairy products, wool, hides and other agricultural products and supplies;

"1 (b) custom-milling, seed cleaning and other agricultural services."

The above provisions, however, do not apply to sales, exchanges or barters made for purposes of resale. All resales of products or articles are subject to maximum price regulations.

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

With the world conflagration spreading rapidly its spectacular and tentacular actions so that the flames of actual warfare are now almost reaching the shores of Canada, this non-partisan observer can report an astonishing story to the man-in-the-street, of what is going on behind the scenes in the nation's capital as the Government's staunch supporters and severe critics in and out of Parliament slash at one another without mercy in sharp verbal duels which are really being carried on to determine whether, the Government is or not waging a "total war effort" in its true meaning and in view of the circumstances.

It is pointed out along Parliament Hill that it is no longer a war in which Canada is engaged but where the actual fighting is being waged thousands of miles away in Europe, in Africa, in Asia, or elsewhere. Now, the actual fighting is moving close to this continent and to the shores of this country. It is definitely a "total war" and a different war from all others in which Canada has been engaged in the past.

But what is a "total war effort" at this time in the case of Canada?

In order to answer this principal question of the day, it must be stressed that final victory may not be possible without such a proper "total war effort." Since this comparatively young nation is passing through now its worst crisis in its history, it is not only not the proper time to consider pride, prejudice and formality but the cold facts must be faced straightforwardly in their immediate and real inferences. Therefore, it should be clear to the man-in-the-street throughout Canada that a "total war" cannot be won without a "total war effort" of the kind waged in moderate style.

Of course, it is generally acknowledged that such a "total war effort" is an inescapable obligation on the part of the people of Canada and the man-in-the-street knows that there is obviously no intention in this country to avoid such a maximum contribution to the whole cause of the democracies or United Nations pact of which Canada is a signatory. However, the most fiery advocates of such a "total war effort" in this country demand only one main point, and that is that the Government should establish full conscription of manpower for overseas service so that Canada may have a large standing army ready to serve anywhere in the world at any time. Without this accomplishment, they insist that Canada cannot be said to be waging a "total war effort." But there is another point. They do not want to think or talk about full conscription of wealth or resources which is possibly an essential qualification for "total war" in modern style. If the war has reached the stage where conscription of manpower for overseas service is now unavoidable for this country, then conscription of wealth or resources is necessary.

How can it be a "total war effort" without such a "total" conscription of human and material resources? How can there be a balanced and fairly distributed share of responsibility for all without a parallel form of conscription in all directions for all inhabitants, young or old, man or woman, rich or poor, each in accordance with his or her ability to fit into the "total war" machine of the country? Why should one Canadian merely be concerned mainly about lowering of his standards of luxury, including problems about new furniture, new cars, vacations, slight food inconveniences, and so forth, while another Canadian is fighting for his life? "Total war" means simply a "total" conscription of all human and material resources with justice to all inhabitants so that everyone should have enough to eat, a place to live in, and some clothes on the back. This is the policy in all countries engaged in "total war" in modern style.

For weeks and weeks the question of conscription of manpower for overseas has been debated in and out of Parliament with considerable heat. It is properly argued with common sense, that a policy of "total war" cannot tolerate any implied or expressed limitation. Undoubtedly this expresses the wishes and sentiments of the masses in this country. But it is peculiar that at the same time conscription of wealth or resources is not wanted at the moment. Indeed, the representatives of the people of Canada have sometimes come forth strongly against any immediate full conscription of wealth or resources, though many of them favour immediate full conscription of manpower for overseas.

This, of course, is an obvious inconsistency. Nevertheless, it is clear that there is no general agreement along Parliament Hill as to the true meaning of a "total war effort" in the case of Canada. There are different interpretations of "total war" requirements in the case of this country. But there are many well-informed persons in the nation's capital who hold that sooner or later there will be no possibility for the man-in-the-street to expect a "total war effort" in modern style to include full conscription of manpower and to exclude full conscription of wealth or resources. When this will happen will be determined by events or circumstances of war. In fact, Premier Mackenzie King himself has already dropped a hint on this point when during a speech in the House of Commons he remarked that if voluntary loans of wealth to the Government should ever fail, then wealth would be conscripted. "And it will be exactly the same thing in the raising of men," he added.

Furthermore, it can be reported that the war expenditures are mounting steadily and they are reaching stupendous figures. Although the last Victory Loan campaign was a genuine success in every manner and the people of Canada have already loaned to the Government for war purposes in this war over two billions of dollars, yet this is not enough, surprising as this statement may seem to the man-in-the-street. Since last November alone the war costs have involved an expenditure of about $125 a month for every head of the population and this figure is rising steadily. Indeed, it is expected in Ottawa that about sixty per cent of the total national income in this fiscal year may be used for war purposes in direct and indirect manner.

In other words, while phrase-mongers may use various modes of expression in or out of Parliament in discussing "total war" in the case of Canada, yet there is no agreement in general about the true meaning of a "total war effort" and in line with the circumstances of this country in this struggle, though there is not the slightest doubt along Parliament Hill that the danger is so great that under no circumstances will the Government hesitate even a moment to conscript fully and immediately all wealth or resources in the land if and when conditions shall warrant such a drastic action in this war. Canada is willing to pay the price for victory regardless how great the bill may be or what sacrifices may be entailed.

WHITE-FISH MEAL IN THE HOG RATION

(Experimental Farms News)

The possibility of lowering the feed cost of bacon production by reducing the amount of expensive high protein feeds necessary for satisfactory hog rations, has been investigated in a feeding test at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Nappan, Nova Scotia.

Four groups of twenty hogs each were fed varying levels of white-fish meal as the single high protein feed in a mixture of barley, oats and wheat, with 2 per cent of a mineral supplement, consisting of 40 parts each of ground limestone and bone meal and 20 parts of salt.

The possible decreasing protein requirement during growth was tested by dividing the time from the starting of the test, when the pigs were ten weeks of age, to finish weight into three feeding periods. The first feeding period extended from about 70 days of age until the pigs reached an average live weight of about 100 pounds, the second from 100 to 160 pounds and the final period from 160 pounds to market weight.

White-fish meal was added to the grain ration at the following rates: Group one 15 per cent for the first feeding period, 10 per cent for the second feeding period and 5 per cent for the final period. Group two 15 per cent for period one and 5 per cent for periods 2 and 3. Group three 10 per cent during period one and 5 per cent for periods 2 and 3, while group four received the same ration as group three for the first two feeding periods, but the white-fish meal was omitted entirely from the basal mixture from 160 pounds to finish.

The average daily gain per hog varied from 1.53 pounds in group 2 to 1.47 in group 4. The maximum difference between groups in meal consumption per 100 pounds carcass gain was only 10 pounds and a carcass score of 75 was recorded for groups 1, 2 and 4 and 71 for group 3. The average cost of feed per 100 pounds live weight gain was about equal for the two groups receiving the rations containing the lower levels of white-fish meal or $6.57 and $6.50 as compared with $6.67 for the group receiving the highest white-fish meal allowance.

In these tests no advantage in feed utilization or carcass quality resulted from the feeding of a ration containing more than 18 per cent protein up to 100 pounds live weight or over 13 per cent protein during the period from 160 pounds live weight to slaughter.

These results and data recently reported from different sources in England and the United States suggests that with good quality feeds and proper mineral and vitamin supplements, satisfactory results may be expected from rations containing relatively higher percentages of home-grown grains than was formerly considered advisable.

Not being fit for military service, a little man tried for a job as a striker in a blacksmith's shop.

After looking him over the smith picked up the biggest hammer and threw it out of the window, saying: "If you can do this you can start work."

The little man picked up the anvil and threw it after the hammer, saying: "O.K., are we working outside?"—Exchange.

LINDBROOK

Slush and mud is the state of affairs underfoot in this district today. Still we are all glad to see dear old Mother Earth again, and hope soon to be busy on its surface.

Irma Simpson returned to Morningside, Alta., last Tuesday. She was accompanied on the trip by her mother, Mrs. Shupe, Mrs. E. Hooper and Mr. Jas. Hooper.

The pupils of the Lindbrook high school took a trip to Edmonton last week as part of their studies, that is, to see things first hand and in actual operation. Several farmers loaned their cars, Messrs. Gill, Merden, A. J. Richardson and R. Smith. We're not quite sure whose cars went so if your name is omitted, anyone, well just put it down to the fact that we didn't know. The pupils visited the Parliament Buildings and saw and heard the legislators debating, etc., etc. The E.C.D. plant was also visited and possibly other places of interest. Some of the drivers were quite as interested in what they saw as were the pupils, so it must be conceded as a very successful attempt at new methods of learning or teaching.

Our rodent friends? the gophers are out again, so get busy with the dope, now's the time to sock 'em.

A truck owned by Lule of Ryley caught fire and burned on the highway about 2 or 3 miles west of Lindbrook. Luckily it was on the return trip and not carrying a load, so the damage was not as great as it might have been.

The meeting at the Hall last Saturday night organized by the A.F.U. or Alberta Farmers' Union, was very sparsely attended; reasons, Saturday night and bad roads. Those who missed the meeting missed a lot. The speakers, Messrs. Jackson of Irma and Malenka of Warren, near Vegreville, both farmers, presented their case for a Farmers' Union with a clarity and forcefulness that carried conviction to all who heard it. Mr. Jackson was one of the Alberta delegates that went to Ottawa recently to interview the government on the farmer's behalf. He gave the highlights of the trip and its results. The gist of the matter was, that every other trade, profession, industry, etc., has its Union bar the farmers, and that their remedy lies in forming one along the same lines, and until we do, just so long will we get the treatment that we've been enjoying these later years. So if you fellows want to live like your brother Canadians do in other walks of life, join the Union now, and incidentally give your wives and children a better time of it, you know, they work too, especially on the farms. Think of it! and think deep, then act!

Mrs. Brown of B.C. who is the mother of Mrs. A. J. Richardson, who teaches the Junior grades in Lindbrook school, arrived on Saturday night's train and will stay with her daughter and family for a while.

A MESSAGE FROM H.M.E. EVANS, HEAD OF THE NATIONAL WAR FINANCE ORGANIZATION FOR NORTH ALBERTA

"On behalf of the entire War Finance Organization may I express to the weekly newspapers our great appreciation of their support which had much to do with the success of the Second Victory Loan campaign in North Alberta. Through your columns may we also convey a brief message of congratulation to all whose efforts contributed to that success.

"Primarily and directly it was due to the more than thirteen thousand individuals and firms throughout the country districts and the seventeen thousand, five hundred in Edmonton who responded to the appeal by making purchases of bonds.

"Outside of Edmonton there were 54 Units, each with a Unit Organizer, and some 26 sub-units. Each Unit and Sub-Unit has a War Finance Committee with continuing responsibility in its locality for that part of Canada's war effort. It is impossible to speak too highly of the work accomplished by the 450 or so Unit Organizers, Chairmen and members of these committees. In many places campaigning conditions were extraordinarily difficult due to poor harvest, bad weather, blocked roads, etc. It was the Victory Loan salesmen, some 475 of them throughout the country districts, who bore the brunt of these difficulties in the course of their canvass.

Questions have been asked about the commission paid to salesmen and the public should know the facts. On the great bulk of the subscriptions to the Loan no commission whatever is paid. On all the sales to the big subscribers—the so-called "Special Names"—there is no commission. The same is the case with all the sales made through the Employee canvass. This Employee canvas has produced astonishingly good results this time. On the balance of the applications a small commission is paid to the official salesman who devotes, in most cases, his entire time for three weeks to the campaign. For this commission the salesman gives up his own business and stands his own expenses. The commissions are adjusted as between salesmen. For Victory Loan 1941 the adjustment fund was sufficient to raise the minimum full time country salesman to $36.70. For this he had worked for three weeks and paid for his own gasoline, etc. The average commission, both city and country on Victory Loan 1941 was $41.60.

"It has been a great thing to have this Loan such a brilliant success and North Alberta has borne its full share having exceeded its original quota by approximately the same percentage as the whole Dominion."

POSTAL DEPARTMENT DOING GOOD WORK

Word has been received that a westbound steamer, expected to reach Canada with 906 bags of mail on board, has been lost due to enemy action.

Natural anxiety will be felt by the addressees when letters and parcels which they may have been expecting fail to arrive and no doubt complaints against the Post Office will follow—the public will, however, appreciate the postal Department's position.

The volume of Military mails shipped overseas continues to increase. During the calendar year 1941 some 5,566 tons of Military mail only were despatched—a gain of 3,568 tons over the calendar year 1940. The mail forwarded overseas through the Base Post Office during 1941 was made up as follows: 11,413,800 letters; 1,346,731 pounds of newspapers and magazines, 9,501,128 pounds of parcels, including tobacco gifts.

Some 65,000,000 cigarettes are now being shipped monthly to our Fighting Services overseas by the Canadian Postal Corps. In playing their particular part in the endeavour to "keep the smokes coming" (as our Troops request repeatedly in their broadcasts from England), Canada's Army Postal authorities are giving every possible attention to the careful and systematic handling of tobacco parcels through the mails, and are shipping a supply sufficient to average (roughly) 125 cigarettes per man overseas, every week to our Forces. As revealed by the breakdown above of the mails shipped overseas, the tobacco gifts are just a part of the entire volume of Military mails passing through the Base Post Office.

The enormous gain in the volume of Military mails in 1941 and the fact that an uptrend continues, serves to emphasize the constant need of co-operation by the mailing public so that the full time of the Canadian Postal authorities may be devoted to expediting a regular flow of mails rather than diverted to attend to letters which are improperly addressed or to re-pack and re-address parcels for want of adequate preparation have been damaged in the mails.

TAKE CARE YOUNG PIGS; NEEDED FOR BRITAIN

Every pig is needed for Britain and to meet the requirements for bacon and pork in Canada. The Agricultural Supplies Board calls the attention of farmers to the fact that many pigs can be saved by precaution and care during the critical farrowing and nursing periods. Farrowing pens should be warm and dry, and equipped with guard rails. During farrowing, attention should be paid to the use of artificial heat if necessary. This may save a pig or an entire litter and every pig saved and raised to a weight of 200 pounds on the farm would mean two more Wiltshire sides for Britain.

Parasites, the Board points out, affect the health and development of pigs. These can be prevented by proper sanitation of pens and yards. Anaemia, a disease which can take a heavy toll of young pigs, is preventable by giving the pigs iron in some form soon after birth. Proper feeding of the sow reduces digestive disorders and induces the normal development of the pigs. Creep feeding produces thriftier pigs and reduces the shock of weaning.

Any hog producer who wants helpful information on raising pigs, can get it from the Nearest Experimental Farm, Agricultural College or Provincial Department of Agriculture.

WINTER TEMPERATURES AFFECT TRAIN LOADS

Toronto, March 16—When a citizen reads of the steady stream of war materials for the armies at the various fronts, he seldom stops to think of the strain caused by the movement of these goods to sea ports for overseas shipment. In Canada the railways are busy day and night moving everything from tanks to surgical needles and operating under every kind of weather. Temperatures do drop as low as 43 deg. below zero but trains keep on running. Travellers in Northern Canada can tell how far the mercury is below zero by noting the length of freight trains. If he sees a train of 20 to 25 cars and the locomotive enveloped in steam he knows that it must be at least 40 below. For in the North the weather determines the length of the train. If the train is of 60 to 80 cars he knows that summer has come, but he won't see that until June.

MINISTIK

The Cheery Chums Club met at Mrs. P. Swabey's home on Monday night, March 9th. There were seven members present. Next meeting will be held on Monday, March 23.

The Social Credit Whist drive held at the Hall on Friday night, March 13th, was a success. There were 8 tables at play. We played Military Whist and talk about a jinx party, it sure was one. It certainly did credit it to Friday the 13th. There will be another Whist drive at the Hall on April 1st. Come all and have a good time.

Mr. Hamilton is home again from Sedgewick where she has been staying with her sister Sarah, who has been sick.

Our teacher spent the week end in Edmonton with her parents.

We are sorry to hear Mr. W. Whitford is laid up with a very bad cold. We hope to see him around again soon.

The next Social Credit meeting will be on Saturday night, March 21st. Visitors are cordially welcome.

A dance will be held on March 27, in the hall sponsored by the Ministik Junior U.F.A.

PRECIOUS CANDLELIGHT—Exclusive of generator equipment, it costs $18,000 to build one of the giant 80,000,000 candlepower anti-aircraft searchlights used by the Canadian forces.

CAVEAT TIME IS NOW HERE

Ratepayers are reminded that the secretary-treasurer is compelled by law to make a tax arrears list of all lands upon which the 1940 taxes have not been paid. This list must be made some time in March and duplicate copies forwarded to the Provincial Registrar. The Registrar then files a caveat against the lands listed. It is greatly to the advantage of ratepayers to prevent their lands going on the tax sale list, and to do this, 1940 taxes must be paid before March 28th, 1942.

Councillor Swabey mentioned council trying to get a government grant for road running south to New Sarepta.

Enquiries had been made regarding fire insurance on machine building and contents. A letter from A. J. H. As there might be some depreciation in value of the machinery it was thought best to insure it one year at a time.

On motion of Reeve Walker it was decided to insure No. 811, No. 2[illegible] No. 12, together with the caterpillar tractor and the machine shed for

Vol. XXI., No. 52 Thursday, March 26, 1942 $2.00 Per Year. To U.S.A. $2.50

Resident Doctor Likely To Locate Here

Negotiations are underway for a resident doctor to come to Tofield. As we go to press we learn that Dr. Sorenson of Ryley, who has been visiting Tofield on Tuesdays and Thursdays will come making professional visits here for the present, having come here to help the Tofield people out until such time as a doctor could be procured.

Dr. Caldwell of Edmonton has signified his willingness to come and Mayor Swift who is in Edmonton today (Thursday) will do what he can to complete arrangements.

The thanks of the district are due Dr. Sorenson for helping out and his best wishes are extended for her future welfare.

NEW RYLEY AND TOFIELD GRAIN CLUB ORGANIZED

The Ryley and Tofield grain club meeting was held in Tofield on Feb. 20th. The district agriculturist, Mr. Kerns of Camrose was present and organized the new club—a barley and oats club for 1942. The type of seed is "New All" barley and "Victory" oats.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Phillip Anderson, Vice-president, Olaf Haugen; Sec.-Treas., Marvin Moen, Asst. Secretary, James McCowan.

15 members were signed up in the barley club, 17 members signed up in the oats club. Messrs. E. A. Moen and B. Anderson are club leaders.

The Ryley and Tofield club stood 2nd in the province out of 58 clubs in 1942 in wheat and third in the oats club for 1941.

LOCAL & PERSONAL

The Anglican Easter sale of Daffodils and potted plants, etc., will be held at the curling rink on Saturday afternoon, April 4th. Home Cooking will also be on sale and tea will be served. For potted Easter Lillies or other plants phone 56 or R 1503.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Blake Clutterham on the loss of their infant daughter, Florence Jean. The little one passed away in Edmonton early this week.

Mr. W. Hill of Drayton was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Hill Tuesday evening and Wednesday.

Mrs. Ed Weatherick and small daughter returned home from Edmonton this week.

Mr. H. Chandler was a city visitor this week.

The local post office and the Bank of Montreal are both flying new flags, the ones previously flown having become badly frayed through wind action. Let's hope that this is the signal for A.B.C.D. gains and ere these flags are torn and tattered through flying in the breeze, victory for the democracies will be in sight or actually accomplished.

Second Day Meeting of Cornhill Council

BUDGET PREPARED AND MUCH OTHER BUSINESS TRANSACTED

Re-assembling Saturday morning, Cornhill Council started in where they left off the previous day. The reeve and all councillors were present. All councillors had their transportation problem but special mention could be made of Councillor Broen. With only Mrs. Broen and himself on the farm he drove 30 miles home, did the chores, and drove 30 miles back the next morning over roads that were becoming soft and muddy.

A steel company wrote inquiring as to whether council needed any signs. No signs were needed.

The Gutta Percha and Rubber Co. Ltd., wrote re rubber restrictions, intimating that if a new conveyor was needed for the elevating grader it should be ordered early. A general discussion on the use of the elevating grader occurred, during which it was brought out that many ratepayers were not fond of the high grades. There was some discussion as to whether the elevating grader would be used this season but no decision was arrived at.

The Union Tractor and Harvester Co. wrote explaining that a priority order would have to be procured before parts for the diesel could be [illegible]

Dept. of Mun. Affairs wrote approving of by law re sale of lots in Kingman.

Mrs. A. Bass wrote re N.W. 4-51-21, W4. Mrs. Bass desired to buy the quarter but made no specific offer. This was left to Councillor concerned.

Mr. Arthur Robinson wrote saying he would like to purchase about 25 acres around North Cooking Lake. It was left to Councillor Swabey to find out the details.

Letter from Mrs. Swabey and family acknowledging expression of sympathy, was read.

Mr. Paulus Matson had applied for O.A.P. and the Department wrote regarding recommendation. On Motion by Councillor Broen Mr. Matson was recommended for full pension.

Mr. Davenport wrote requesting credit for some road work done in division three. Councillor Swabey will make the necessary adjustments.

Letter from immigration department regarding the welfare of Andre Gouboult. Councillor Blake will investigate.

Letter from O.A.P. Dept. Mrs. Groves had applied for old age pension but some further papers were needed. Councillor Swabey to investigate.

On motion of Councillor Swabey Chas. Lindberg was issued $15.00 emergency assistance. Assistance to cease at end of month.

A by-law to authorize the assessing of personal property and stock-in-trade for school and municipal purposes was given three readings and passed. This is a by law that has to be passed at the beginning of each year and assessment made each year.

Letter from A. T. McLean regarding an old account of Lamont hospital amounting to some thirty odd dollars. It transpired that this account was incurred over six years ago and had lain for several years before an effort was made to collect. Then there was some question as to Council's liability and by the time this was straightened out six years had passed by. On motion of Reeve Walker the matter was tabled indefinitely.

Letter from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind requesting a grant was tabled.

It is now compulsory for Rural Councils to levy a Minimum Municipal Tax of four dollars upon those who do not pay other taxes and who are living within the district and are gainfully employed. Councillors were asked to turn in the names of those in their respective division whom they believed to be liable. One councillor had his list ready, the other five are still to come in.

It was announced that the council had ordered $700.00 worth of grass seed, but so far only a small portion had arrived. The advisability of dividing the seed equally between the six divisions was discussed. Previous years grass seed has been sold on a first come, first served basis. This year all grass seed for sale will be sold on a half price plus freight basis. First come, first served within the respective divisions will be the rule. There is a limit as to amount and kind to any one ratepayer. The seed varieties available it is expected will be alfalfa, brome, crested wheat and clover.

The above was incorporated in a motion by Reeve Walker.

Letter from Mr. Kerns, district agriculturalist was read. He stated that he is starting an Alfalfa club in the vicinity of Tofield. The boys would get 10 to 20 pounds of seed and he would like to know if the district would help by paying half the cost. On the motion of Councillor Blake it was decided to co-operate on a 50-50 cost basis to the extent of 150 pounds.

Oliver Grue tendered his resignation as elevating grader man.

A number of applications for positions on road machinery were read.

After some discussion it was decided to start out maintaining and leave consideration regarding using No. 12 until next meeting.

Wages were set at the same rate as last year, namely: No. 30 oper-

LINDBROOK

The auction sale held last Tuesday of the stock and equipment at Elmo Ferguson's farm was very well attended, owing no doubt to the mild weather. The auctioneer was Mr. J. D. Hanson and some of the articles fetched very good prices and some, including horses weren't so good. Still all in all the visitors had a nice outing with free eats and the owner didn't do so bad either with his sale.

The "Jinx" sure was at work around this locality last Wednesday. It started early too; the start being when the Herndon children driving to school and arriving at the Lindbrook crossing at about the same time that the Wainwright local train did. The result was that the horse that they were driving got frightened and leaped across the track just in front of the train, just clearing itself and buggy. Incidentally, the engineer, who had seen this coming, had his train under control enough to stop it in time. None of the children or horse were hurt, but the frightened horse bolted and the children couldn't hold it. Vera Jensen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ange Jensen, was ahead of them on the road, knowing nothing of those happenings until knocked down unconscious by the shaft of the buggy, which passed over her, hurting her leg, shoulder and scratching her eyeball badly. Vera was picked up by the section men and placed on the train and taken to Ryley for medical treatment by Dr. E. Sorenson of that town. Another section man caught the horse and the Herndon children proceeded to school, unhurt but badly frightened. Vera is back home at present and will likely be under the Doctor's orders for 3 weeks or a month.

The second episode occurred about noon when the engine pulling a heavy west bound freight broke down just past the station leaving the crossing and track tied up till about 4 p.m. when another engine arrived to take over.

The third episode was that Mr. Brenneman, who had bought some cows at the preceding day's sale was taking them home in a truck when the end gate fell out. One cow fell out and broke her neck and another was out of the truck but caught in some way and was dragged quite a distance before noticed. This one either was dead or had to be destroyed. So you see, the Jinx was sure busy that day.

Despite the cold weather quite a sizeable crowd turned out to view the "premiere" of the Covered Wagon in Lindbrook. The show was put on in the school, Mr. A. Richardson producer and director. The equip-

EQUINE ENCEPHALOMYELITIS

Sentence of death hangs over thousands of valuable horses in Alberta today. Equine encephalomyelitis may strike suddenly and reach epidemic proportions Not since 1938 has the danger been so great In 1939, due to the extensive use of "chick" vaccine, the disease was kept under control. But in 1940 there were sufficient cases, and in 1941 there were more, to convince authorities that the causal agent is still present over wide-spread areas. Should conditions be favorable to an outbreak this year the disease will spread on a large scale

There is one proven way to protect horses from this silent killer It is by vaccinating with "chick" vaccine The protection is highly effective and it is the only satisfactory agent known to produce immunity

Vaccinate horses early in the season, preferably before the commencement of spring work When possible keep horses at rest for twenty-four hours after vaccination, and vaccinate young colts a few days after birth Never vaccinate in any spot subject to rubbing or friction by saddle or harness.

It is important that vaccination be performed by a competent person—a registered veterinarian, or a man trained by a veterinarian Should the owner wish to vaccinate his own horses, he is warned to take every antiseptic precaution.

Horse owners of Alberta face a real responsibility in the matter of vaccination First of all there is danger of human infection. It is now generally accepted that Equine Encephalomyelitis may infect humans. It is obvious in the light of this fact, that vaccination of horses will first of all assist in the safeguarding of public health, and secondly protect the owner's investment in horseflesh.

Another important aspect of horse vaccination is that of national economy. In these critical times it is possible that horses may suddenly be required on a large scale for purposes of national defense or the nation's war effort, and the preservation of existing stocks is therefore an imperative need.

Vaccinate early with "chick" vaccine, and keep the silent killer in abeyance. Protect investment, human life and the nation's wealth by immunizing your horses in the manner recommended by all competent authorities. "Chick" vaccine is the horse owner's first line of defense against the onslaught of this disease

MASS PRODUCTION OF BOMBS FOR BRITISH R.A.F.

Each month sees a substantial rise in British arms production as established factories expand and new ones come into operation, and with the coming total mobilization of Britain's [illegible]d woman power this output will be stepped up still further.

Cleaning up the inside of a bomb casing at a British ammunition factory where the mass casting of 500 lb. bombs for the R.A.F. is carried out

Wartime Prices & Trade Board

TOBACCO CANS SHRINK

To make more metal available for war purposes, Mr. H. H. Foreman, Administrator of Fabricated Steel and Non-Ferrous metal for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has drawn up new regulations, restricting the sizes of tobacco cans.

Instead of an impressive-looking can containing tobacco loosely packed, the smoker, after present stocks are used up, will get a smaller can with the same amount of tobacco more tightly packed. Its volume capacity must not exceed six cubic inches per ounce of tobacco

A small individual saving, it means a considerable saving of metal in the aggregate.

CONSERVING RUBBER

Under-inflation causes rapid wear on tire treads. One of the experts of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board calculates that continued under-inflation by as little as six pounds means a loss of 30 per cent of the total mileage of a tire. Inflation of tires is the only inflation the Board approves.

THE NEW WOOL BOARD

Recognized channels of trade in wool will not be disrupted by formation of the Canadian Wool Board Limited, states the Wartime Prices and Trade Board All registered wool warehouses which operated in 1941 will be licensed by the Wool Board and will operate as primary and secondary receivers. Wool growers' associations, local dealers, agents, wool collectors and fieldmen will act as primary receivers under license. Recognized standards will be used for the grading and classification of both fleece and pulled wool and a schedule of prices for 1942 wools, with basic charges for collecting, handling, grading and transportation will be issued shortly.

The new Wool Board will encourage domestic wool production by guaranteeing a stable market and fixed prices. It will take over the entire wool clip of Canada for the duration of the war and for one growing year thereafter.

CUT THEIR SUGAR

Tipped off that large quantities of sugar had been delivered during the rationing period to Japanese residents of Hillcrest, Vancouver Island, the British Columbia Provincial Police visited the homes of Mrs. Moorita Kasao and Tokusuki Yoshika. They found two unopened 100 pound sacks of sugar in the one place and one unopened 100 pound sack in the other—all above the 'honor rationing' allowance.

After conferring with the Regional Representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, the police handed all three sacks to the custodian of alien enemy property, for confiscation. Both offenders are to be moved out of the coast district together with the Japanese merchant who supplied them.

Advice

The mayor of a certain town, out for a spin on his bicycle, found himself a long way from home and in need of water for his acetylene lamp. He rode on in momentary dread of the village constable, until at last he saw a man standing at the door of his cottage.

"I say, would you be kind enough to give me some water for my lamp?" he asked.

"Water?" repeated the man. "I s'pose you mean oil?"

"No, I don't. I want water."

The man looked searchingly at the cyclist.

"Take my advice and get along 'ome," he said. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, and you the mayor, too."

RED CROSS SPECIAL

BY GARRY ALLIGHAN

London — Driven from their homes by invasion, thousands of exiles from Nazi-occupied territories are finding hospitality and asylum in this country. Every one of these pathetic families is a world-tragedy in microcosm. Cut away from the familiarities of their homeland, they form little islands of huddled humanity around which the social life of Britain swirls and eddies in ceaseless flow, isolating them from the mainland of their national existence. Strangers in a strange land, speaking an alien tongue, thinking foreign thoughts, employing different technique of living, and enjoying diversified culture, these many thousands of Poles, Czechs, Channel Islanders and Norwegians would be as tragically pathetic as the lost tribes of Israel, were it not for the kindness which the English-speaking world, through the agency of the Canadian Red Cross.

To tens of thousands of Norwegian refugees here, the hand of compassion has reached out over 3,000 miles of ocean from Montreal, whence a Norwegian unit of the Canadian Red Cross responded to an SOS of these stricken families, many of whom have escaped to this country from Norway in small fishing boats crossing the U-boat-infested North Sea to the safety and security of these shores. Every week huge bales of clothing were dispatched to the British branch of the Norwegian Red Cross here, whose secretary Mrs Emil Huitfeldt, says, "Without the never-ceasing kindness of the Canadian public, our people, hounded from their homes by the invaders, would languish in strange surroundings without either happiness or hope."

I saw the card index which contains the record of these exiled Norwegians' families. It consists of more than 20,000 names. It is a dossier of drama every card is a document of daring and distress. They form an inventory of valor commencing with Narvik and proceeding through exploits of the Loftofen raids to a few days ago, when a Norwegian mother with her three children, alone in a small boat which crept out of a Norwegian fjord in the dead of night, sailed across the North Sea for seven days and nights, while U-boat periscopes poked above the waves and Nazi aircraft zoomed above the clouds.

Every week, Norwegian merchant seamen arrive in British ports and are assisted by the Canadian Red Cross with new clothing The world may not know that there are 22,000 such sailors still defying the Huns that have ravaged their homeland. They carry 50 per cent of Britain's gasoline across the seven seas and 20 per cent of Britain's other imports. To them the flag of the Red Cross is as precious as the Norwegian flag and the headquarters of the Red Cross in London is their safe anchorage, where they can revictual and be refitted for further death-defying exploits on the lonely waters of the world.

THE
BEHIND HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

Straws show which way the wind is blowing. Accordingly, well-informed sources on Parliament Hill are attaching now tremendous significance to the vibratory reaction of the people's representatives and the courageous and clear-sighted policy of the Government in the efforts to help the depressed agricultural industries in order to substantially in[illegible] farm incomes, though it seems remarkable, by contrast with other problems in this national emergency, that so many people misunderstand both the official attitude and the position of organized farmers as well as small farm proprietors or tenants.

In face of the streamlined headlines and brief radio reports, yet the measures of special or intimate interest to farmers do not concern only farmers, nor do they involve only a price controversy between the strongest pressure-interests in this nation, particularly when it is remembered that this conflict between pressure-interests may not yet have been developed to full stature for the duration, perhaps but with possibilities of more collisions in future. In other words, the long quarrel over prices is merely one reverberation in the fluctuations of fortune brought on by the war production boom and one facet of a deeper conflict caused sometimes by the utterly unfair or illogical lack of balance between economic conditions in agriculture and the other industries of the country.

Despite improvements in recent times, there have been, and still are, many false notions. Even in wartime, a democracy like Canada cannot afford to be ineffective in anything pertaining to farmers and it cannot be effective with any hit-and-miss methods or any laissez-faire atmosphere, if bankruptcy and potential paralysis in economic stamina of the land is to be avoided. There is no salvation except a general policy of aiding the farmers directly and courageously. The effectiveness and efficiency of the total war process demands a disposition to harden the official attitude and the authorities must lead the electorate, not follow them in this respect.

In the present national war emergency, it must be recognized by the man-in-the-street that the production of food is as necessary for victory as the production of vital weapons Hunger defeated Germany in World War No. 1 as much as force of arms. In 1918 Germans were rationed each week to 3 pounds of bread, 7 ounces of meat, and 2 ounces of cereals so that the Imperial German Health Office calculated that the average man was getting only one-third of the 3,300 calories necessary to do normal work. Moreover, the fatal error was made in that war by Germany of giving everything to the army. From 1914 to 1918, Germany mobilized 11,000,000 men and as a result there were not enough able bodied men to work on the farms or to distribute the food by railroads, trucks, etc., to urban centers. Indeed, historians have observed that a nation, which must grow its own food, can support only about one per cent of its total population under arms with comparative safety to itself and Germany's population in that war was 67,000,000. In the case of Canada, agriculture plays an even more important role in this war because this nation is obliged to supply tremendous amounts of farm products not only for home use but for Britain and her allies Somehow or other, this vital fact is not understood by the man-in-the street throughout Canada.

The farmer has contended that he must get better prices for his products, demanding for a bushel of wheat as much purchasing power as in the basic period of 1926-1929 since Canadian labor is being given as great purchasing power as it had in those years in addition to the huge financial assistance which the government is now giving to industry for building factories, buying tools for war production, and encouraging employers to give more bonuses in cases of increased costs of living, though at the same time provisions have been made to control prices, wages, and to protect workers by unemployment insurance.

In opposition to the farmer's claims it is pointed out that bonuses on bacon, cheese, etc., have been given in order to stimulate production in these lines where there is a big demand for such articles, but as yet no such demand exists for wheat around which battles raged as to the proper price. Then again, the "dollar" wheat as initial payment which was sought and the "parity" proposition might bring the price up to about $1.42 a bushel in the end. Moreover, in absolutely impartial circles on Parliament Hill there is not the slightest doubt that the present Minister of Agriculture, Hon. James Gardiner, is one of the most capable, astute and tireless members of the King Administration and the case for the farmers could not be presented better in the Cabinet or in Parliament than through this parliamentarian. In fact, these well-informed observers in Ottawa know that no one could have done more in the interests of the farmers under the extremely difficult circumstances in this national war emergency, if the records of the other Ministers of Agriculture since Confederation are analysed in their proper, scientific perspective At one time he declared in Parliament: "It is generally admitted that 70 cents advance at Fort William which nets the farmer 50 cents a bushel does not cover his total cost of production and therefore does not maintain him as a contented producer. If he is to receive more money, it must come from the sale price of the wheat or from the taxpayers of Canada or from both." But, in a Cabinet of 17 members, as in any government since Confederation, there cannot be a complete identity of view on any controversial problem, and it must be considered in the light of all circumstances, particularly the great demands of the war on the public treasury. Thus, the Minister of Finance or any other Minister might have much to say on such farther demands. Finally, the farmers themselves must understand certain things about the present status of labor with whom they make comparisons since labor unionism-as-usual is pretty much out for the duration. From now onwards, whether or not they are engaged in the war effort industries, their policies are no longer aggression and expansion but rather merely administration for the duration of the war, with the likelihood of involving smaller staffs and organizations in the long run.

It is, of course, unjust to lay the responsibilities for the depression in agriculture at the door of Parliament itself. Since the start of this war, there is much longer perspective of these events or happenings and there is a much better understanding of the causes The greatest depression in history was due in the main to the greatest war in history. It was a world phenomenon. However, it is true that man-made policies must come sooner or later in greater recognition of the fact that the approach of so-called war prosperity in Canada, after a long and grinding depression, gives the farmer an opportunity to insist on rectifying many cases of starvation rates and the lack of balance in the national economy as between the earnings of farmers in general and the rest of the population. Well-meaning patriots, who demand coercion methods for farmers at this juncture of the war, or who deny farmers' rights, are, in ignorance and unjust zeal, imperilling their country. This is not only unnecessary but in contradiction with the very purpose and meaning of the present struggle. About the need of avoiding a disastrous internal conflict on this account, there is no doubt. It is unpatriotic greed to do otherwise.

"DON'T YOU KNOW I'M A CUB?"

During a Nazi air raid on Newcastle-on-Tyne, an 8 year old boy, Newton Shipley, a Wolf Cub (Junior Scout) was found hanging head-down in the debris of his home. Both legs were broken—one had subsequently to be amputated—and to all appearances the little lad was dead. Having freed him, the Warden, loath to put him down, was holding him in his arms, when the boy's eyes opened and he smiled "You're a very brave boy, aren't you," said the Warden. To which the boy replied, "Of course. Don't you know I'm a Cub?"

THE VITAL SPARK—

YOU MAY HAVE the finest internal combustion engine that money can buy; you may even have the crank case filled with the best of oil and the gasoline tank filled with gasoline but if there is no battery to produce that vital electric spark so that the mixture of gasoline and air is ignited, you only have potential power, not real power. In many respects the democracies, particularly Canada and the United States are akin to a wonderful internal combustion engine lacking that vital spark.

Ever since the curtain came down on the 1914-18 conflict the democratic nations, remembering the horrors of that conflict, have steadfastly turned their faces away from war and its accompanying misery. Remember, how a few years back there was talk of removing artillery pieces from public parks as they were reminescent of an era that had best be forgotten? But the Axis, particularly Germany and Japan and to no small extent, Italy also, had no intention of forgetting the 1914-18 conflict, but on the contrary used it as the principal lesson in instilling into the hearts and minds of young folk a unanimous reverence for their respective countries and a unanimous hatred for those countries who they chose to believe to be against them. It is this worship of their own country and hatred of other countries, harnessed to endeavor, economic and combative, that has resulted in the initial successes of Axis forces.

Within the last few months there has come into prominence an American patriot and prophet, Homer Lea. This United States citizen who is only now, 30 years after his death, receiving recognition from the American people, wrote two books, "Valor of Ignorance" and "The Day of the Saxon." In these books written over 30 years ago, he states as a matter of fact, rather than predicts, both the first and second world wars. A hunch back and physically frail, he was a born soldier and a rare genius in appraising the causes of international conflict, and expressed the way he expresses it, there is no doubt whatsoever that the Anglo Saxon race was destined sooner or later to have to defend its possessions from attacks by aggressors. Lea stated plainly that Germany would challenge the British Empire and that a war between the United States and Japan was inevitable. Regarding the latter he wrote:

> "This Republic and Japan are approaching, careless on the one hand and pre-determined on the other, that point of contact which is war."

For many years prior to the outbreak of the present war Germany was preparing to fight Great Britain; no amount of appeasement could stop them. During the same period, Japan was laying plans to attack the United States, this was their decision. During this period the democracies, territorially rich, desired and sought international peace, with the result when the storm broke they were ill prepared for it, not only as regards organized fighting forces but also as regards the mentality of their peoples. This is really the vital spark.

The democracies still have after two and a half years of war, great potential power. This power in a hundred different ways is being harnessed to war effort. But until there is unanimous recognition of the danger and a unanimous throwing of weight in some manner or other into the conflict, the democracies will be fighting at a disadvantage, for the Axis arranged for this very thing before the fight started.

There are many ways in which help can be given, and they range from the heroic to the commonplace; from offering to serve in the front line of battle to the voluntary curtailment of the use of sugar, a product much needed in war material production. All can play their part if they will and it is very necessary that they should, and play it with genuine willingness and enthusiasm. This is the vital spark.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

Prairie farmers, it is evident, are anxious and willing to increase their flax acreage to assist Canada in securing more oil for war purposes.

Flax intended for seed should be tested for germination. The seed should not be treated with Formaldehyde but with mercurial dust, either Ceresan or Leytosan, following the manufacturer's directions most carefully.

The new Royal flax, or the variety Bison, are suitable for Saskatchewan and Manitoba; Red Wing for Alberta; seeding at from 25 to 40 pounds to the acre. Flax should not be seeded on stubble, but only on summerfallow that is reasonably free from weeds. The University of Saskatchewan obtained good results sowing flax and wheat together on the same field, using one half a bushel of flax and half a bushel of wheat, or three pecks of wheat and one peck of flax

Combination sowing must be as shallow as possible, or the flax can be seeded separately and shallow immediately after the wheat. Flax for seed must be well cleaned from weed seeds. An ordinary fanning mill, with the proper screens, will make a good job of cleaning flax provided the rate of cleaning is slowed down, and the machine is kept absolutely level

Registered or Certified seeds are the best because relative freedom from weed seeds, high germination and the best yields are ensured.

SAFETY FIRST

In a certain school in New York there was a teacher, an energetic advocate of "Safety First," who opened her class each morning by rising and asking: "Children, what would you do if fire were to break out in this building?" The children would reply in chorus: "We would rise in our places, step into the aisle and march quietly out of the building."

One morning when the children arrived at school they found themselves honored by the presence of the well-known and beloved Dr. Henry van Dyke. The teacher stepped before the class and, instead of the usual fire-drill question, said, "Children, what would you say if I were to tell you that Dr. van Dyke is to speak to you this morning?"

Instantly from the class came the resounding chorus: "We would rise in our places, step into the aisle and march quietly out of the building."

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, March 23—Prorogation came to the Assembly Thursday night last following introduction of resolutions pertaining to the supervision of Japanese moved into Alberta, expansion of provincial boundaries northward and the stabilizing of farm price levels with those of manufactured goods in the ration experienced in 1926.

V V V

Important among earlier resolutions adopted by the Legislature was that calling upon the federal authority to inaugurate immediate plans for post-war reconstruction and rehabilitation. The resolution, introduced by C. E. Gerhart, Coronation and seconded by N. B. James, Edmonton, was supported by a vote of 43 to 4 after an amendment moved by Alfred Speakman, leader of the opposition, had been defeated. Mr. Speakman's amendment would have endorsed what he termed the present "interim program" of reconstruction announced from Ottawa.

V V V

Passage of the amended University Act was negotiated after two amendments to the new bill were defeated. Voice votes only were necessary to defeat the amendments, which were framed to provide for appointments to the Presidency carried out by the Board of Governors rather than the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, and that alumni should have three representatives on the Board of Governors. The new act was passed in about 30 minutes of committee. It embodies largely the recommendations made by the special committee which inquired into University Matters.

When a government begs the public to "Please stop paying us income taxes" it's news. The Alberta Government, through Hon Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer, is doing just that In spite of early warnings that the dominion, and not the province is collecting income taxes now, numbers of willing payers are filing returns and forwarding remittances to the provincial office. It means unnecessary work for all concerned, including the return of the money to the taxpayers, said the minister. The advice is once again given; Alberta is not collecting income tax on 1941 earnings and will collect no more for the duration of the war. 1941 taxes are payable to the Dominion, as are all subsequent wartime income taxes.

V V V

New debt legislation made its appearance as the Session drew to a close. Introduced by Hon Lucien Maynard, who pilots government debt bills, an amendment to the Limitations of Actions Act, and other bills pertaining to the Debt Adjustment Act were intended to relieve the debt situation. One effect is to stay action involving the D. A A for 60 days after application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council is decided; and if leave is granted, to stay for 60 days after judgment Another is intended to give a mortgage holder an opportunity to obtain acknowledgment of a debt, among other features.

Term of Hon. J. C. Bowen as Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta is drawing to a close. He was appointed for five years on March 22, 1937, succeeding Col. P.C.H Primrose, who died in office. From Ottawa come unofficial reports that the present Governor may have his term extended, but no official information to this effect has yet been received at the Governor's office.

V V V

Alberta's school children will receive more consumer education in forthcoming years, according to Dr. H. C. Newland, provincial supervisor of schools Addressing an Edmonton meeting of the Consumers' League, he said that since about 1935 there has been an essential change in educational methods, with the consumer rather than the producer angle strengthened. Subjects helping to make children aware of their position as consumers were mathematics, community and home economics added. "Alberta is the only province in Canada that has on its high school program classes on sociology and psychology."

V V V

The Alberta Government has received assurances from Ottawa that federal regulations regarding old age pensions will be changed to permit the payment of $3 pensions increases in the province, as provided by recent legislation Hon. Solon Low made this clear when he spoke in the Legislature during the review of the estimates. Under existing federal regulations, any payments in excess of those provided are subject to a like deduction from the amount contributed by the dominion The revised regulations will remove this obstacle to pensions increases, and the aged of Alberta will receive their increases, averaging $3, from April 1.

V V V

Income tax arrears in Alberta amount to $250,000, compared with about $500,000 at April 1, 1941. These figures were given the Legislature by Hon Solon E. Low. It is expected that the business of clearing all old accounts will be accomplished within a year Meantime, the appropriation for the income tax branch was reduced by $9,000, and the real savings may be considerably more, depending on the speed with which the $250,000 arrears is collected

Seed Treatment for Flax with Low Germination

Dr. J. E. Machacek, Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, Winnipeg, has been conducting extensive investigations on the effect of seed treatment on the percentage germination of flax. At his request we gave him parts of all flax samples sent to the North-West Line Elevators Association's laboratory for germination up to the middle of February, in all, 38 samples. These samples, besides being germinated in the regular way in our laboratory, were planted in soil at the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory. Duplicate tests of seed treated with a mercurial dust and duplicate tests of untreated seed were made. The results are interesting and very important.

Our own tests resulted in an average germination of 66.8%. Dr. Machacek's "treated" tests averaged 78.9%, and the "untreated" only 63.7%. Our tests gave higher germination percentages than Dr. Machacek's untreated ones because the latter were in soil and ours were, as usual, in blotters placed in germination chambers.

In the soil tests, seed treatment increased the average germination from 63.7% to 78.9%—a striking result. Treatment with an organic mercury dust at the rate of 1½ ounces per bushel was recommended for all except three samples, and even in these, treatment increased germination somewhat.

It must not, of course, be concluded that seed treatment will improve the germinability of all flax seed. Every sample sent in to the Line Elevators' laboratory this winter will be checked by Dr. Machacek and the results sent to the farmer.

ment was the one owned by the Holden S.D. Everyone thought it pretty good and quite a change from travelogues and highly technical subjects usually shown by such companies. So a repeat performance is in order.

A communication from the organizer of the Looma District Veteran Volunteer Reserve and Home Guards has been received here, asking that in view of the spread of the war and the threat to our homeland here, that it is time that those who cannot go out to meet the enemy, should learn how to welcome them should they call on us here, also that our women and children be spared the horrors of Hong Kong, etc. It is suggested that a meeting be called to discuss this and to arrange for all interested to attend and do something about it. If it is decided to enrol volunteers, anyone under or over military age, or those by reason of families, etc., cannot join the active forces, also those in medical categories lower than A1, will be eligible. Anyway, a notice of such meeting will be given, so look out for it and as the military say "Act accordingly."

A surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jensen and family on Saturday, March 21st. The party took the form of a joint birthday and farewell, as the Jensen family are leaving the district in the near future, and the date was their daughter, Vera's birthday. Vera, who was recently injured had many close friends turn out to wish her a speedy recovery and Many Happy Returns of the day. The party was a complete surprise and turned out to be a great success.

At the stroke of eight the guests who had congregated not far from the Jensen home, raided their house, and with Vera comfortably placed in the front room the party began. It consisted of games followed by a nice lunch at which was served a lovely birthday cake which was crowned by 15 candles which took the shape of a V for Vera and V for Victory.

After lunch the group consisting of about 25 persons joined in a sing-song which lasted till the early hours of Sunday morning, the music being supplied by Mr. W. McHeffey and Mr. Bert Tiedeman. We closed by singing "Auld Lang Syne," "They are Jolly Good Fellows," "O Canada," and "God Save the King." Mr. and Mrs. Jensen were presented with a coffee percolator and Miss Vera with a number of birthday gifts.

THE JOB MUST BE DONE

LET'S DO IT

As Winston Churchill said: "We can beat the life out of the Savage Nazis."

We can't beat them unless we have more and better weapons.

And the only way to get more and better weapons is to raise the money to pay for them.

Other than by taxation, the only way to raise money is for Canada to borrow it. The only way for Canada to borrow enough is for EVERYONE to lend.

ator, 40c per hour; No. 311 operator, 50c per hour; No. 12 unit (elevating grader), 1st man 70c per hour; 2nd man, 60c per hour, 3rd man, 40c per hour; single man 35c per hour; man and team 50c per hour; man and four horses, 70c per hour. Tractor and man, basis 15-30, on maintainer, $1.50 per hour; helper, 35c per hour. Man and four horses on grader 80c for finished mile.

Each division will be charged $1.60 per hour for No. 311 and $1.00 per hour for No. 20, and 75c per hour (repair fund charge) for No. 12.

The above wage scale and unit charges were incorporated in a motion by Councillor Coombes.

On the motion of Councillor Walker, T. Grahn was appointed operator of No. 311.

On the motion of Councillor Broen Melvin Walker was engaged as operator of No. 20. He will also give it a general overhauling, it having done four season's work without a general overhaul.

The following school division mill rates were set: Holden 13, Camrose 13; Clover Bar 13; Lamont 14. A by law covering the above mill rates was given three readings and formally passed.

The budget then came in for lengthy consideration, item by item was considered and the total proposed expenditures for 1942 amounted to $27,315.00. The municipal mill rate will be 13 mills, the same as last year. A by-law covering the above was given three readings and formally passed.

On the motion of Councillor Broen ratepayers paying their taxes within 60 days of the date of the tax notice will be allowed 10 per cent discount on current taxes. This is the same arrangement as last year.

A road problem as between ratepayers was left to the councillor concerned to investigate.

Councillor Anderson mentioned Road No. 1, a through road. This road, while a municipal road, carried a lot of outside traffic. Last year the whole district helped to maintain this road. It was proposed to do the same this year.

Mr. Kerns, being in town, dropped in and he was informed Council had already decided favorably as regards his suggestion in connection with the boys' club and grass seed. Mr. Kerns stated that the Tofield area was definitely in Camrose territory and among other clubs he was interested in a horse club. He was quite interested in poultry and barley clubs.

Going back to the discussion of public works, Reeve Walker moved that the Department be asked for a grant of $1500.00 to be spent where most needed. —Carried.

The Reeve mentioned the suggestion made at the special meeting re stopping road construction.

Councillor Swabey was opposed, handing in a well signed petition in which it was stated that those signing had no objection to the District purchasing a $1,000.00 Victory bond each year, but were of the opinion road building should continue.

Reeve Walker said the war was a man-sized job and all had to get back of it. He was in favor of putting road construction money into Victory Bonds.

Councillor Swabey thought that the Victory Bond suggestion might go over in the other divisions but conditions in divisions three and four were different.

Councillor Anderson expressed the opinion that the people generally did not realize how serious the war situation was. We are thinking about roads, wheat, markets, etc., when we should be thinking of something else.

Councillor Coombes thought the district should continue to maintain but not build new roads.

No definite action was taken.

On motion by Councillor Anderson the men called out to work on the Rodnicki ground fire will be paid in the aggregate $23.50.

A number of bills were presented and passed for payment.

On the motion of Councillor Anderson, the second Friday of each month will be the regular council meeting day.

Meeting then adjourned.

Don't Ask Us

On a little service station away out on the edge of a western desert there hangs a shingle, bearing this strange legend. "Don't ask us for information. If we knew anything we wouldn't be here."

AMISK CREEK

A large crowd of neighbors and friends gathered together and surprised Mr. and Mrs. C. Ward one evening recently, as we understand Mr. and Mrs. Ward are moving away from Shonts in the near future. Sorry to say that I was not present but I understand that Mr. E. A. Moen, on behalf of this neighborhood presented the guests of honor with a lovely mirror as a remembrance. Mr. and Mrs. Ward responded, expressing their thanks to their friends. A lovely lunch was served after which a social hour was spent. We are sorry to see Mr. and Mrs. Ward and family leave our neighborhood as they have been here for a long time and we have learned to look upon them the same as our own. Mrs. Ward has been a member of our Ladies' Aid for many years and has always been a good helper. Mr. Ward has always attended to his business as elevator agent to the satisfaction of all. So although we do not like to see them leave, our very best wishes go with them to their new home.

We have the pleasure to welcome a new family to our neighborhood. Mr. and Mrs. H. Holtie and family have moved to the Ralph Olsen place and are going to farm it. Mr. and Mrs. Holtie sr. are also here at the present time. We hope they will like it here and will soon feel at home among us.

Those from out of town attending the late P. O. Flaaten's funeral were: a sister of Mrs. Flaaten, Mrs. Garthee of Viking, also Mr. Herman Sand from Elk Point, Mrs. Flaaten's brother, Carl Kleven and son from Bawlf, relations of Mr P. O. Flaaten, Mr. and Mrs. Nils Sand, Mrs. H. Lee and baby Margaret from Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Jacobson had their infant son christened at the E. A. Moen home last Sunday. The baby's name is Dennis Wayne. Sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. C. Johnsrud, Mr. O. Berlid and Miss Mavis Jacobson. Rev. A. Vinge officiated. After the ceremony, Mrs. J. Jacobson, grandmother of the baby served lunch to about 25 persons.

After visiting friends and relatives around here for a few days Herman Sand left for Elk Point Saturday morning. Mrs. Flaaten accompanied him to Edmonton. She returned Monday evening.

Amisk Creek is having a Bingo party in the school Friday evening, April 10th. Also a bed throw will be raffled, which was donated by Mrs. C. Ward in aid of the Red Cross. The Bingo party is also in aid of the Red Cross.

Miss Madson, teacher of the Amisk Creek school took the bus Saturday morning to spend the week end in the city.

Mrs. A. Pearson, Ellen Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ward and I. C. Olson visited the city on Monday.

RAILWAYS' PART IN WAR OUTLINED

Chicago, March 23—The vital and little known part played by Canada's biggest war industry, the railways, was stressed by Major F. L. C. Bond, D.S.O., vice president and general manager, Central Region, Canadian National Railways, and president of the American Railway Engineering Association at the 43rd annual meeting of the organization. Among the points brought out by Major Bond was that Canadian railway traffic is now 75 per cent higher than it was during the peak year of the Great War of 1914-18 and that it is twice as large as the total volume of traffic moved in the year 1938.

Major Bond found that although railway traffic in Canada is now larger than it had been at any time in the country's history, no serious congestion had occurred but a note of warning was sounded when he added that "while we have so far been able to maintain the high standard of freight service established prior to the war naturally the ever-increasing production of war munitions and supplies will place heavier burdens upon the railway which must affect less essential services."

PLANNING THE FARM SHELTERBELT

(Experimental Farms News)

In establishing shelterbelts and windbreaks around prairie farm homes, it is very essential to have a definite and permanent planting plan before the actual planting is started. As a general rule the style of plan to be followed will depend upon the situation of the farm buildings and other local aspects, states C A Edwards, Dominion Forest Nursery Station, Indian Head, Sask.

The first consideration in any plan is protection from prevailing winds, usually most necessary on the North and West sides. The area to be enclosed should take in at least five to six acres to allow generous space for the buildings, implement sheds, corrals, poultry runs, gardens and a relatively smaller area for ornamental features. Ample space should be allowed between the farm buildings and the protecting tree belts to avoid inconvenience from snow drifts in the winter period. All shelterbelts should be at least 30 yards or more away from the permanent farm buildings on each side. The planting area should be thoroughly conditioned by deep summerfallowing even if it should require two season's work. Satisfactory results may not be expected from trees planted in poorly worked ground. The prepared strips should be wide enough for four or five rows of trees planted through the centre, leaving a margin of space from ten to fifteen feet wide on each side for permanent cultivation. The length of the plowing will depend on the area of ground to be protected. In working to any plan, the best results will be obtained by starting on a small scale and gradually extending the planting each season until the general plan is completed. The way to plan the farm shelterbelt, and other tree planting information are described in the Department of Agriculture bulletin entitled "Tree Planting on the Prairies," available on application to the Dominion Forest Nursery Station, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

While the mass of the people of Canada are only now beginning to realize the significance of the serious reverses suffered lately by the Allies particularly in the Far East, tending to make every citizen more and more war conscious, yet the bad reports or news of the war not only convey dramatically vivid impressions of undiminished heavy blows as one stronghold after another is lost by the Allies but the real meaning of these serious set-backs is somewhat nebulous at this time for the man-in-the-street in face of the persistent reports that some sort of Allied counter-action is in the making.

From time to time these reverses or bad news constitute the gist of criticisms or circumstances that seem to offer no immediate justification for optimism on the part of the man-in-the-street throughout Canada, but in so far as an experienced observer backstage along Parliament Hill is concerned, the actualities of the war situation are not so dark, even in the Far East. In other words without an accurate and detailed knowledge of the war situation, including the Far East, the man-in-the-street in Canada must not accept without proper reservation or qualification the reports of reverses, particularly when it is remembered that enemy propagandists desire to produce just such ill-effects upon the morale of the people. Indeed, it is known in well informed circles backstage in the nation's capital that the powers of resistance to enemy propaganda of the masses, the stay-at-homes, are just as important factors in this modern war, wholly or in large part, as the powers of resistance of the armed forces, with any conscious or unconscious failure to recognize this fact being the circumstance in which the greatest discouragement lies. Briefly it is part of the desperate enemy propaganda machine's operations to influence public opinion in the whole Western Hemisphere and it is of no lesser diabolical or destructive force than their military activities.

Since the enemies started their campaigns to rob and to rule the world by force or deceit, the nations of the Western Hemisphere have passed through three periods of false hopes and delusions, aided by enemy propagandists and their friends. First, these nations believed that they will be able to remain neutral in this war by appeasing Hitler, Mussolini, and the Japanese military cliques. This policy failed. Second, these nations believed that they will not be involved directly in armed conflict even if they helped the other democracies by furnishing war supplies. This policy failed. Third, these nations believed that they will be able to win the war without huge losses of human resources and with a policy of "business as usual during altercations" carrying on commerce and industry, politics, and all other normal activities of life. This policy failed.

As a result of these false hopes and wrong reasoning, the initial efforts of the Allies in the past three months have failed somewhat, particularly in the Far East. Now it is clear that the Allies can only win the struggle when they have resolved that they can only win through an absolutely united total effort backed by an undivided public opinion within each nation and amongst themselves.

One of the principal objectives of enemy propagandists is to destroy this unity of purpose within the realm of each of these Allies, particularly making desperate and continuous attempts to arouse public opinion in the United States and other Western Hemisphere nations against Britain and in Britain against the United States and the other nations of this hemisphere.

It is an old underhand trick of enemy propagandists, but it is always replete with potent dangers. In the last World War, the enemy propagandists stressed the saying that "the British are prepared to fight to the last Frenchman." It was a determined attempt to create the impression amongst the people of France as well as of neutral countries that Britain was the only nation which did not want peace and that she did it because she was really taking no great risks, practically forcing Frenchmen to spill their blood freely in defence of British Imperialism, though the masses of France did not accept these false stories.

Now, the enemy propagandists are trying desperately to create feelings of distrust and disunity amongst the Allies, particularly between Britain and the nations of the Western Hemisphere. So far these attempts have failed to influence public opinion in Britain where "fifth columnists" and appeasers are not tolerated and their fortunes are at their lowest point in a long time. However, in the Western Hemisphere, it is somewhat another story because it seems that the enemy propaganda machine is moving in high gear to discredit Britain in the eyes of the people and to create the impression amongst the masses that the United States or other nations of his hemisphere are fighting in this war in defence of British Imperialism.

Of course, it is false just as it was in the case of France in the last war, but the truth is that the nations of this hemisphere are fighting for their existence. Of course it is the right of the man-in-the-street to criticise leadership and politics of the British Government just as much as that of any other government, particularly since constructive criticism is one of the prized rights of democracy, but the truth is that criticism of the way in which the war is being conducted by Britain against the Axis Powers, including reverses, is something that should be left to the British people alone. They know their situation much better than outsiders, who can reserve their criticisms for their own government.

It must not be forgotten that Britain is the only basis from which a real big offensive can be launched against Germany and Italy and that Britain is likewise the best basis from which these Axis Powers can make a big offensive against Canada and the United States. Moreover Britain is producing large quantities of tanks and aeroplanes and she is shipping now a large proportion of them to Russia in order to aid this nation's struggle against the common enemy. While the American nations will be the "arsenals of democracy" and the bulwark against any western thrust of the enemy towards this continent.

Therefore these facts should be born in mind constantly by the man in the street throughout Canada regardless of the complaints and criticisms brought on by the serious reverses suffered by the Allies so far in this war, particularly the set-backs in the Far East. It must not be forgotten for a moment that such efforts to demoralize the masses of this country are encouraged by enemy propagandists or conscious or unconscious friends and victims of these propagandists, though a well-informed observer must report that such bewilderment or deep depression is looked upon with disfavour in reliable quarters in the nation's capital.

PROVIDE $1,000,000 FOR NEW HIGHWAY

Providing for an expenditure of $1,000,000 on new construction of main and district highways in this province estimates for the public works department were passed at the session of the Alberta legislature just ended.

There has been no announcement as to where these funds may be expended as the distribution will depend upon the most necessitous cases.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association have expressed keen interest in the road building plans for this year, having urged on numerous occasions that road improvements should be made on wide scale in view of the fact that motor revenues collected by the government far exceed the outlays on roads.

Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works, has stated that he will make a complete study of the road situation and decide upon the construction program for the season.

The government's program, however, would be affected by any federal restrictions that curtail any new road ventures that do not serve military requirements. There is no anticipation that federal restrictions would apply to ordinary maintenance.

Paving would not be affected by federal restrictions.

Wartime Prices And Trade Board

SAVE THE WOOLIES

Clothes of pure wool are going to be hard to replace until after the war. Experts of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board advise all housewives to fight the enemy, the moth, by observing in time the following rules of warfare:

(1) In packing away your winter woollies, be sure all articles are CLEAN and free from moths and larvae before being packed.

(2) Seal all the packages and boxes with gummed tape. Moths dislike newsprint, cedar, moth balls, etc. These discourage them but do not kill them. Cedar-lined boxes and bags are no use at all if they have chinks that can admit moths. Best way is: keep the enemy out.

Warm dark clothes-closets are favored by moths at all times. Clothes hung in such closets should be given regular inspection and shaken from time to time throughout the year.

VITAMIN B. BREAD

By the middle of April, the new Vitamin B (Canada Approved) bread and flour will be available all over Canada. Creamy rather than white in color, the new flour will contain more Vitamin B and iron than the customary white flour. The flavor will be the same.

Vitamin B combats mental depression, fatigue and nervous irritability. Vitamin B flour and bread have been in use in England since the early days of the war. So beneficial has it proved in maintaining morale, that Lord Woolton, British Food Controller, has issued an order prohibiting after April 20th, the baking of bread and cakes unless these contain at least 75 per cent of Vitamin B. flour.

The Consumer Representation Branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board headed by Miss Byrne Hope Sanders is behind the movement to make Vitamin B (Canada Approved) bread and flour available to Canadians.

KEEPING MEAT CHEAP

To keep down the prices of meat and meat products, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has issued an order regulating wholesale prices for beef, veal and pork and their products. No retailer now need pay more for grades of meat to packing houses and meat wholesalers than he paid to the same wholesalers for similar grades of meat during the 'basic period' September 15th to October 11th last, irrespective of prices paid by other retailers.

FAVORING THE BRIDE

Sentiment still survives in the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Though the sugar rationing regulations are now to be rigidly enforced and bakers are prohibited from using sugar for icing and frosting cakes; three exceptions are made:

The bride may have sugar icing on her wedding cake. Birthday and anniversary cakes are also exempted.

For all others, a heavy fine is the penalty.

WORLD WHEAT AGREEMENT

It is anticipated that before many weeks pass the completion of an international wheat agreement will be announced from Washington. Prolonged negotiations have been proceeding there among representatives from the United States, Canada, Australia, Argentina and Great Britain, and something definite is likely to emerge in the near future.

It is anticipated that the agreement will provide for marketing quotas for each of the exporting countries, a minimum world price for wheat, and some arrangement whereby large world wheat surpluses will be taken off the market and held as reserves against any emergency that might develop.

The first step towards a world wheat agreement was made in 1933 when an international economic conference was held in London. An arrangement was reached for marketing quotas for each large exporting nation, but Argentina had a large crop and disregarded her quota. It is understood that the new arrangement will provide punitive measures for any infraction of the quota arrangement.

When the present crop year ends next July the wheat carryover of the four main exporting countries will approximate 1½ billion bushels. It is generally recognized that even the largest after-the-war demand that might be anticipated will not be sufficient to absorb the surplus supplies. Furthermore, the production potentialities are so large that continued unwieldly surpluses of wheat may be anticipated, so that some marketing arrangement is necessary to prevent constant chaos and uneconomically low international prices. —Wheat Pool Budget.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By
Dr. K. W Neatby
Director, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

The Flaxseed Situation

Canada, in normal times imported, on the average, 350 million pounds of vegetable oils. These consisted of edible oils for vegetable shortening, and large quantities of non-edible oils for the manufacture of soap. The Far East contributed coconut, palm and palm kernel, peanut, castor and soybean, while from the Mediterranean area we obtained olive oil for both soap and edible purposes. Smaller quantities of chinawood and perilla were obtained from China and Japan for the paint industry. The spread of the war in recent months has cut off the source of supply of over 60 per cent of our vegetable oils.

Flaxseed is the only oil-producing crop at present grown extensively in Canada, which can be used as a substitute. While it is not quite as good for soap or edible purposes it can be diverted to uses which would not be practical in normal periods.

The flax crop in Canada has increased materially in [illegible] years reaching a production of about 6¼ million bushels in 1941. However, in 1942, it is estimated that we could use 20 million bushels if it were available. While it would be beyond the capacity of our manufacturing plants to handle a crop of this volume, we must bear in mind that as these sources of supply of vegetable oils are lost to us, so also are they beyond the reach of our allies, the United States and Britain. While defence industries and shipbuilding continue to expand, larger quantities of linseed oil will be required for paints, for [illegible] protection, and as supplies of vegetable oils diminish, larger quantities of linseed oil may be diverted to other uses than paint. —Contributed by Dr. W. VOTE YES—

CAREFULLY, PAINSTAKINGLY, and with great seriousness, there are as these words are being written, different groups of young, well educated, intelligent Germans, in many German universities studying how to govern Great Britain, the United States, Canada and much other territory throughout the world. Hundreds of organizations have been founded for the study of foreign policy and special training courses have been introduced by which students are being prepared for the position of "Gauleiter" in a foreign country. Some 600 students attend the University of Berlin, these having already received preliminary education, and in Berlin are given the finishing touch as prospective "Gauleiter" of specific places or areas. This knowledge should focus the attention of British and United States citizens alike on the deep seated, laid out in detail, plans of the Axis for world domination.

And if the above were not enough, pay attention to the following statement given over the Japanese radio quite recently by Dr. Tsunekich Komaki of Kyoto Imperial University. Dr. Komaki said:

> "It is obviously reasonable for us to term America an eastern Asia . . . Europe recognizes Australia as a part of Asia . . . Africa is also part of Asia . . . in ancient Greece it was considered a part of Asia, and the Mediterranean was also so considered by Alexander the Great . . . As you will note on the map, Europe is only a part of Asia. In northern Europe there is Asiatic blood flowing thick in the veins of the inhabitants. The Pacific Ocean is an Asian Sea. The Indian Sea must also be a sea for Asia. The Atlantic Ocean is also a part of Asia. There are no seven seas, but only one sea exists, and it is connected to Japan. All the ocean is to be recognized as the great Japan Sea."

Outlandish as the above appears, it is quite authentic, having been picked up by the United States listening post and carefully recorded.

The situation as between Germany and Japan today as regards world conquest is leading some observers to believe that Japan, exultant in its initial successes, is placing less and less reliance on Germany's assistance. As an illustration of the importance Japan, as well as Germany, places upon infiltration, read the following quotation, which has been over a period of several years, a part of the daily instruction given to thousands of American-Japanese children in Japanese language schools up and down the Pacific coast.

> "Our great Japanese Empire has been ruled for 10,000 years by our honorable Prince. We are all his subjects. And, being so, we must continue steadfastly in the path of our predecessors. There is no other country in the world to compare with ours. It is our duty to carry on the great spirit of loyalty to the Emperor and the Empress, and try to achieve their aims.
> "We must also try to understand the Government of our nation and the problems before it. We must surely try our utmost in this always, for it is our duty and our work. Do it with a big heart.
> "Always love your country and your Emperor. Build up your body. Study everything, be diligent. Do not forget what you learn. If you do all this you will be a good Japanese."

When the announcement was first made that the Canadian government was holding a plebiscite as to whether or not it should be released from its pre-election pledge regarding conscription for overseas service, we felt that the time and labor involved was unnecessary. We are not so sure now. Anyway, with the war situation generally being what it is and the avowed aims of the Axis powers being what they are, this is no time for a serious difference of opinion as regards war effort among the Canadian people. Neither is it a time for the senior government to be restricted in its action as regards war effort by pledges given at a time when the present condition of world affairs was undreamed of. In the plebiscite election to be held on April 27th, be sure and vote—yes.

The United States and the British Empire are as one in this conflict and the following two stanzas of Whittier's make inspirational reading at this time:

Oh Englishmen!—in hope and creed,
In blood and tongue our brothers!
We too are heirs of Runnymede;
And Shakespeare's fame and Cromwell's deed
Are not alone our mother's.

"Thicker than water," in one rill
Through centuries of story
Our Saxon blood has flowed, and still
We share with you its good and ill,
The shadow and the glory.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange
Director, Research Department, Searle

Britain is becoming greatly concerned about her supplies of food stuffs, particularly about certain animal products—bacon, cheese and eggs—which Britain cannot supply for herself but has to import in large quantities. More and more of these foodstuffs are being sunk in transit across the ocean by submarines and by other enemy action.

The quantities of these particular foodstuffs available for export in the United States and in Canada are less than the people of Great Britain require. The latest idea to help beleaguered Britain is for people on this Continent to eat more vegetables and fruits, and so less bacon, eggs, cheese and butter, and in this way to make more of these precious animal products available for Britain.

This can all be done, it is suggested if farmers and city people alike grow a VICTORY VEGETABLE GARDEN. Those, therefore, who grow more vegetables for their own table for summer use and for pickling and preserving for winter use, will certainly be performing a most patriotic act that will help the British people to stand out against the enemy; besides which, the nutritionists tell us, the consumption of more vegetables and fruits containing large quantities of precious vitamins will certainly tend to improve the health of young and old alike.

LINDBROOK

A farewell party was held at the Hall last Friday evening in honor of Mr and Mrs. Aage Jensen and family, who are leaving us soon to take up residence on a farm in the Dickson district of Alberta. Dickson, by the way is near Innisfail. There were about 75 to 100 people present and during the evening Bingo was played and several other games. The children sang the latest songs at intervals, whilst older ones chatted and otherwise amused themselves. Then the ladies got to work on the tables and soon a feast was on hand, Mr. and Mrs Jensen and some Danish friends being at the head table. After supper Mr. A. J. Richardson made a speech in which he referred to the regret of the community in losing such a family as the Jensen family and referred to Aage's filling the position of trustee on the local school board and his family's association with the district for the past 18 years. He also mentioned young Robert Jensen who seems to have been a very useful boy in the school. He stated that all were sorry to see them go, but wished them all the best of luck in their new venture. He then on behalf of the district presented Mr. Jensen with a Coleman gas lamp and Mrs. Jensen with an envelope containing money to buy a purse to suit her taste. Mr. and Mrs Jensen were too deeply moved to make a speech in reply and could only voice their thanks to all. Then Mr Logstead, a Danish boyhood friend of Aage's spoke of his lifelong friendship with Aage and wished him the best of luck in his new home. There were three Danish couples present, friends of the Jensen family, they were Mr. and Mrs. Logstead, Mr and Mrs Boss, and Mr. and Mrs Schram. Then the crowd sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows", "Auld Lang Syne," "O Canada" and the National Anthem. The Danish friends replied with their National Anthem and so finished the evening. We would like to mention that Miss Vern Jensen, the victim of last week's accident was there, being brought by Mr Richardson in his car, quite a Red Cross job at that. Well, Aage and Mrs Aage, and children, goodbye and good luck from your Lindbrook friends.

Mr Paskins, we hear had a bad fall last week. No details available, but we hope it is not serious.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Willard McHeffey had the misfortune to fall down the cellar steps in her home here, and in doing so, broke her leg. She was at once taken to hospital at Edmonton. We will report further as the news comes in.

Don't forget the Free Show at the Hall on the 4th of April at 8:30 p m. It is well worth while making an effort to see and if you still want these shows, keep coming, or they won't. Remember, Saturday, April 4th, at 8 30 p m.

Begins to look as if we will see the "scorched earth" policy here, only not the warlike kind, still cheer up, it can rain, you know.

COMPETITIVE SYSTEM MUST GO

"Selfish or private interest must be ruled out completely. The competitive system must go, to be replaced with one which is based entirely upon the criterion of maximum production with the most efficient use of labor, machinery and materials to operate steadily without cease except for necessary rest or maintenance."

The above statement was made by Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, in an address given in Montreal on March 26th. He said that a definite control of everything produced must be undertaken to decide first what is to be produced, second who is best equipped and qualified to produce it, and finally who is to get the production.

Neither position nor privilege should any longer be considered, said Mr Gordon. The problem of maximum production stands as a challenge to our ingenuity and to our singleness of purpose, and it is in this that the real key to victory lies, because it is the acid test of morale.

MORE FLAXSEED NEEDED

The war in the Pacific has curtailed the supply of vegetable oils. Canada uses about 450,000,000 pounds of fats and oils (excluding butter) annually, of this amount about 270,000,000 is composed of vegetable oils. These are used as follows: 130,000,000 pounds (excluding butter and lard) for edibel purposes; 110,000,000 for soap and glycerine, the glycerine is needed in the explosives industry; 30,000,000 pounds for paint and varnish, which is needed for painting of tanks, guns ships, etc.

Normally Canada imports about 200,000,000 pounds to 250,000,000 of these oils. The import supply is now greatly curtailed, so Canada must produce more.

There are only about four crops that can be grown for oil production in Canada: safflower, sunflower, soybeans, and flaxseed. Flax is the only one that can be increased appreciably this year. The Government has guaranteed a price of $2.25 per bushel, basis No. 1 C.W. Fort William. This is two-and-a-half times the price of wheat. If calculated on the price at the farm delivery point, it is about three times the price of wheat. It will therefore be a profitable crop to grow.

To supply the needs of ourselves and our allies will require about three times the 1941 production. It is profitable, and at the same time our patriotic duty to produce flax. The National Barley and Linseed Flax Committee believe that for every acre seeded last year, three should be sown this year.

For information in regard to seed, seed treatment, and cultural practices see your agricultural representative or elevator operator.

"Do you keep writing pads?"

"Ha, ha" the fresh storekeeper said, "I don't keep them—I sell them".

"Well," retorted the inquirer, "you can keep the one I was going to buy."

Crop Production Programme for the PRAIRIE PROVINCES, 1942

Canada's War Requirements Call For:

A production of wheat limited to what can be sold in the domestic and export markets during the crop year 1942-43.

An unlimited production of coarse grains for live stock feeding to produce . . . the Animal Products and Fats needed in the Domestic market. . . . the Bacon, Dairy Products and Eggs Wanted by Britain.

A greatly increased production of Flaxseed to meet Vegetable Oil Needs of Canada and the United States in view of War Developments.

GRAIN MARKETING POLICY

WHEAT—Deliveries to remain limited; Price to be increased.

Authorized deliveries: 280 million bu. from Western Canada as compared with 230 million bu. authorized from all Canada last year. This 280 million bu is believed all that can be marketed in the 1942-43 crop year; and the expected carryover of 400 million bu. at July 31, 1942, will constitute an adequate war reserve. Individual deliveries will again be determined on a quota basis.

Price: The initial price for deliveries in 1942-43 under authorized quotas will be 90 cents per bu., basis No. 1 Northern in store Fort William—Port Arthur or Vancouver. This 20 cents price increase plus higher authorized deliveries considerably enhances the wheat outlook for 1942-43 as compared with that of 1941-42. (Note: Higher delivery price of wheat not to affect the price of bread in Canada.)

COARSE GRAINS—Unlimited production.

Acreage bonuses: See adjoining column.

Price Floors: To safeguard the position of farmers who increase their production of barley and oats:

a. A minimum price is established for barley at 60 cents basis No. 2 C.W. 6-Row in store Fort William—Port Arthur.

b. A minimum price is established for oats at 45 cents basis No. 2 C.W. in store Fort William—Port Arthur.

In connection with barley and oat prices, the Canadian Wheat Board is empowered to carry out the policy.

FLAXSEED—Unlimited production.

Price: A fixed price is established for flaxseed at $2 25 basis No 1 C W. in store Fort William—Port Arthur. Canadian Wheat Board empowered to purchase and handle all flaxseed delivered by producers in Canada during the crop year 1942-43.

WHEAT-ACREAGE REDUCTION POLICY

LIMITED WHEAT ACREAGE

Since but 280 million bu wheat can be delivered in the 1942-43 crop year, regardless of how good the crop may be, only about 20 or 21 million acres should be sown to wheat in 1942 or about what was sown in 1941.

PAYMENTS FOR ACREAGE DIVERSION

It is contemplated that $2 per acre will be paid on land taken out of wheat and either summerfallowed or seeded to barley, oats, flax, rye, peas, corn, clover, grasses, or millet. These payments are designed to assist farmers who co-operate in the wheat-acreage reduction programme and to encourage the production of coarse grains and other live stock feeds.

The above payments are to be based on the number of acres by which the farmer reduces his wheat acreage in 1942 as compared with the basic acreage in 1940. To obtain the payments the farmer must sow to coarse grains or grasses, or must summerfallow, areas in excess of the basic 1940 acreages sown to these crops or left in summer-fallow.

The crop production programme in western Canada is intended to provide maximum quantities of agricultural products most vital to war needs and at the same time ensures a balance in production plans that will permit successful farm practice in the Prairie Provinces.

P.F.A.A. AMENDMENT

It is proposed to amend the Prairie Farm Assistance Act by removing the price restriction of eighty cents per bushel in the determination of an emergency year under the Act.

War Requirements Call For More Hogs, More Milk, more Beef, more Wool, more Eggs, more Fats & Oils in 1942

EDMONTON TEACHER IN NEW AIR UNIT

A Royal Air Force Station Somewhere in England, March 27— The expanding Royal Canadian Air Force has added an intruder squadron to its growing strength of fighter, bomber and coastal patrol units operating from scattered bases in Great Britain.

A new thorn in the side of the German air force, the squadron is exactly what its name implies. It shadows enemy airdromes and attacks aircraft as they come in to land. The American-built, win-engined Bostons used by the squadron also carry a good bombload and airfields can be "messed up" as well as enemy machines.

The fliers are from all walks of life. Pilot Officers Samuel Paul Malatt of Lillooet, B.C. and Norm Mapes of Raymore, Sask., and Sgt. Earl Anderson of Edmonton, all navigators, were school teachers.

Anderson thinks intruder work "is far ahead of teaching."

Sgt. Earl Anderson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, formerly of Hastings Lake. There are six in the Anderson family, four of whom are now in the services, father, two sons and a daughter.

Lieut. MacCullie Conveys Greetings From District Boys

Lieut. MacCullie, who recently returned from active service overseas with the Edmonton Regiment, brings back greetings from some of the boys from this district who are over there. In conversation Lieut. MacCullie said said he had seen Don Beirnes, the Eaglesham boys, the Swinton boys, Don Hardy, and they were all well with the exception of Don Hardy, who is in hospital with a leg injury.

The boys liked to receive mail and were particularly pleased with cigarettes. He suggested that those sending cigarettes to the troops under the duty free arrangement, let the recipient know the serial number of the package. This helps correct delivery. There have been a few cases of non-delivery but these were due to unavoidable causes.

Lieut. MacCullie is looking particularly well and fit and in a short time expects to resume duty. At the present time he and Mrs. MacCullie are on a trip east.

Wartime Prices And Trade Board

A REAL SAVING

Adversity puts a good man on his feet. Judging by the reduced number of motor licenses sold thus far to persons wanting gasoline rationing cards, it looks as if many city motorists intend to keep the car in the garage for the duration of the war.

This is good news to the street railway and the traffic cops. It is especially good news to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which has been urging patriotic Canadians to let the army, navy and airforce have first call on rubber, gasoline and other commodities, essential to winning the war.

V V V

ROUGH ON HOARDERS

While men are risking death in horrible form to supply our war and urgent business needs for gasoline, it has come to the notice of officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board that some callous people with "fifth column" mentalities, tried to obtain gasoline for hoarding before the rationing regulations came into force.

Investigations are being made. Both hoarder and dealer, if convicted, run risk of fine and imprisonment. In addition, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, says he will have the tanks and pumps padlocked of any dealer found guilty of conniving with a hoarder.

It isn't only gasoline hoarding that is unpatriotic. Says Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. "Anybody who buys more than actual current requirements of any supply of any kind, unless encouraged to do so by a direct statement from a responsible official, is definitely a public enemy."

V V V

Because potatoes in storage at this time of year undergo sprouting, rotting and shrinkage, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is permitting a maximum increase of five cents a bushel per month, for each of the months of April, May and June, over the basic price at which potatoes were sold between September 15th and October 11th last.

V V V

This is the time of year when people plan domestic moving from one rented home to another. All rentals now come under the price ceilings policy of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Landlords or tenants who are uncertain of their rights and duties in rental matters should consult the Regional Rental Officer, Mr. George J. Bryan, at the Board's offices, Williamson Building, Edmonton, or the Regional office in the Burns Building, Calgary.

New Alberta Road Projects Announced

Survey of road projects for this season is being made by officials of the department of public works, according to information received by the Alberta Motor Association.

Announcement has been made that southern Alberta, one being the rebuilding of the highway from Lethbridge to Taber, over a new route, and the other construction of a new highway section of the Trans-Canada highway, between Bassano and Brooks. Re-gravelling also is to be carried out on the highway between Medicine Hat and Brooks.

On the Jasper highway east of Edmonton, a new 30 mile stretch will be constructed, between Lloydminster and Vermilion, linking up work that was done last year on the east and west sides.

A M A. officials have been advised that the province plans to do a lot of work this year on the Peace River highway, thus providing a link for a with the U.S. highway to Alaska from Fort St. John.

Officials of the A M.A. are keeping a watchful eye on the government's road program, this organization having maintained that the province should make much larger outlays on roads in justice to the motoring public and in view of the millions of dollars in revenues which motorists provide each year.

Admiration

The Jones' infant was being bathed at the customary time when in walked Nancy, a neighbor's little girl. Silently she watched the operation for some time. Then she surveyed the bedraggled doll she carried under her arm. It was minus one arm and part of a leg and seemed the worse for wear. Finally she said to the mother:

"Mrs. Jones, how long have you had your baby?"

The child was informed, and, again looking from her doll to the baby, she said:

"My, but you've kept it nice!"

Although the Government's much wider enforcement of the National Resources Mobilization Act means to the average Canadian throughout the country that everybody within certain age and physical limits, will be merely assigned to certain categories of balanced service in the armed forces, in various other war undertakings, or otherwise in activities approved by the authorities, yet an experienced observer must report at this time that behind the scenes along Parliament Hill it is held that what the Government has done so far in this direction is really only a start in carrying out any plan of total mobilization, particularly since under the present scheme of national selective service about three-quarters of the population will be left precisely for some time where they are now. Indeed, the new mobilization orders, the numerous regulations to control commerce, industry, and the relations between capital and labor, the rationing of certain materials, and the restrictions of luxurious living have caused great changes in the life of the average Canadian, but what is sure to follow now will affect much more every family in this country, involving revolutionary changes in the way of life such have never been witnessed before in the entire history of Canada.

It has been no secret for a long time on Parliament Hill that there was no full satisfaction in this important matter of man-power and woman-power organization, including inadequate plans for training, faulty distribution of services, wrong ideas about rehabilitation of persons in bad health, and no definite remedy for the shortage of farm labor in practically every part of the country. But as this nation moved closer and closer to the front lines of the war, it became obvious that objective selective service was necessary. Therefore, for many weeks it was an open secret in the nation's capital that a "man-power" sub-committee of the Cabinet, consisting of Hon. J. T. Thorson, Hon. C.W.G. Gibson and Hon. Louis St. Laurent, was studying carefully this serious problem, though it was known that the Labor Department, under the new Minister, Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, would be an important part of the machinery.

The average Canadian must realize that there are actually eight objectives in the idea behind the priority of use of man-power and woman-power. First, there is a desire to mobilize gradually all possible human resources. Second, it is gradually to replace men with women where this is possible. Third, there must be a balance between supply and demand of labor. Fourth, essential peace-time services must be maintained. Fifth, full provision must be made against any possible enemy invasion. Sixth, armed forces must be created for overseas service. Seventh, war industries must obtain all necessary labor requirements. Eight, food must be supplied to this nation as well as her Allies and the farmers' labor problem must be solved without much delay.

While the Government's much wider mobilization plan involves issues in several directions, yet essentially and immediately there is no doubt that the farmers' problem may prove to be the most serious of all, especially because somehow or other the average Canadians, more so in urban centers, has failed utterly to realize that objective selective service in this war must be planned for production of food upon which fully as much emphasis is placed as on the armed forces. In other words, it must be recognized by the average Canadian, and it must be done quickly, that, under present circumstances, a small nation like Canada with a population of about 11,500,000 and a tremendously big coast line of thousands of miles to defend, together with the gigantic war obligation to feed herself as well as her Allies, cannot wait upon those who are ignorant of this problem, theorize, speculate, or fool with red tape.

Objective selective service is something new in Canada, but this is not so in the United States where already it is planned to mobilize sixty-nine million people or about half of the population, comprising ten million for the armed forces, twenty-four million in defense industries, ten million in Civilian Defense, five million in transportation, and twenty million in farming enterprises. In fact, the operation of the selective service system in that country in regard to the farmers' labor problem provides an important experience for Canada's guidance since it is beginning to appear as if the appeal to the farmers to raise more food than ever this year and the certainty of good prices will not necessarily cause a record production on account of the serious labor problem, with the farmers claiming that the trouble can be traced to the faulty operation of the selective service system.

In actual practice, it has been discovered that deferment of essential farm help as a matter of right has not worked out well, being dependent upon the caprice of the local boards, and on the other hand, it is claimed that industry, not conscription, is chiefly responsible for the discontentment and faulty operation of the selective service law. It is estimated that 85 per cent of those leaving agricultural employment have entered industry and only 15 per cent have been taken into the armed forces. Higher wages are the inducements. Furthermore, an increase in farm wages, bringing them up to the level paid the unskilled worker in industry, might remove the discontentment or change the trend of labor movement, though at present it is impossible for farmers to meet the industrial scale. A comparison of farm wage rates with the average hourly pay scale of the unskilled worker in industry indicates clearly that the factory hand could equal the daily farm wage by working only two to five hours.

This is a bad condition, and if the United States as well as her Allies are to have sufficient food, a practical remedy must be discovered.

While Canada has adopted certain laws in an effort to avoid farm labor troubles in the new mobilization orders, yet the experience in actual practice of the United States in regard to selective service and farm labor cannot be ignored by Canada particularly because any possible discontentment of such a large and important section of the population as represented by the farmers of this country is not a good thing for the public morale at a time when morale must be kept at the highest possible point.

If the objective selective service plan of Canada is to succeed, the application of the law must be in tune with the spirit behind the regulation. There is no doubt on Parliament Hill that in time this will be accomplished, though initial difficulties may arise as the way of life of the average person undergoes great revolutionary changes which will affect temporarily every family throughout Canada, producing more important news from the nation's capital than it is generally expected.

APPRECIATION

A letter to his father in England from the driver of an armoured vehicle in the Middle East reads as follows:

"The civilians in the game who don't care a d—— what they do or where they go are the Y.M.C.A., the Salvation Army and the Padres.

"When a S.A. bloke can get Aussies to sing hymns and LIKE it, he's pretty hot. As for the Y.M.C.A., they beat the band. Right up in this front area two of them run a canteen and reading room in the remains of a house propped up between ruins. They are shelled regularly and bombed half a dozen times a day.

"One morning I was the only one in the room. One of these Y.M.C.A. chaps was writing a letter, the other was listening to the radio. Jerry suddenly turned on the heat, dive bombing. But these chaps didn't budge, except that the one at the radio strolled over and looked out of the window. The letter-writer merely looked up and shouted (you had to shout): 'I wish you'd come away from that window. One of these days you'll fall out and break your neck.'

"I was seriously thinking about a funk-hole for myself right then, but I simply couldn't go after that."

Buy War Savings Stamps

Herr Goebbels Must Be Laughing

Editorial from Liberty Magazine, March 28th, 1942

Since that September day of 1939 when, with courage alone as our support, we declared war on Nazi Germany, we have never had before us the immediate prospect of anything but dark and difficult days full of tragic happenings.

We faced an enemy who for years, as we now know and might then have suspected, had been using the time afforded him by our weakness and indecision and thoughtless good intent to forge the weapons for our destruction. In those dark hours after Dunkirk and the fall of France we added to the Nazi enemy an equally crafty, if less capable, foe. When we had stretched our resources to meet assault about the shores of all the seven seas, we were faced by a new and desperate foe. That was Japan, a foe drunk with a wild dream of hemisphere dominion who in a desperate gamble succeeded, for the moment, in almost overwhelming our tenuous line of empire.

Are there any thoughtful people who would not agree that there were desperate chances that we had to take; that these were the happenings against which we had to steel ourselves? We were not ready, while our enemies were. Only surprising breaks of luck could have spared us, and all the breaks went against us. True, there were other circumstances, inefficiency in high places, crass mistakes. Let us concede it all. If none of these short-comings had been ours, the odds were still against us. We might have saved ourselves from some disasters; we could not have protected ourselves against them all.

The easy way in times like these is to find a scapegoat. Maybe we can find instances of failure so gross as to call for judgement. But we, the people of democracies, in the main, must be our own scapegoat. On us must lie the blame for the rivalries and dissensions and stupidities that sent us half armed against an able and cruel and treacherous foe.

That is of the past. But today, disheartened by new setbacks, we are in grave danger of repeating our almost fatal mistakes. We have one chance to win, by using all our vast resources of men and materials in the one task of preparing to meet the foe on even or better than even terms. We have one chance to lose, if we let bitterness and disillusionment engender rivalries and prejudices among the United Nations to deflect us from this one and all-important purpose. We can make more tanks, more planes, more guns, more munitions than can our combined enemies. We can throw the balance definitely and for all time in our favour. But we can do this only if we devote ourselves unswervingly to this one purpose.

But will we? We failed in our task a generation ago because we let rivalries and selfish interests and sectional prejudices becloud our vision. Today you can hear old arguments beginning to repeat themselves in new words. We want scapegoats to salve our wounded pride, so we argue heatedly about how lamentably the United States failed at Pearl Harbor; of how British strategy has been bungled, of how British leadership has been found wanting.

And Herr Goebbels must smile to himself, realizing that his whole radio propaganda has been aimed to have us say just that sort of thing; that we may come to feel distrust of each other. We want to upset government and destroy leaders because of a vague panic that is upon us. We want a new deal. But that new deal may be no better than the old deal, for the failure of the old deal was a matter of materials, and materials are still our crucial need. If there is as well a need for national housecleaning, it is every one to his own house. The United States knows of its failure at Pearl Harbor. It has not tried to hide it or to justify it, but to learn its lessons and go on from there. Britain has changed her military leaders and her government when the need arose. Should the need arise again, doubtless she will have the courage and judgment to meet the issue. We have our own problems in Canada, our own obligations. This is the time to be about [illegible].

Maybe we of Canada and our sister dominions should have had a more intimate knowledge of Empire grand strategy. Maybe we should have had a greater part in decisions that affect us so nearly. But at the moment there are obligations nearer at hand. This is our primary business. Not Pearl Harbor, not Bataan. That is in other and able hands. Not Singapore nor Sumatra, not the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau. We can talk endlessly of these affairs, we can complain and denounce, but if we are to win, we must get to the business nearer at hand.

If each of our United Nations attends to that bit of wall over against its own house, then we will not sow the spirit of dissension that might destroy us. We will sow instead the spirit of strength and pride that will support us through any valley of humiliation until we have earned an ultimate victory.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange

The Government plans and proposals for the guidance of the farmers of the West are now issued. The plans are founded upon the undoubted fact that Britain is short of certain kinds of foodstuffs, and that Canada is short of oil.

In principle, therefore, the policy of the Government is to endeavor to have less acreage sown to wheat—because there is a large surplus on hand—and to have as much acreage as possible devoted to the production of flax to produce oil, and to coarse grains which can be fed to livestock to produce bacon, cheese, butter, milk and eggs, which animal products the British people sorely need. The Government policy is not intended to take any land out of production; indeed farmers can best help Britain and Canada's war effort by putting every possible acre into production, but as much as possible into flax and coarse grains.

Needless to point out each acre of land will produce the utmost quantity and quality of any grain crop if farmers will take care to use good seed. Nothing will so tend to improve the quality of crops and the yield per acre as the use of some Registered and Certified seed, if possible sealed in individual sacks.

INDIA AND THE WORLD—

(Christian Science Monitor)

SOME MAY consider it unfortunate that the British plan for India is one which evidently has to be accepted or rejected virtually intact. It apparently permits of little bargaining between Sir Stafford Cripps and Indian leaders who frankly respect him greatly.

Difficulties in the negotiations arise chiefly because Indians fear that Britain will take advantage of certain features of the plan after the war. It should be clear, however, that these features exist not because Britain has any real hope of continuing imperialist rule over India in the future, but because they are necessary to satisfy demands of diverse Indian groups, or to insure military defense of India.

India's choice today may seem to lie between two fears. One is the fear of what Britain may do or fail to do after the war. The other is the fear of what the Japanese and their Axis partners obviously intend to do before the war is over. Even on this basis India's choice seems clear.

But as a matter of fact this is not the real basis on which India must choose. India at this moment is being invited to become a member of a great body of mankind, in which sympathy with Indian demands for freedom runs high. If this body of mankind wins its struggle for freedom with Indian aid, India's future as a free nation would seem assured. If it does not win, India's future is as dark as that of the rest of the world. If it wins without Indian aid, the future of India may once more become a consideration of second-rate importance to it.

To ask Indians to trust Britain may be asking more than they are prepared to do. But today they should trust their friends the world over. To judge by the statements of recognized spokesmen, there is no nation opposing the Axis that does not hope for a success of the Cripps mission to India. This is because all of them realize that its outcome is important not simply to Britain and India but to the entire free world.

Red Cross Appeal To Be Launched

An appeal for $9,000,000 in voluntary contributions to the work of the Red Cross Society will be launched throughout Canada on May 11th and through the succeeding two weeks. This was announced here in a joint statement by Jackson Dodds, chairman of the Central Council, and Mr. Justice P. H. Gordon, Chairman of the National Executive of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

"The Canadian Red Cross Society needs urgently a minimum of $9,000,000 in order to carry on its work for the current twelve months in the mitigation of human suffering," the statement declared, continuing, "This is the first appeal since October, 1940, to the voluntary generosity of the Canadian people.

"The Government of Canada recently arranged to supply the funds needed by various War Service organizations, but the Canadian Red Cross Society was necessarily excluded from that arrangement. The reason for this is that the Red Cross Society is International, its position rests upon the Conventions of Geneva ratified by Act of Parliament. These require the Red Cross Society to be supported by voluntary subscription and it is only by maintaining such support that the Canadian Red Cross Society can command the rights, privileges and immunities guaranteed under International Law. No belligerent government may finance the Canadian Red Cross Society; to do so would be to destroy the International status of the Society and even wipe out its immunity under fire.

"Throughout the whole of the period since the October 1940 campaign, the Canadian Red Cross Society has enjoyed unexampled co-operation at the hands of the people of Canada, the press, the radio and the motion picture industry. Thousands of women in all parts of Canada have worked faithfully and unremittingly to supply the Red Cross Society with materials that it needs to take care of the requirements of Canadian soldiers here and overseas, and to look after the needs of the sick and the suffering among the bombed-out population of Britain, and to prepare for whatever eventuality may befall Canada itself.

"It is only through the Canadian Red Cross Society that any Canadian can do anything for a Canadian, British, Australian or New Zealand prisoner-of-war. It is only through the Canadian Red Cross Society's Inquiry Bureau and its facilities for international investigation that information may be obtained as to missing Canadian fighting men. It is only through the services of the Blood Donor branch of the Red Cross Society's work that those Canadians who are unable to fight can supply blood to make good some of that shed by our fighting men overseas.

The Red Cross is shipping 40,000 parcels to prisoners-of-war each week and has been asked to increase these shipments to 80,000 per week. The cost of supplying prisoners-of-war parcels this year alone is more than $5,000,000.

"The Red Cross Society needs now $9,000,000. With its campaign starting on May 11th, it will pursue an intensive canvass in which it hopes to reach every Canadian and to afford every citizen a patriotic opportunity to give to a noble cause.

"We realize that the time for preparation is short, and that every Branch and every Division of the Red Cross Society in Canada will require to work unremittingly—in some cases almost night and day—to be ready in time for the opening of the drive.

"We appeal earnestly to Canadians everywhere to prepare themselves now to answer the call and to fill this most urgent need."

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By
Dr K W Neatby
Director, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

Seed Growers and Cereals

Twenty-eight varieties of wheat, oats, barley and flax are officially recommended in various parts of the prairie provinces. Eight of these are wheat, seven are oats, ten are barley, and three are flax.

The production of rust resistant varieties of wheat and oats, smooth awned barleys and wilt resistant flax varieties has done wonders in reducing the risks and hazards of cereal crop production. Six of the eight recommended varieties of wheat have been introduced within the last ten years. Two of the recommended oat varieties, six of barley, and all three flax varieties are similarly new.

For this achievement, plant breeders deserve all the credit they get, and more. But we are prone to forget an essential link between plant breeders and commercial producers; namely, the seed growers. Suppose we did not have the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and its provincial branches. Suppose, further, that the Dominion Government did not provide a field and seed inspection service through its Plant Products Division. Plant breeders could still develop new varieties and distribute them to farmers; but they would deteriorate so fast, largely through mixing, that our commercial crops would be a mess.

Seed growers are providing an absolutely essential service in maintaining supplies of pedigreed seed stocks, and they are doing a wonderful job for a very small material reward. If we are to maintain high standards of quality, this link between plant breeders and grain growers must not be weakened. Registered seed pays good dividends, particularly to the commercial grain grower. The seed grower's chief reward is pride in a job well done.

LINDBROOK

Easter Sunday here was anything but the kind that one's mind usually associates with Easter. Spring flowers, lambs, little chickens, etc., no it was more like Christmas day as far as weather was concerned. Some of the "old boys" might have recalled a certain Easter Monday, April 9, 25 years ago, when the weather was very similar to that of this Easter, the place being Vimy Ridge, France, 1917.

Miss Helen West was the guest of her friend, Miss Star Bracegirdle, at Lindbrook for the week end.

The "Free Movie Show" last Saturday night at the Hall was well attended and enjoyed by all. The pictures were good and interesting and the sound effects clear. In an interval between films, two speeches were given, one by Mr. Jas. Bracegirdle, who told of a meeting to be held in the school, Thursday April 9th, at 8 p.m. when the idea of forming a Home Defence unit here will be discussed. This would invite all men from 18 to 100 years of age to join, that is if unable to join the services. The speaker at this meeting will be Mr George Peck of Looma. The second speech was given by Mr. A. J. Richardson, who spoke on the Salvage Drive now in progress all over the Dominion, and stated that salvage could be brought to the school, or if one had enough, say half a ton or more, that arrangements would be made to pick same up. A notice of change of date, that future shows will be held on Friday evening instead of Saturday evening. It was thought that if the people liked, that a dance could be arranged to follow the show, the proceeds to go to the Hall Board's funds. Anyway the next show is to be held on Friday, May 1st at 8:30 p.m., so be sure and see it. By the way, a Charlie Chaplin film will be shown.

The dance held in the Hall on Easter Monday evening, April 6th, was a complete success. An exceptionally large and jolly crowd assembled. The music supplied by Love's orchestra (Macauley Group Artistes) from Edmonton was very good, so with such a combination and a good floor and manager, it is no wonder that all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves, and hope for a repetition before the spring work starts.

Mr. Rennie Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Richardson, was home on holidays during Easter week. Ronald is an engineering student at the U. of A. and on his return will be engaged in practical survey work around Edmonton and district.

Are Forage Crops Adequate

Alberta is becoming a live stock province as a direct result of the war and farmers are adapting their practices to the changed conditions.

The transition from wheat to live stock has increased the importance of forage crops and in several government policies recognition is made of these crops in the changing agriculture.

Forage crops are required to provide fodder for ever growing numbers of cattle, both beef and dairy, for more sheep and for more horses. More and better fodder can be produced from an acre of tame grass or legumes than from the same area of native vegetation. When live stock such as dairy cows are placed under forced production, their feed requirements are increased and better fodder must be provided.

The next most direct source of income from forage crops is from seed production. Alberta is now producing a considerable surplus of forage crop seed which is finding a market in the east and in the United States. This is a specialized business which not only requires particular care in the production of the seed, but also a complete knowledge of the varieties demanded by eastern and U.S buyers.

Forage crops are also gaining importance in the conservation of our soil. The P.F.R.A., the Wheat Acreage Reduction Program and the Provincial Forage Crop Policy have served to emphasize the value of forage crops as soil builders.

As a control for certain weeds forage crops should not be forgotten. This year with chemicals for weed control practically out of the picture, forage crops can be seeded on weedy land.

These and other uses for forage crops suggests that more of them may be used. Every farmer who is not already growing forage crops, especially a legume, should give serious consideration to sowing some land to a forage crop this spring.

Edmonton, April 6— Appointment of two supervisors to administer credit union and co-operative activities in the province was announced by Hon E. C Manning this week. Growing volume of work in connection with these enterprises made the appointments necessary, said the minister. F G Fitzpatrick, who is prominent in credit union and civil service association activities, was named supervisor of co-operative activities, and C D Denny, who has been acting supervisor of both credit unions and co-operatives, will henceforth be supervisor of credit unions. Growth of this latter movement particularly made it necessary to have a supervisor of Mr. Denny's experience devoting full time to the job of organization and administration.

About forty per cent of Alberta's motor car owners were eligible to obtain rationed gasoline April first, when the new gas regulations went into effect. Rations are obtainable only by coupon bearers who must have auto licenses to obtain ration books. The figure is not considered unusual, according to licensing officials. Last year only 10 per cent of the motorists had taken out licenses on April 1st. A total of 42,065 driver's licenses have been issued, compared with the normal total of 160,000 for the whole season. Car licenses now total about 35,000.

Examination time will soon be here, and officials of the Department of Education estimate that about 16,500 high school students in grade IX and XII will write them. This number is slightly below that of last year, and it is considered that enlistments among youths have reduced the total. Grade IX examinations will commence Wednesday, June 24 and will end Tuesday, June 30. Grade XII examinations will commence Tuesday, June 23 and end June 30.

Considerable work will be done by the provincial works department on the Peace River Highway this year, according to Hon. W. A. Fallow. Extent of the work will be governed by the gravel supply available. Back from a southern inspection trip, the minister and his deputy will shortly look over the northern road system prior to making definite work plans. It is possible that the Hines Creek-Fort St. John project will be inspected, Mr. Fallow said. This would link the Alberta system with the Alaska highway as at present being built by U.S. army engineers.

Charging that the latest disallowance of Alberta debt legislation by the federal government was high-handed, Premier Aberhart declared this week that if the people's mandate for debtor relief was to be continually flouted at the instigation of minority groups the province might be forced to take either of two drastic courses. The first is to declare a blanket moratorium on all debts for the duration of the war, at the end of which the situation can be reviewed in the light of the circumstances then existing. The second is to adopt "only as a last resort," that of cancelling the principal of all debts contracted before a certain [illegible]

News Of The R.C.A.F.

Announcement of the promotion to the rank of Air Commodore of Group Captain G. R. Howsam, M.C., Air Officer Commanding the No. 4 Training Command, was made recently by Air Force Headquarters.

It marked another step in the flying career which began during the last war. Air Commodore Howsam, now just 47 years old, flew with the Royal Flying Corp when he won the Military Cross. His chief interest is now centered on training "the best fighting pilots the world has ever seen." To which he adds, "And I think we have them now."

He thinks of the Air Training Plan as something more than just teaching airmen to fly. He believes it is a great character builder. "We must teach them," he said, "not only to fly better than any other men; but also the full meaning of their role in the war, and all that it means to the world."

Air Commodore Howsam for two years acted as director of training at Air Force Headquarters, during which he contributed materially to the creation of the present Joint Air Training Plan.

Development of the Air Cadet organization in Western Canada was demonstrated again recently when No. 32 Squadron, Calgary, turned out on parade in full uniform last week. Arrival of the uniforms, for which the boys have been waiting with some impatience, gave new impetus to the movement in Calgary. Some 150 cadets were out for the first full dress parade.

The Social Credit Whist Drive on April 1st was a great success. There were 14 tables playing Military whist, or rather I should say Crazy Whist. It kept us wondering what was coming next. However, I think we all had a good time and did not quite go batty. After a good cup of coffee and eats, we were all able to find our way home. Sid Whitford is to be congratulated on the way he managed to get us all straightened out. The next whist drive will be on April 10th. This will be a sane game, so come all and have a good time.

The Roddick Bros and F. Grummett have started to saw logs.

Steve Baumgartner will soon be moving into his new house. Then he will pull the old one down and move the new house on the old site.

We are sorry to hear Mrs. Barnes is in the hospital. We hope it is nothing serious and that she will soon be among us again.

May Dunn is visiting her aunt, Mrs Stavely during the Easter holidays.

Owing to the weather conditions there were only a few out to church on Sunday afternoon. There were about twenty persons present. Mr. A. McGee was the student preacher.

On Sunday five of our young people drove into Edmonton to have their blood tested, to be donated to Mrs. H. Clark of South Cooking Lake. She is very ill in an Edmonton hospital. The boys were Jim Roddick, Ralph Leach, Douglas and Bill George and F. Swabey, sr. We did not hear who was the donor.

The Social Credit meeting on Saturday night, April 4th was not very well attended. There were 18 members present and 2 visitors. The next meeting will be on Saturday night April 18th. Come all and let us have a good meeting.

Joan Hennessy is home from Leduc school for the Easter holidays. Leduc's climate must agree with her for she sure looks fine.

The next meeting of the Home Nursing class will be held at the Hall on Wednesday, April 15th, at 3:30. Everybody is invited to attend and they will sure learn something to their advantage.

Mrs. A. J. Leach was a visitor at Lindbrook. She spent Monday and Tuesday at her daughter's Mrs. R. Smith's.

HOLD HIGH THE TORCH OF FREEDOM

Helping To Keep Prices Reasonable

High taxes help to guard the country against unreasonable rises in the cost of living: They divert money from unnecessary spending for peace-time goods to Government spending for essential war-time material.

Saving money, practised by thousands of thrifty depositors has a similar effect: It helps to keep prices from soaring by decreasing the demand for non-essential, peace-time commodities.

Thus, when you save money in a savings account, you benefit yourself and the country. You will need to save, not only for family and personal emergencies, but to pay taxes and to buy war securities. Saving today is a patriotic service.

STUBBLE BURNING

Researches by Ducks Unlimited (Canada) show that destruction of waterfowl nests by stubble burning [illegible] averages one nest to three acres in good duck breeding areas, [illegible] nothing of the loss of nests of meadowlarks, Prairie Chicken, Hungarian Partridge and other ground nesting birds.

This great destruction can be a[illegible] if stubble burning is done before April 15, few birds have started to nest by that date.

Early burning will prevent birds from nesting in stubble fields and thus save the nests from destruction by farm operation.

A countrywide effort through Ducks Unlimited's more than 2,000 Keemen, the Western weekly newspapers and Western radio stations is underway during the next ten days to eliminate this great loss to wildlife.

All friends of wildlife are asked to co-operate.

More birds mean fewer insects and less crop loss—thus contributing also to the National War Effort.

Man and wildlife can thrive together.

MODERN CHIVALRY

Shreveport, La.— That genuine chivalry springs up spontaneously [illegible] it is needed, there can be no doubt. A woman from Broadmoor had gotten her car jammed in a garage so that she could not go backward without scraping the fenders. Several times she attempted to extricate the car without success. Soon a stranger appeared upon the scene [illegible] offered his services. Then two other volunteers joined him and the three men worked patiently together until the car was freed.

True to an innate sense of nobility the men refused to take any reward when the woman offered to pay for their services. Their work was entirely voluntary for the woman had not even asked for help. The three men were faithful workers on a City garbage truck, but to the grateful woman these men were more noble than any armored knight of ancient days. True chivalry springs from the heart and is not confined to any age or clime.

Railway's Part in War

Dealing with the Canadian railway situation in a general way, Major Bond stated that, while the United States has six times as much railway mileage as Canada, it has 12 times the population. Canada has an excellent network of railways with modern equipment and efficiently operated. The development of the country is the story of these railways; the vital and continuing necessity of the railroads to the nation's well being and war services has been thoroughly demonstrated.

"There is a tremendous task ahead of all of us", Major Bond added. "It is being tackled with vigor but all our resources are not yet mobilized—all non-essentials and any hindering influences must go by the board. We expect, of course, that the essential nature of the railways in the war service will give us reasonable priorities in obtaining necessary supplies and manpower. So far as the railway employees of Canada are concerned we are getting a splendid and hearty response and we will go forward with one accord to do our part and win the war."

IRON VITALLY NECESSARY IN FAMILY DIET

Everyone in the home needs iron, from the children to the pet canary. A nail in the canary's drinking water is alleged to bring back his interest in life and song, while iron in the family's diet prevents nutritional anaemia.

Nutrition Services of the Department of Pensions and National Health advise that the following iron rich foods be included in the week's menus: liver, heart and kidney; whole grain cereals; dried fruits, such as prunes and raisins; dark green vegetables; potatoes cooked in their skins, and egg yolks.

Liver, heart and kidney are not always popular foods but there are many good recipes available for disguising them and making them appetizing to look at as well as to eat. A mixed grill of liver and kidney, a steak and kidney pudding, a baked stuffed heart, are all good ways of serving these iron-rich meats. Red currant jelly or a crisp green salad make excellent accompaniments.

It is well to remember that molasses, which is a popular sweetener, not only supplies heat and energy to the body, but also contains iron.

Grass Seed Distribution Slightly Altered

THOSE WHO HAVE NOT PREVIOUSLY PURCHASED SEED TO HAVE FIRST CHOICE

Those ratepayers who have not previously purchased grass seed from M.D. of Cornhill will have first choice this coming season. Seed will go on sale on an announced date and will be distributed from Hay Lakes, Kingman and Tofield, and those ratepayers not having previously purchased seed from the M.D. will have a few days in which to pick up their requirements, and then seed will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Seed is sold at half price plus freight.

The above was decided at the regular April meeting of Cornhill Council held at the Municipal office, Tofield on Friday last. There were present: Reeve Walker, in the chair; Councillors Anderson, Blake, Breen, Coombes and Swabey.

Minutes and accounts of last meeting were read and formally passed.

Mr. E. G. Rovang interviewed Council re the purchase of N.W. 6-51-20. He offered $300.00 for the quarter, $100.00 cash and the balance spread over a year or so. Dr. Simpson also wished to purchase this quarter and offered $300.00 cash. Both offers were unfinished business from the previous meeting. In discussion it was brought out the quarter was rough and there was a question whether by itself it would provide a living for a man and family. Dr. Simpson wanted it for pasture. Later in the day it was formally sold, subject to the Minister's approval, to Dr. Simpson for $300 cash, a bylaw covering same receiving its first and second reading.

Mr. John Herron interviewed Council regarding the purchase of S.W. 10-51-20. He offered $300.00, $100.00 down and $100.00 a year until paid. After a lengthy discussion regarding available quarters he decided to inspect another one and approach council again. A.J. Kope also interviewed council regarding this quarter.

Monthly statement for March was reviewed.

Adjournment for lunch.

Mr. Ole Olson interviewed Council re some brush being piled too near a fence. Councillor Blake will investigate.

Letter from Cutter people re chick vaccine. As the product could be obtained through drug stores, council took no action.

Letter from Dept. of Public Works re application for road grant. It said consideration would be given to application when all applications were in.

Reeve Walker announced that he had been in conversation with Mr. F. M. Baker, M.L.A. There was some mention made of gravelling the north road and Mr. Baker had remarked he would like to see the two miles in the Pines graded and would like Cornhill's outfit to do it. However, if Cornhill's large unit was used on this work it would need a new

A Privilege and a Responsibility

IN A COMMUNICATION to all newspapers the Director of Public Information, Ottawa, requests their assistance in getting out the vote on Monday, April 27th. A portion of this communication reads:

> "The government is not soliciting your support for an expression of opinion one way or the other, but it does seek your full aid in getting out the vote."

Whether a person is informed widely and right up to the minute as regards world events or whether he or she has only a sketchy knowledge of them, it is reasonable to suppose that all, to some extent, realize that we are living in extremely dangerous times. A time when the world as we have known it may change overnight and the peace and security we have enjoyed may become shattered.

Consequently we consider it very remarkable indeed; consider it the pinnacle of democratic policy; and consider it a privilege and responsibility such as come to few peoples, to have the senior government say to the voters, use your own judgement. There are very few countries in the world today in which the electorate in a vote of this kind would not be exhorted, cajoled and even coerced into voting some way the government desired it to vote. There are plenty of reasons why a YES vote should be cast, but if there was not a single other reason, the simple fact that the government placed its trust in my wisdom in regard to such a question would bring forth an unhesitatingly Yes answer.

The conscription plebiscite as it is now commonly known is a Yes or No answer to the following question:

> "Are you in favor of releasing the Government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service."

As most everyone knows the Government prior to being returned to power, stated it would not introduce conscription for overseas service. It is from this pledge the government wishes to be released and to be given a free hand in the conduct of Canada's war effort. It is not even certain that conscription for overseas service will be brought in, but world conditions being what they are, conditions unthought of a few short years ago, it is quite possible that is will be.

Quebec, a traditionally liberal province, is perhaps the most important reason why a YES vote should be cast. Quebec will, if advance reports prove correct, give a majority NO vote, but then Quebec must be shown in no unmistakable manner that in giving a majority No vote, (if it does) it is wholly out of thought and step with all other Canadian provinces. A united nation in thought and action in any war is a necessity, but in this war it becomes a desperate need.

Another potent reason why a majority yes vote should be polled is a nation of 130 million people to the south of us. Long before the United States entered the war they instituted the selective draft system by which each eligible man had a number and if his number was drawn he reported for service. This we have always contended is the best system of all. It leaves the volunteer free to make his choice and at the same time allows the government to correlate supply and demand of men to military needs. Today, even more so than a year or two ago, the interests of Canada and the United States are genuinely blended, and for the good of all concerned, it would be better if the service policies of both nations were identical.

But perhaps the most important reason of all why a YES vote should be cast is that in these days of genuine national peril we must have real leadership. Leadership unfettered by sectional interest however sincere it may be. In any democratic political set-up individual responsibility become focussed as governmental authority and this authority should be virile and absolute, yet withall just and reasonable.

Every person who has a vote should give serious thought to the question and above all make sure to cast it on Monday, April 27th.

Collegiate

The scene was Napier Field, Alabama, the characters, a raw recruit and an Air Corps classification officer.

The private stepped forward and said, "Harvard Princeton, reporting, sir."

The officer, in no mood for jokes, looked up furiously and asked, "What name?"

The recruit blushed and stammered, "Harvard Y. Princeton, sir."

The officer leaned back and sarcastically remarked, "I suppose the Y stands for Yale!"

"Yes, sir," said the soldier simply.

Private Harvard Yale Princeton is now with the Air Corps. Strangely enough, he is not a college graduate—as a matter of fact, he did not even finish high school.—Mather "Wing Tips."

Don't forget the salvage must be gathered NOW, and taken to the school by Saturday, April 18, to be sure of being picked up by truck.

Speaking of war work, the War Work Club which organized the latter part of August 1941, has to its credit a goodly list of completed articles that have been turned in to the Red Cross, I.O.D.E., and Salvation Army. The articles number about one hundred and fifty and include four blankets and ten quilts. Besides this, boxes have been sent overseas to local boys, and a donation of five dollars made to the Milk for Britain fund.

RED CROSS SPECIAL

BY GARRY ALLIGHAN

London, April—"That's my head, if you don't mind," was the one mild protest of Mrs. Cloak of Dover when a piece of brickwork slipped and struck her as she lay pinned down beneath a heavy timber.

This was the aftermath of a moonlight raid, when a flight of Junkers dive-bombed Dover. Banks, stores, offices and houses were destroyed. Thirteen persons were killed and many more injured.

Fifteen-year-old Pauline Cloak was asleep with her three year old brother, Ivan, in the upper story of the club, where her mother was carrying on the job of stewardess in place of her husband who had just the day before gone to join the army.

The club got a direct hit, but Pauline saved her young brother by flinging herself over him under a table. Downstairs, four men, including the mayor, who were playing darts, were all wiped out. When the Red Cross arrived Mrs. Cloak was still under the debris. Pauline and Ivan were wrapped in warm blankets and taken to a rest centre, while demolition workers and the rescue squad worked like galley slaves to free the mother.

All night and far into the next day Mrs. Cloak, conscious but in great pain, kept encouraging rescuers with cheerful remarks. Food, passed through the wreckage by Red Cross workers, kept her alive until she was released and taken to hospital.

Despite the fact that Dover has had a lengthy quiet spell, the surprise raid did not catch war relief organisations like the Red Cross unprepared. The blitz season has not yet resumed its full intensity, but a score of such raids take place every month in British towns, creating a constant challenge to Red Cross operations.

In Dover the Red Cross had swung into action before the last bomb crump had vanished into thin air. Over the roofs of this town where the hottest front-line engagements in the Battle of Britain have been fought and won, blackcrossed wings darkened the sky. The happy normalcy of the city's night life was plunged in tragedy by a heavy rain of heavy calibre bombs. Rescue parwardens and first aid operatives who stood by during the deceptive lull with well-spitted and polished impatience, again had work for their skilled hands. Spick and span Canadian Red Cross ambulance axles were once more deep in the demolishd homes of Britain.

During the height of the raid 1,200 people at a cinema missed a sudden exit into eternity when a bomb fell 10 yards away. Picking up Commissioner Frederick Fisher it carried him, upright, as if walking on air, depositing him 400 yards down the street. He walked about six paces and dropped in his tracks. Red Cross workers rushed him to the hospital, where a new form of respiration was successfully applied.

It was a macabre night. Bombs detonated with a Niagara-like roar; huge buildings crashed down, while ack-ack guns belched out their noisy death. Through it all the Red Cross workers labored unremittingly to help the wounded and sorrowing.

As I left Dover a demolition squad was trying to extricate some of the Cloak family belongings from the wreckage which had been their home. Young Pauline was standing at the foot of the ladder while a demolition worker handed down crumpled bits of clothing. Pauline and Ivan were going to an uncle's home in another part of Kent until their mother is well again.

"We wouldn't have bothered so much about clothes," said the little girl apologetically, "but the Canadian Red Cross must have many more besides us to look after."

Pauline was right. The Red Cross has many more to look after, and the number grows larger as the war goes on. That is why from May 11 to May 23 the Canadian Red Cross is appealing to its friends all over the Dominion to give and give generously toward the $9,000,000 needed to carry on this great work.

ANAEMIA IS ENEMY NO. ONE TO SUCKLING PIGS

More pigs will be farrowed in 1942 than in any previous year and unless preventive measures are taken, losses will also be the largest in our history. Deaths and unthriftiness of little pigs are due to numerous causes, some of which are easily prevented and some are more difficult to prevent.

Anaemia of suckling pigs, directly or indirectly, causes heavier losses than any other single ailment. All early farrowed litters as well as suckling pigs that are kept inside at other seasons of the year are subject to anaemia. It is almost certain to occur. Preventive measures are simple, sure, and inexpensive.

Clean sods placed in the pen daily from the time the pigs are two or three days old until they are weaned will prevent anaemia. Failing a supply of sods the little pigs must be dosed individually with iron sulphate or reduced iron. The amount of iron sulphate required per dose is as much as can be carried on the surface of a ten cent piece. It can be given with a wooden spoon and should be placed well back on the tongue. The first dose should be given when the pigs are a week old, and should be repeated at intervals of a week to ten days until the pigs are weaned. Only one-quarter this amount of reduced iron is required and it need be given only twice or three times during the suckling period. Iron sulphate costs much less.

Protection against anaemia should become a routine practice with all pig growers. It is of particular importance in 1942 when every pig farrowed should be looked upon as a potential bale of bacon for the United Kingdom. —Searle Grain Co.

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, April 13— A hint that the provincial government may shortly move to provide a new protection for debtors was given by Hon. Lucien Maynard when he addressed an Edmonton meeting Wednesday evening. Mr. Maynard looks after debt legislation for the province. Speaking of recent federal action as a "sneak allowance", the minister compared it to the attack on Pearl Harbor. He said that no suggestion of such action had been made by the federal authority while the Legislature was in session, but that immediately after prorogation the debt bills were disallowed. "We are shortly going to give you leadership in the matter of disallowance," said Mr. Maynard, "and if you are satisfied with our policies we want you to back us up."

Representing the Mines Branch of the Department of Lands and Mines, C.M. Macleod, K.C., told the Ewing Royal Commission this week that if the Mines Act had been obeyed in the Brazeau mine at Nordegg, it is unlikely that the disaster there would have happened last October 31. The Commission is investigating the disaster, which cost the lives of 29 workers. The counsel charged that when official visits were to be made, "hurry-up" preparations were made to improve the ventilation of the workings.

The Government will give consideration to a request for larger school grants. It was intimated after representations to this effect were made by delegates from the legislative committee of the Alberta School Trustees' Association. Heading the delegation was A.E. Ottewell, and others were R. Hennig, P.G. Davies, K.C., J.O. Pilon and Mrs. A.H. Rogers. The delegates interviewed Premier Aberhart as Minister of Education, and other government ministers were present.

Declaring that too many people nowadays do not bother to learn the 'why' of things, Premier Aberhart opened a new series of discussion drills in Edmonton this week. An earlier meeting had been held in Calgary. "The trouble with the world is that people do not know how things work," said the Premier. Hence there was a need for greater knowledge of psychology and economics.

Ottawa reports indicate that although Hon. W.A. Fallow has tried to obtain information relative to the Alaska Highway project insofar as it affects the Alberta section of the Inland Route, he has been unsuccessful. The highways minister was seeking information as to future work on the 850 miles of highway linking the U.S. Boundary with the U.S. project starting at Dawson Creek. It was anticipated that the Province may obtain priorities for modern American road machinery should be considered necessary.

Growth of A.R.P. consciousness in the Province is reflected in current reports that speedier action among municipal bodies is likely. In Edmonton, Mayor J.W. Fry has reported to the city council on his recent conference with Premier Aberhart on the matter. The Premier is head of the provincial organization, and the V.V.R. heads the actual work in Edmonton. Stating that it is planned to have one warden at every city block, the city was asked by the local A.R.P. committee to supply $1,000 for expenses, including 2,000 armbands. Ottawa has ruled that Alberta is not a vulnerable area, and cannot receive federal assistance for A.R.P. work.

Among speakers at the annual convention of the Alberta Teachers Association were Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer, Dr. G. Fred McNally, deputy minister of education and Dr. H.C. Newlands, supervisor of schools for the province.

Declaring that the announced statements in regard to the forthcoming national plebiscite are of "obscure, indefinite and contradictory" nature, members of the New Democracy group in Parliament declared Friday that they find it impossible to commit their supporters to any particular course of action, and added that it was a matter for personal responsibility on the part of all citizens to decide how they will vote. The group also stated that they have consistently advocated total effort for total war on the basis of conscription of the money system by Parliament must precede regimentation and the conscription of manpower. "Subsequent events have justified the rightness of this stand" declared a caucus statement.

A MERCURY WANT AD BRINGS RESULTS

LINDBROOK

It looks as if our last winter was of the type that one hears so often over the radio, that of "this is a delayed broadcast." The most of us wish we could do as we do with the radio, turn it off and on to spring weather. It gets too darn tiresome when winter hates to let go its hold here.

Mr. Ronnie Richardson and his friend, Mr. Edgar Holum both of the U. of A., have returned to the city.

Mr. Ralph Erickson spent a few days of the Easter vacation visiting friends in Ryley.

Miss Lorine Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wood of Lakeshore, is getting practical teaching experience in the Lindbrook school for a week. Miss Wood is attending normal school in Edmonton.

The meeting last Thursday night at the school here to discuss the forming of a unit of the V.V.R. here was pretty well attended. The term V.V.R. is largely misleading, it being more of a Home Guard Unit open to everyone and men from Tofield and district west were expected to attend but didn't, maybe it was too cold. Mr. Geo. Peck outlined the scheme and answered questions re same. It was also suggested that the ladies of the district and the older girls form an auxiliary to this unit. They would be taught first aid, etc., which knowledge would be handy, war or no war. There were 6 veterans of the last war present, in fact all that is left in this district, and they all signed up. Later a meeting will be called to sign on anyone that cares to join, so look out for notice of same. The scheme is absolutely voluntary, there being no hold on you whatsoever. It just means that if anything happens, to be ready. It may not be Japs, but enemies in our midst. There are a few colonies of such here and there and could prove very destructive to the war effort by sabotage, etc. Also if these people know that we're quite ready to handle them, they will think twice 'ere trying it.

Mr. Bruce Best of Athabasca was down on a week end visit to his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. Evans of Lindbrook. Mr. Best expects soon to be wearing the uniform of the R.C.A.F.

That Doughnut Hole Again

BY BRIGADIER A.W. BREWER,
DIVISIONAL COMMANDER
HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

Honolulu, April 13— A soldier recently said, "It's not the doughnut and coffee that The Salvation Army canteen passes out to us on firing line duty in Hawaii that we appreciate most. It's an undefinable something . . ." This lad, by the way, crouched on a rock in a secluded spot after being relieved of sentry one night when he made the remark. He added later that he would wait for the arrival of The Army's mobile canteen, so that he might talk with one whom he said said "was really interested in the soldier himself." He referred of course to the officer in charge of that canteen, whom he evidently had come to know.

Another lad standing guard on a cold rainy night made this statement "The thing that does me good is to realize that someone cares enough for soldiers to come to them on a night like this."

Confucius, I believe, made a statement to the effect that every space has value, and used a cup as an example. If we are willing to accept this thought, then possibly it is the hole in the doughnut that really has the value. Possibly through it, the doughnut itself forming the frame, the boys picture a friend; sometimes perhaps because of the kindly attitude of our women, they see their mother.

One night recently, one of our women in Salvation Army uniform accompanied me in one of our mobile units. It was raining. It was close to midnight. It was pitch dark and the wind chilled to the bone. While serving one guard, a cough was heard from his buddy. Investigation found him wrapped in a blanket, catching a bit of sleep between shifts. He finally got up to have a cup of steaming coffee and said, "I thought I heard my mother's voice when you spoke." A week later at the hospital, this lad inquired again, "Aren't you the lady who gave me coffee the other night at Post Three?" She was.

Speaking for the many officers working with the boys here in the Hawaiian theatre of the Pacific war, we find many opportunities for moral and spiritual encouragement, even if it is only a cheery "Hello" and a sincere "Goodnight, and God bless you."

Our four mobile canteens here now serve approximately a thousand men every night betwixt dusk and dawn. This requires 150 dozen doughnuts and close to a hundred gallons of coffee a night.

Meeting The Labor Shortage

No one can foresee how acute the farm labor shortage may be this season, but it is likely to become worse as time goes on. A swing from grain to live stock production requires more labor, hence, there is a greater than normal demand at the present time.

Planning the farm work will assist the farmer to meet this shortage. Extra steps and time can be saved by a studied system of doing the chores. Repair jobs on fences, buildings and equipment can be noted in time and the work done before an emergency arises.

Pasturing crops is a labor saving method of harvesting and many farms could, with advantage, grow more pasture. This is especially true with dairy cows.

There is another phase to this labor situation and that is obtaining the same volume of production from fewer units. For example, if the same amount of milk can be obtained from fewer cows less labor is needed to care for them. Similarly a few good sows properly managed may wean more pigs than a larger number of poor sows.

Careful study of these and other factors will often reduce the labor required.

Honeymoon Travel Breaks Record

Montreal, April 13—Records in honeymoon travel were established during Easter Monday at Bonaventure Station of the Canadian National Railways when fifty-three happy married couples boarded trains for various parts of Canada, including Niagara Falls.

The total number established a record for Bonaventure Station while a second record was set by the "Maritime Express," noonday train for Halifax, which carried twenty-seven newly weds for stations in Quebec and the Maritimes. Other principal trains which had honeymoon passengers were those for Sherbrooke, Ottawa and the day Toronto trains.

Train time is always busy at Bonaventure these days but Easter Monday proved a day to be remembered because every couple came to the station accompanied by friends and relatives. Flowers were in abundance and confetti and rice were far too plentiful for those who have to keep the building neat and clean.

All branches of the military forces were well represented among the grooms.

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

In this terribly overcrowded nation's capital a veteran observer is filled with unspeakable emotions to walk through literally miles of corridors or lobbies, offices, banks, restaurants, and every sort of place, both public and private, and to discover from loafing or hard working men and women, who represent a cross-section of the people and who echo public opinion across the country, that a certain degree of multiplying confusion or monumental carelessness of thought still exists in Canada on the plebiscite which is easily right now the most heated and lively topic of discussion backstage along Parliament Hill in face of all other headlines.

It seems that the tendency is to looked upon the actions of the higher-ups in regard to the plebiscite merely as reflections of the desires of the general public. This is faithfully in accord with the concept by the man in the street of leadership or statesmanship which has been general in the English-speaking pre-war democratic world. In pre-war Britain, various Prime Ministers, notably Lord Baldwin, used to contend that fear of the results at the polls restrained the government. In pre-war United States various presidents, including President Franklin D. Roosevelt, always were careful to keep in step with the masses in order to maintain popular support. In Canada, it has been the same story with the men at the helm of the ship of state.

The statesmanship has implied steermanship of the ship of state where consultation of the passengers was not unknown, though there have been frequent allegations that this spelled the negation of representative government because the men at the helm were supposed to do the steering according to the course which only they could decide at critical times in view of their responsibility to the people. It has been charged that in critical times the leaders whom the people of Canada elect to high office must assume authority as well as be accountable to the people who should be held no more coresponsible with officialdom of the ship of state than the passengers on a ship can be for the decisions of the captain and other officers.

What are the facts in the case of the plebiscite?

Premier Mackenzie King has declared definitely in Parliament that his colleagues of the Cabinet and himself intend to ask the people to vote "yes" in the plebiscite. This means that the Government has adopted a simple and direct attitude in this issue because the Government does not desire to engage in the struggle with the hands tied in so far as using compulsory methods for raising sufficient men for overseas service is concerned, if this is necessary.

Under the circumstances, it is apparent now to the man in the street throughout Canada what is the present serious war situation and what are the grave obligations of the Government to the people of Canada and her allies. It can be noted that in the other English-speaking democracy of this hemisphere, our great neighbours and war partners in the United States, there is considerable difficulty to understand why Canada has not yet done, after two and a half years of war, what the United States did on the very first day that their nation entered officially into the struggle. It is quite true that United States entered the war officially only when their territory in Pearl Harbour had been attacked by Japan, while Canada decided to enter the war from the day that Germany started the attack on Poland without waiting for the time when Canadian territory would be attacked.

But anyone, who believes that the Japanese attack in Pearl Harbour involved only the United States and not Canada, is under an absolutely false impression. Canada is an integral part of the North American continent and the borders between this country and the United States have no meaning under the present conditions of the war. Vancouver and Victoria are in direct line with San Francisco and Los Angeles and Halifax, St. John, Quebec and Montreal are in a similar position with New York, Boston, Portland and Philadelphia. The fate of Canada is now so closely related to the fate of the United States that every loss which United States suffers in any part of the Atlantic or the Pacific is a step closer to a possible attack on our own shores.

Still there are a great many people in Canada who claim that our armed forces should be concentrated mainly in this country so that this nation can be prepared against any possible attack on her own shores. They point out the case of Australia which sent her armed forces to various battlefronts of the Empire and now the enemy is attacking on her own shores, with the result that Australia must appeal for help from other nations. But the case of Australia indicates something else. It discloses that, since Australia has strong allies or partners who have come to her timely assistance, the enemy will encounter such strong resistance on her shores that she would never have been able to offer alone, even if she had not sent a single soldier or gun to help the Empire in Libya, Greece or other fronts. Without the active help of these powerful allies or partners, Australia would now be in a desperate position with Japan at her door, even if she had retained on her soil every soldier and gun for the last two and a half years of this war.

Canada is in somewhat similar position now. Without the active co-operation or help of Britain and United States, Canada might find herself in a possibly doubtful situation in the event of a direct attack, but this country can probably avoid such consequences through her complete co-operation and partnership, including all her human and material resources, in the common undertaking of all the allies who aim to strike the enemy wherever or whenever that may be, doing the utmost to prevent the enemy from reaching the stage of any possible direct attack on the New World.

Obviously, every move indicates that this is the strategy in Washington and London. It follows that the leaders in Ottawa, whom the people of Canada have elected to high office in this war, are inclining gradually to this same strategy more and more, merely seeking the proper authority to do so by means of the plebiscite. It is nothing more or less. It is not a resignation of war leadership. It is not a sign of totalitarian war leadership. It is not a novel concept of war leadership. The plebiscite is a simple, direct and common-sense process by which the men at the helm of the ship of state desire to receive unquestionable and popular support of an advocated policy in order to do the steering according to the course which they can see is the only right course for all the allies or partners in this struggle.

DO WE NEED REVIVAL?

The following is from a consecrated servant of God, a minister in Bournemouth, England, and appeared in a Canadian newspaper. We reprint it from the "Harvester Mission Messenger."

(Contributed)

We have been a pleasure-loving people, dishonoring God's day, picnicking and bathing—

Now the seashores are barred; no picnics, no bathing.

We have preferred motor travel to church-going—

Now there is a shortage of motor fuel.

We have ignored the ringing of the church bells calling us to worship

Now the bells cannot ring except to warn invasion.

We have left the churches half empty when they should have been filled with worshippers—

Now they are in ruins.

We would not listen to the way of peace—

Now we are forced to listen to the way of war.

The money we would not give to the Lord's work—

Now is taken from us in taxes and higher prices.

The food for which we forgot to say thanks—

Now is unobtainable.

The service we refused to give to God—

Now is conscription for the country.

Lives we refused to live under God's control—

Now are under the nation's control.

Nights we would not spend in "watching unto prayer"—

Now are spent in anxious air raid precautions.

The evils of modernism we would not fight—

Now—see what Germany, the seat of this teaching has produced

Canada's War Effort

It trains men 19 to 35 in medical categories lower than "B", men from 19 to 35 granted or entitled to postponement of compulsory military service, such as farmers and key men in essential industries; men from 35 to 50, and men from 30 to 35 in medical categories "A" or "B"; young men below the enlistment age for the regular army.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

The new Dominion Government approved Vitamin B white flour and bread will appear on the market on April 15th.

This new flour, from which the bread is made, is manufactured by a modified milling process worked out by Dr. L. H. Newman, the Dominion Cerealist, and his associates at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa. By this new process, a minimum of at least 365 International units of Vitamin B1 is contained in the flour as compared with about 165 units only in present average white flour. These additional units of Vitamin B moreover are extracted from the wheat kernel itself and are not added artificially.

The human body it seems requires definite minimum amounts of Vitamin B each day to ensure good health and abundant energy. The use of the new flour and bread, therefore, should tend to improve the health of men, women and children alike; besides which it helps to protect children from many diseases.

The new flour and bread is not only approved by the Dominion Government, but is strongly recommended for use by all medical men. The bread is not dead white in color but it has a rich, creamy, appetizing appearance. Farm wives, therefore, and indeed all homekeepers, I suggest would do well to give the Canada Approved Vitamin B bread and flour a thorough trial.

JASPER NATIONAL PARK WILD LIFE PLENTIFUL

Jasper, April 13— Wild life is plentiful and healthy in Jasper National Park, the vast conservation area in the Rocky Mountains on the main line of the Canadian National Railways. Government officials checked the animal population during the open season and reported a noticeable increase in all specimens, particularly the Elk family. It was further reported that Rocky Mountain sheep, Rocky Mountain goat and deer are numerous, that caribou herds are thriving in the northern part of the park and that beaver are increasing in all sections. Bird life and waterfowl are also said to be numerous and many of the rarer kind have been observed within the park. Hunting is prohibited within the park area and wild life has found grateful sanctuary within its 4,200 square miles.

MINISTIK

The next meeting of the U.F.A. Jr. will be held at the home of Mrs. C.B. Leach on April 22nd.

On last Monday night, April 13th, the young people held their meeting at Mrs. F. Swabey's home. During the evening the young people sprung a surprise on Mrs. C. B. Leach and presented her with a token of appreciation for the accomodation at the weekly skating parties during the winter.

Mr. H. Heitman is busy hauling lumber from Gibson's saw mill at South Cooking Lake.

The Social Credit Whist Drive on Friday night, April 10th was not well attended. Owing to a free dance at Looma Vista our young people went there. There were 6 tables in play. Better luck next time.

If the people of Ministik wish to have this column continued, they must send what items they have to A.J. Leach not later than Monday night. It is impossible for the writer to collect news without the help of the people in the district.

The next meeting of the Social Credit group will be held at the Hall on Saturday night April 18th. Come all and let us have a good meeting.

Old Crop Flax Still On Farms

Producers of flaxseed who still have old crop flax over and above 1942 seed requirements should be advised that the new and higher price of $2.25 per bushel that becomes effective on August 1, 1942, applies only to "flaxseed grown in 1942." This is made very clear and definite in Order in Council P.C. 1800. The Canadian Wheat Board will be the only buyer of flaxseed in the new crop year and has no power to buy any flaxseed except that of the 1942 crop.

There is no object in holding such flaxseed for a higher price after July 31, 1942, and producers should sell their extra stocks for seed to their neighbors or to a dealer authorized by the Board or deliver to a country elevator.

Every farmer who assists in the distribution of flaxseed by selling extra flaxseed to his neighbors is definitely assisting the Government in an important war objective. Every bushel of flaxseed grown in 1942 will be needed and the co-operation of farmers to this end is requested.—The Canadian Wheat Board.

LET US GET THE VOTE OUT
It may be taken for granted that the majority of Western Farmers intend to vote "yes" in the Plebiscite on April 27th. They are determined to make the National War Effort fully effective; they realize that voting is a National duty.
But the response of the West will be fully satisfactory only if every possible vote is polled. Get your own vote in and see that every qualified member of your Household also votes. Remind your friends of the vote and help neighbours get to the polls. Join in your Community Organization to get out the vote.
Then the voice of the West will be strongly heard as part of the National voice.

LOYAL CITIZENS
DO NOT HOARD!
Hoarders are people who buy and store away goods beyond their immediate needs.
They want to be in an unfair position over their neighbors.
Hoarders are traitors to their country and their fellow citizens, because by creating excessive and unnecessary demands for goods, they slow down the war effort.
There is no excuse for "panic buying" and hoarding. Everyone will have enough, if no one tries to get more than a fair share.
Hoarding must stop! Every unnecessary purchase makes it more difficult for Canada to do a full war job.
THERE'S A LAW AGAINST HOARDING
It is against the law to buy more than current needs.
Violation of the law is punishable by fines up to $5,000, and imprisonment for as long as two years.
AVOID ALL UNNECESSARY BUYING — AVOID WASTE
MAKE EVERYTHING LAST THE LONGEST TIME POSSIBLE
In cases where it is advisable for you to buy in advance of your immediate requirements—such as your next season's coal supply—you will be encouraged to do so by direct statement from responsible officials.

Letter from Wattross Ltd., regarding one eight yard and one ten yard hydraulic scraper. If council was interested, representative would come up and discuss the matter. No action was taken.

National War Salvage Committee wrote requesting the collection of salvage.

Canadian National Institute for the Blind wrote requesting grant. On the motion of Councillor Swabey a grant of $25.00 was made.

Assistance for the blind son of Mr. Evanchien was discussed. It was decided that Councillor Anderson interview the Canadian Institute for the Blind regarding this.

Letter from Mr. F.M. Baker to Councillor Swabey was read. This was in connection with Councillor Swabey's request for a grant to help build this road. Negotiations are still in progress.

The apportioning of the public works allocation as to divisions was then made. Out of a total of $12,000 allocated, each division will be allowed $1900.00; $200.00 is for the hamlet of Kingman and $400.00 for road No. 1 maintenance, divided as to mileage between divisions 6-5-2-1 and 3. The above is subject to plus and minus amounts carried over from last year, the complete arrangement being incorporated in a motion by Councillor Blake.

Councillors made out Form B. This is a description of what road work is planned for the coming season.

Appointment of operators for No. 12 grader was tabled until next meeting. There was some doubt as to who wanted what. O. C. Johnson will be grader man and Frank Grummett, caterpillar man, if these are available, if not an advertisement will be put in the Tofield Mercury.

Councillor Broen will arrange to have No. 12 grader brought from his division to Tofield as soon as possible.

On the motion of Councillor Blake the secretary will write the oil controller and request that councillors be classed in E category as regards obtaining gasoline.

On the motion of Councillor Anderson it was decided to hold court of appeal at the next regular meeting to be held Friday, May 8th.

A bylaw covering the sale of S.W. 16-51-20 to Mr. Ben Tiedeman for $300 cash was given its 1st and 2nd reading.

A bylaw covering the sale of N.E. 34-49-20 to Mrs. Winder for $300 was given its first and second reading. Terms of sale, $50.00 down, taxes for two years and then balance.

On motion of Councillor Anderson it was decided to charge $3.00 per hour for use of grader in towns and villages.

Councillor Blake requested information regarding replacement of bridges and was told this was a government project. He reported two in bad shape in his division.

A number of accounts were presented, passed and ordered paid.

Meeting adjourned.

VISITS WINDSOR CASTLE

In a letter home to his parents, Francis Campbell, who is with the troops in England, tells of an interesting trip to Windsor Castle. He wrote:

"Last Sunday I went to Windsor Castle on a pleasure tour we had. We went through all the old parts of the castle and the great church where all the kings and queens are buried, and they have monuments of them. It was really grand. Then we walked around the castle where the Royal family stay. Luck was with us, they were in and one of the princesses looked out of the window and waved to us."

NO UPHOLSTERY !

For men accustomed to active work, councillors sitting all day find the task a little tiring. So that at least they should have a minimum of comfort, a set of six rubber cushions were purchased by R.M.D. 487, some years ago.

Early last Friday morning, Secretary Letourneau was at the office bright and early to straighten out and dust off the council chamber, in the course of which the cushions were removed, some of them being temporarily put in the vault.

Throughout the entire council meeting on Friday, no one mentioned the word cushion until well on toward seven p.m., and after adjournment when a councillor said, "What became of the cushions, Jack?"

"My goodness," Jack answered, "I forgot to put them on the chairs again." And everyone laughed good naturedly.

LINDBROOK

"Sprig has cumb" so say the folks that caught colds during last week's winter.

The land offensive has started here and will soon be in full swing. Let's hope we will get some decent crop weather this season.

Don't forget the "Free Movie Show" at the Hall on Friday night May 1st. It will include a Charlie Chaplin reel this time. Another added attraction is that a dance follows the show, so come and forget your land, piglets, chickens and lambs for a couple of hours, relax and get a change. It will do you good.

There seems to be a mild epidemic around of scarlet fever and measles. Two families have members ill with same and there may be others. Let's hope it soon fades away.

Mr. Harry Logan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Logan of Lindbrook has joined the R.A.O.C., (Canadian Active force) as a mechanic. Best of luck, Harry, and hats off to Mr. and Mrs. John Logan who lost a boy or two in the last war and have one serving in this one. No plebiscite would be needed if all were like that.

Mr. D. Dyer of Vancouver is a visitor at the Hooper-Holland farm here. Mr. Dyer formerly owned a farm here, so is known to most of the old timers to whom he wishes to say "Hello" being unable to visit them owing to his time being limited.

By the way! What's happened to the Farmers' Union? Are you all going back to sleep, and let everything be put over on you for ever? You know, united we stand, divided we fall, etc.

The Plebiscite

Next Monday is "Plebiscite Day", and every Canadian voter has been informed that it is his privilege to exercise the right of ballot.

The polls will be open on April 27th from 8 in the morning until 8 in the evening, Daylight Saving Time.

While lists of voters have been prepared, it is important to remember that there are "open" lists—that is in either urban or rural polling divisions, any qualified voter whose name has been omitted may vote on polling day in his polling division by taking the required oath and being vouched for by a voter whose name appears on the list of voters for such polling division. If a person so omitted lives in an urban polling division, he must produce his National Registration Certificate as well as take an oath.

Generally speaking, every person over 21 years of age, resident in Canada during the last 12 months and resident in his or her polling district as at March 30th last, can vote.

Every Canadian on active service or in training in any of His Majesty's forces or corps, within or without Canada, is entitled to vote on the Plebiscite in advance of polling day.

The plebiscite is a direct vote of all the voters in Canada on an important question to ascertain the views of the Canadian people on the following question: "Are you in favour of releasing the Government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

MAY HAVE TO RATION FATS

Because the war in the Pacific has cut off supplies of vegetable oils, which Canada, the United States and Great Britain ordinarily import in large quantities, Canada may have to ration fats. This statement was made in Regina on April 8th by Hon. J. G. Taggart, Fats Co-ordinator under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The production of hogs should be increased by 25 per cent in Canada in 1942 over the production of last year, Mr. Taggart said. Farmers should also extend their flax acreage.

In asking farmers to increase the production of hogs, Mr. Taggart said he realized the day might come when there would be a surplus of hogs in Canada but, he said, "We will have to take that risk."

Wartime Prices And Trade Board

SUGAR FOR PRESERVES

To aid thrifty housewives who do up their own fruit preserves and make jams and jellies, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announces that housewives may obtain for canning and preserving fruit, one-half pound of sugar for each pound weight of fruit. For jams and jellies, they may obtain three-quarters of a pound of sugar for each pound of fruit. This is in addition to sugar ration allowed for home use. It does not apply to manufacturers and no additional sugar may be purchased for curing or preserving meats.

ICING FROM GLUCOSE

Necessity is the mother of invention, and the child sometimes does credit to the parent. Because sugar icing on cakes is now prohibited under the regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, some bakers have been experimenting with an icing made from glucose. It's not only a very healthful base, but the experimenters say it makes a better icing than sugar. The buns don't dry up so quickly.

WHEN BUYING TIRES

To offset any "black market" operations in stolen tires, dealers are asked by Mr. Walter S. Campbell Regional Representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Alberta, to take the names and addresses and license numbers of strangers offering to sell them tires. Since the tire restriction order came into force, there have been outbreaks of tire thefts in some parts of the country.

Telephone the Board's Regional office in Edmonton if any suspicious offerings of used tires are made.

HORSEHAIR FOR BRUSHES

If you use last year's brush on this spring's painting job, ten chances to one it is made of Chungking pig bristles, that were packed down the Burma road on the head of a Chinese coolie. This year's brushes will be mixed about fifty-fifty with hair from the tails of Canadian horses. Mr. L. S. Hewes, Director of Brushes for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, says that hair from the tails of prairie farm horses makes the best brushes. Combings from the tails of live horses makes better bristles than hair from the tails of dead horses. About 400,000 pounds of horsehair will be wanted this year for the brush industry.

R.C.A.F. NEWS RELEASE

The town of Hanna, Alberta, has a kindly thought for training pilots who may have lost their bearings in adverse weather.

The town council has caused the name HANNA to be painted on the roof of their curling rink in letters four and one half feet in height.

Advice as to the size of their sign was sought by the councillors from headquarters of No. 4 Training Command, R.C.A.F., Calgary, and Command has replied expressing deep appreciation of the action of the Town Council.

Air Force authorities in their reply pointed out that such aids to navigation in the event of an inexperienced pilot becoming lost in adverse weather were invaluable.

With regard to the size of the lettering they stated that the sign should be such that the name is easily legible up to a height of 1,000 feet, in other words it was undesirable that such easy means of recognition should be available to pilots under training whilst flying under normal good weather conditions when the altitude of the aircraft was generally in excess of 2,000 feet. Therefore the size of the sign as chosen by Hanna would meet the requirements. It was suggested the best location was the roof of any conspicuous building, preferably a railway station.

Air Force officers expressed the hope that other towns would follow the precedent established by Hanna.

PENNIES BUY SMOKES FOR BOYS OVERSEAS

Montreal, April 13—The usually unconsidered trifles of pennies gathered up in Buckshee boxes placed in local offices of the Canadian National Railways have made such a substantial total as to purchase 200,000 cigarettes which have been shipped to the boys of the Canadian Army Overseas. Each month the collections are sufficient to buy approximately 14,000 cigarettes for the Army.

Vitamin B1 For Steady Nerves

Feeling cranky? Do you snap at your relatives and friends? Do you start at your own shadow or spend a sleepless night over every item of adverse war news? What you probably need is Vitamin B1.

Nutritionists have learned that Vitamin B1 has a remarkably strengthening effect on the nervous system. And there is no need to rush off to the drug store and buy pills or medicine, because B1 can be taken in sufficient quantity in [illegible] everyday food, along with all the other B vitamins, which are also needed.

The richest sources are cereals, milk, liver and heart, dried peas and beans and wheat germ. The Nutrition Services of the Department of Pensions and National Health advise that whole grain bread or that made from "Canada Approved" flour should be eaten in preference to white. Oatmeal and other whole grain cereals are also better than too much macaroni, rice and other processed cereal foods.

Another good way to insure a larger intake of Vitamin B1 is to serve potatoes baked or boiled in their jackets, and to increase the family consumption of milk.

The pamphlet may be obtained by writing to Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

THE
BY Dean Wilson

From the intricate and tense situation as it exists at present along Parliament Hill, it is not difficult for an experienced observer to envision why the average Canadian taxpayer, the long-suffering little man, cannot find answers to many riddles contained in the headlines on national affairs as this nation moves more and more into the status of "total" war, particularly when it is remembered that as the tempo of the effort increases so does the staggering cost.

The tremendous expenditures involved in "total" war are already so high that there is no doubt that the little man, who represents the great masses of this nation, is puzzled beyond expression by the mass of figures and zeroes in the nation's complicated balance sheet, with the deepening crisis likely to bring such perplexed figures of costs that will not only bewilder the taxpayers but they will probably bring home the fiscal problems of this war as never before, if they will understand at all the kind of load that they will have to carry until victory is won. In other words, though their income is going up steadily, yet the amount they will have to pay in taxes will mean a direct reduction more and more in the living standards that they have engaged up to the present stage of this war or of the savings that they normally would be able to put aside out of such earnings, with all luxuries gradually becoming only memories and many supposedly indispensable necessities being sacrificed by self denial or by compulsion.

[illegible] cannot be denied that universal suffrage has made [illegible] of the masses in Canada's democratic system. Likewise, it must be admitted at the same time that quite often in the past their ignorance of the principles of proper economics or gullibility has made them easy victims of designing politicians, soap box orators, or professional agitators. However, today, in the stress of war conditions, there is no such lack of vision on the part of the leaders on Parliament Hill who recognize the great danger involved in any possibility of discontentment of uninformed masses. Indeed, recently some progress has been made in educating the masses to a better understanding of the economic situation confronting the people of Canada in this war.

This is the reason for the many hints or forewarnings given in the nation's capital from time to time that "total" war must imply sooner or later almost unbelievable, unprecedented and unforeseen expenditures by the Canadian taxpayer, though some politicians may keep away from mentioning such a possibility as they would from a plague because they fear it would be unpopular. They still think in terms of peace-time political strategy.

Out of an estimated total national income of about $6,500,000,000 this year, Canada must pay at least about $2,000,000,000 for this country's own war programme, $1,000,000,000 for Britain's account, and $454,894,365 for carrying the ordinary non-war activities of the Federal Government. Moreover, since the start of this war, war savings certificates have brought in well over $180,000,000 and there have been four domestic loans, the first producing about $250,000,000, the second about $321,945,000, the third $836,000,000 and the fourth over $900,000,000, aggregating $2,311,700,000 in all. Then again, the Government has planned to carry on this war on a "pay-as-you-go" policy, to avoid inflation evils by maintaining a price-ceiling policy, where the limits on prices and profits establish limits on possible taxation sources or diminish taxation reservoirs, especially through more and more restrictions on the sale of many everyday articles and to follow a policy of raising one half by taxes and the other half by borrowing from the people or domestic loans.

It is true that these facts are amazing. They should cause the taxpayers to pause and to ponder. But they should not believe that the important point is that gradually their assets will melt, thaw, and resolve themselves into a dew during this war. The important point is that victory must be won at any cost and the Government is resolved to do so under all conditions. It is a question only how the burden can be distributed fairly, honestly and equally amongst the masses in all sections of Canada. Of course, it is the duty of everyone to buy Government bonds or invest in war saving certificates, but it must be realized that eventually the people themselves must pay off these bonds. When these bonds mature, the Government which is spending the proceeds of these bonds on the war, must simply tax the people a sufficient sum to retire them. Therefore, it means that the taxpayers must be prepared to accept the forthcoming tax bills, definitely likely to be unprecedented in their proportions, as unavoidable acts on the part of the Government as this nation moves into a status of "total" war. The people must be prepared to adjust their lives to the new conditions already existing and to those which will come shortly, much of which cannot be foreseen at the moment even by the leaders along Parliament Hill where they do predict that what has happened in Canada up to now is only the beginning, with many more personal sacrifices and many more economic restrictions bound to follow, though an extremely careful check is being kept of all war expenditures by the same committee as last year. This is in tune with the popularity of inquiries right now in Ottawa, such as the inquiries into the operations of the Wheat Board, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the system of canteen funds, vocational training and problems of reconstruction.

It is apparent that the whole drift of governmental activities is toward full governmental control of the economic life of the nation as it moves more and more towards "total" war. This is perfectly proper at this time and it will produce news of great magnitude and of lasting effects, even when this war emergency is only another chapter of history through which we are now living instead of just reading.

FOOL FISH BY FALSE WORMS FOR OWN GOOD

There's nothing new under the sun? Perhaps not, but baby fish in half a dozen of Canada's federal fish hatcheries won't believe it for they're being fed now on nice, fat, nourishing worms which Nature never fathered.

Artificial worms have been made before this, of course, but for use in fooling fish and leading them to impale themselves upon the fatal hook, but the latest type of mock wrigglers prepared from a scientifically devised food mixture, are for use in feeding baby fish in hatcheries and bringing them to maximum growth at minimum cost in as short a time as possible. Man's hands prepare the food mixture and then a modified kitchen "ricer" shapes it into imitation worms. The fish do the rest.

AGRICULTURE IS LIFE—

MOST EVERYONE WILL agree that life for most peoples will not be just the same after this war as before it. What changes will take place no person can foresee, but no matter what economic system we shall be living under or what political fortunes befall us, one thing is certain, agriculture will be continued. Men will still plow and till, sow and reap, if not exactly as their fathers did as regard method, their aim will be the same as it always has been, bountiful crops and plentiful herds so that many mouths might be fed and contentment reign.

To-day amid the very necessary pounding out of heavy armaments, the click-clacking clatter of small arms production, and the whine and whirr of electrical devices, one hears little of agriculture as something to learn. Quite recently we were in conversation with a young university student and asked him what he was studying, and expecting an answer along scientific, chemical or engineering lines, we were surprised to hear him answer, "Agriculture." Of course science, chemistry and engineering are mixed up in agriculture too, but agriculture is of the earth, the sun and the wind, and is nature's, not man's contribution to humanity. At the best in agriculture, man only assists nature in her work and it is very necessary that the wisdom, knowledge and skill in doing this be maintained or even increased during the present conflict.

As only skill, diligence and good management, combined with favorable weather can bring about good agricultural returns, so also must there be good economic laws, just prices and fair dealing on the part of purchasers of agricultural products to bring about adequate financial returns to the agriculturalist. Agriculture, like industry cannot flourish unless it is reasonably profitable and to bring this happy condition about the co-operation of the agriculturist as regards skill, knowledge and management, together with the understanding, consideration and positive action of the senior government is necessary. Agriculture is life.

A SUGGESTION—

QUITE RECENTLY a news release from the R.C.A.F. praised the town of Hanna for co-operating with the air authorities by having the word Hanna painted on the roof of the curling rink. The co-operation with the R.C.A.F. lay in the fact that the town's name being painted on the roof of a large building assisted student airmen in determining their position in bad weather. Also that R.C.A.F. officials were consulted regarding the size of the letters, it being desirable to have them neither too large or too small. The R.C.A.F. authorities explained that they did not wish them so large as to be easily visible to experienced flyers flying high, but rather of a size that could be distinguished by student flyers flying at about 1000 feet.

According to a recent news report the town of Coronation was the first town to thus assist student airmen.

Here at Tofield planes are often observed flying over the town and while it is impossible for us to tell whether the men in them are students or experienced flyers, we do know that we have quite a large curling rink here with a roof sufficiently large for a sign of this kind. Purely as a suggestion we pass the idea on to the Town of Tofield, the Curling Club or anyone else interested.

UNIVERSITY FARM YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK

Eight full days of education, recreation and entertainment are now being planned for the Twenty-fourth Annual Farm Young People's Week at the University of Alberta. For 23 years, this very successful short course has been sponsored by the Department of Extension and the Faculty of Agriculture. In the years that are past, more than one young farm boy or girl attending this course during the month of June when the campus is at its loveliest, has felt an awakening desire to further their education by attending the University as a regular student. Later, they have been able to realize this ambition.

Over $850.00 in scholarships and prizes are awarded in competitions for grain and livestock judging, public speaking, exhibition of handicrafts, and for a reading course. In regard to the latter, prospective students are advised to start on this course now, so they will have sufficient time to complete the reading. Scholarships include a course at the School of Agriculture at Olds.

Trips are being arranged to the Parliament Buildings, industrial plants and other points of interest. On Saturday, June 6th, the Department of Animal Husbandry will hold its annual Feeders' Day to present the results of their livestock experiments to the farmers of the Province.

Students will live on the University campus, at a rate of $12.00 for room, board and registration fee. Special transportation rates are available from the bus lines.

The course which is open to all rural young people between 16 and 27 years of age, starts on June 4th and closes June 11th, 1942. Further particulars may be obtained from the Director, Department of Extension, University of Alberta.

Clock Has Ticked Several Wars

Halifax, April 18 — His Royal Highness, Prince Edward Augustus, who in time became Duke of Kent and father of Queen Victoria, built several forts during his stay in Canada, including the Citadel here. But in Halifax the Prince added a town clock which is steadily ticking its way towards its second century of usefulness. In its day it has served to check the time for men of the army and navy through the Napoleonic Wars to the world wars. It is a little tired just now but the passenger department of the Canadian National Railways announced it is still serving as background for Halifax visitors who want a photograph with local color. The municipal authorities have just voted $300.00 for repairs.

300 YEAR OLD EGG FOUND IN ONTARIO RUINS

Midland, Ont., April 20 —An egg laid by one of the first hens to cackle and scratch in what is now the province of Ontario, has been unearthed from the ruins of Fort Ste. Marie in the Georgian Bay District. The mission residence of the Jesuits is the fourth oldest place of habitation for the white man in Canada. When built in 1639, it was 700 miles inland from Quebec and a six weeks trip by canoe and portage. Now the convenient way to reach the site and shrine is by Canadian National Railways over a line from Toronto.

The egg was found eight feet underground and well preserved but not recommended for the table. Archeologists of the Royal Ontario Museum, who are excavating the old fort, state that the hen came up the Champlain Road from Quebec and was carried over a dozen portages before being let loose in the old fort poultry run, in what was then Huronia. The old fort was destroyed in 1649 when the Iroquois conquered the Huron Indians.

After the card game, or rather while the game was on, Miss Smith, our teacher, played games with the children. After the card game we had guessing contests, Quiz, and other good items. The committee, B. Roddick, B. Whitford, and Lloyd Grummett, and Miss Smith are to be congratulated the way they carried out the program of the evening. After the program there was a scramble of peanuts and gum. Then coffee and eats, and home, everybody tired but happy. The proceeds amounted to about $21 clear of expenses. Oh, I forgot to say there was a raffle for a box of chocolates, the lucky ticket being held by Isabel Grummett. The proceeds will be donated to the Red Cross.

There is a marked decrease in the number of automobile licenses issued in Alberta up to April 11, it was stated by licensing officials. The total at that time was 55,000 compared with the total of 96,000 taken out during the whole of the previous licensing year. It was believed that the advent of spring weather may speed up applications. Drivers' licenses issued totalled 78,000 compared with 150,000 for the whole of 1941. Tire and gasoline restrictions are responsible for the decrease, in the opinion of officials. Unlicensed automobiles cannot be filled with gasoline.

(Experimental Farms News)

Grain by itself, is not sufficient to develop and bring a hog to market requirements economically. Pigs fed on grain alone make slow and unprofitable gains as compared with pigs whose rations are properly supplemented with a protein and mineral rich food such as the dairy by-products, tankage or a commercial supplement, states H. E. Wilson, Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta. Dairy by-products, skim milk and buttermilk have been found to be the most satisfactory feeds for supplying the extra nutrients required for balancing the ration. When plenty of skim milk or buttermilk is available there is little need for the purchase of supplementary feeds. When milk is scarce or entirely lacking, the purchase of tankage can be amply justified on the basis of grain saved.

The demand for protein and mineral matter to furnish the building material for the rapidly developing muscular tissues and for a sound body framework in the young growing pig is very heavy. In the fattening animal, the requirement is largely for body maintenance and is, therefore, smaller than in the case of the young, rapidly growing pig.

In order to obtain information as to the economy of feeding tankage in the ration for growing and finishing hogs (fed inside) four experiments involving 24 pigs were conducted at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta. In these tests, four groups of pigs were fed tankage to various stages of growth, the first from weaning to 110 pounds, the second until the pigs reached 130 pounds; the third until 150 pounds; and the fourth until the pigs reached market weight of 200 pounds. In all four lots tankage was added to the grain ration at the rate of 12 per cent until the pigs weighed 110 pounds, and when tankage was fed thereafter it was supplied at the rate of 6 per cent.

In all lots of this experiment the addition of tankage to the ration produced faster and more economical gains than in previous experiments where grain was fed alone. The group fed tankage right up to market weight not only made the most rapid but also the most economical gains. Thus, the addition of tankage over the full feeding period more than paid for itself. It would seem, therefore, that the value of tankage lies not only in getting the young pigs away to a good start but also in its ability to make for higher and more economical gains during the fattening period.

In a similar experiment except that the pigs were on good green pasture, the results with 90 pigs showed that tankage exerted no influence on the rate and economy of gains after the pigs attained an average weight of 150 pounds. The feeding of tankage to pigs on good pasture until they reached 80 pounds however, proved highly beneficial and its special value on pasture would seem to be in its ability to get the young pigs away to a good start. Further information may be found in the Farmers' bulletin 727 "Tankage: Its Value in Swine Feeding," which may be obtained free by writing to the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

MILK

"I'll take milk" is the slogan that Nutrition Services, Department of Pensions and National Health, would like to see adopted by Canadians.

Sound teeth and bones depend largely on an adequate amount of calcium, and milk gives easily the best natural supply of this mineral. Children need at least one-and-a-half pints a day, and the minimum for adults should be half-a-pint a day.

A Canadian diet survey showed that 60 per cent of the people studied were not getting enough calcium. By drinking more milk, not only is this deficiency made up but protein, fat and phosphorus are also supplied. Because of this, milk is properly regarded as the nearest to a perfect food.

It can be taken in many forms and each of them is beneficial. Cheese is high in protein and when available can be used as a substitute for meat, fish or eggs. Skim milk is inexpensive in many localities and contains all the mineral content of whole milk. Butter is the only food fat to contain an appreciable amount of Vitamin A—the vitamin essential to growth and good eyesight.

Calcium, however, remains the most important food component of milk, aiding in the construction of bones and teeth, the clotting of blood, the beating of the heart, and the working of the digestive system.

GOTHAM DUCK MEETS DEATH IN FAR NORTH

Sioux Lookout, April 13— Ducks certainly get around and are not hampered by travel priorities or other restrictions, says Ernie Poole, fish and game representative, Canadian National Railways, in telling of the shooting of a Manhattan raised duck near Fort Albany, on the west coast of James Bay. The duck had a band indicating it came from the New York Zoological Park in 1939.

The V.V.R. met at the store last Thursday night and were issued caps, armbands, etc., and got the literature re new drills, first aid, A.R.P. work, etc. A meeting was called for next Thursday, 30th, same time at the school, to which all who are interested or wish to join are invited to attend. You don't have to be a returned soldier to join this unit.

Mr. Arthur Gill is on the sick list and the doctor has ordered complete rest for a month at least, so we guess this month will seem like a month of Sundays to our old friend. We hope that by the end of it, he will be O.K. again. His son Victor, is also a patient, one of those who are home from school with measles or scarlet fever.

There is quite a mild epidemic of fever and measles around now and the Health Officer has been around several times, checking up on its course and advising both precautionary and remedial measures.

Miss Thelma Kortsman is home too, with the mumps this time.

Work on the land has started, tho' not in full swing as yet.

Carrying On

(By an Airman's Wife)

My heart yearns for my dear one,
My arms ache to hold him once more,
Close by my side would I keep him,
But we bowed to the curse of war.
Our daily tasks, they must be done,
The children clothed and fed,
Taught to face and grapple with life,
Prayers heard, as they go to bed.
Yard raked up and trash destroyed,
The garden seeded down,
Meetings attended, for youth must be taught
That democracy is a crown.
To be worn by each loyal subject;
Who faithfully does his share
To make this world a happier place
As along different roads we fare.
But my heart yearns for my dear one
My arms ache to hold him once more,
Dear God! with thy love please enfold him
And let there soon be an end to this war!

JASPER INSPIRATION PLEASED VISITOR

New York, April 27, — A columnist in the Journal American is responsible for the tale which follows. It appears that Lt. Col. Darryl Zanuck recently recalled standing one evening with W. Averill Harriman at 52rd Street at Fifth Avenue. Harriman confessed he was tired and would like to get away but couldn't make up his mind where to go. "Why," suggested Zanuck, "don't you go to the Canadian Rockies where the air is clean and crisp and the snow-kissed peaks reach eagerly for the sun's warmth, etc., etc., etc."

"Darryl," said Harriman, "Not only are you a poet but your vivid salesmanship has convinced me. I don't know where or how you get the inspiration—but I'm off tomorrow."

Zanuck never told him that they were standing in front of the office of the Canadian National Railways—and that he had been reading off the description of Jasper National Park from one of the posters in the window.

• • • • • • • • •

[To The Editor]

Dear Sir,

Re the item that appeared in The Tofield Mercury this week, "A Suggestion."

I might say that I think it is a wonderful idea, and would also put Tofield on the air lines. Some years ago, Bert Calvert and Yours Truly, painted a sign on the south side of the Curling Club building, "Tofield Curling Club." I have no doubt that the dim outline of the word TOFIELD could still be found, and any amateur with a little black and white paint and a big brush, could retrace this out. I think it was in either a 4 or 5 foot letter. I would cheerfully do this myself, if I had the time, paint and the energy, but I do not think that a roof is any place for one well over the 60 year mark. I am sure the Curling Club would be very pleased to give the space on the roof for this purpose.

Yours truly,
A. B. CLUTTERHAM,
Pres. Tofield Curling Club

• • • • • • • • • •

We are told that an International Wheat Conference is sitting at Washington to deal with the world's wheat situation. There is much that is good for them to do now that the resources of all the United Nations have been pooled. The Washington Conference will no doubt direct the supplies of wheat to the places where they are needed, and no doubt they will make arrangements for the distribution of needed wheat and other foodstuffs to the hungry people of the world as soon as the war is over.

For myself I do sincerely, trust however, that the Conference will not be led, in their enthusiasm, to design policies to set up any "plans" or quotas for the export of wheat when the war is over, for these artificial man-made controls invariably in the past have curtailed the export of wheat, have built up surpluses and so have reduced price. Let Washington Conference, however, simply recommend that international trade after the war should be freed from the tariff barriers which have been choking it, and they will be rendering a most worthy service to the consumers of bread to the producers of wheat, and to all mankind.

WOOL IS TOUCHY

There are not many rules for correct washing of woollens, but break one of them and the harm is done. First and most important: use lukewarm water and a mild soap. Heat in the presence of soap has a bad effect on wool, and may shrink it, yellow it, 'felt' it, or make it hard and boardy.

Use two or three rinses of the same temperature as the wash water. If a piece of wool is plunged from warm soap suds into cold water, the soap will cake and won't rinse out. And the alkali in soap has a weakening effect on wool as well as making it harsh.

Wool should be moved about as little as possible while it is wet. For some reason, moving wet wool around too much makes it 'felt,' and once that happens nothing can be done to restore its soft resiliency. For this reason, too it should never be soaked, but should be dipped up and down in the cleansing process rather than rubbed, pounded and jerked, and a squeezing rather than wringing process be used to remove water.

Woollens should be dried in a warm place but away from contact with direct heat. Bright sunshine will make them yellow. To dry blankets hang them lengthwise over a clean clothesline with half on each side. Clothespins stretch the edges. Reverse the blanket several times after it is partially dry, and from time to time straighten the edges and squeeze out water as it collects at edges.

Camrose Constituency Says Yes; Vegreville Constituency Says No.

In the plebiscite held on Monday, Camrose constituency immediately to the south of Tofield went Yes, complete figures being 8221 yes; 4928 No. The Vegreville constituency immediately to the north of Tofield, went No, near complete figures being 5102 Yes; 8032 No.

Tofield town polling station gave a good Yes majority, the total figures being Yes 217, No 42.

Election day was quiet, the majority of the voters taking the question seriously and voting according to their choice.

The occasional voter was driven to the poll by friends but most voters travelled under their own power.

A few of the results from the surrounding polls follow:

PRE-ENLISTMENT COURSES

Calgary, Alta.— Air Force Headquarters of No. 4 Training Command are justly proud of the pre-enlistment courses which are offered to recruits who lack educational qualifications for air crew. Referring to a recent class of approximately forty young men who graduated at Edmonton and are now enlisted as potential pilots or observers, it was pointed out that many of these men had only grade eight education when they applied for the pre-enlistment course and a record of their educational progress during the twelve weeks course brought high praise from Flying Officer A.M. Davidson of the Edmonton Recruiting centre.

Lack of education does not stop a man from getting into the air force if he is willing and of good mentality. The pre-enlistment course, which is given under the war emergency plan and operated jointly by the air force and the dominion-provincial youth training movement, is designed to bring a recruit's educational requirements up to standard prior to enlisting him for training as a pilot or observer.

Patronage Dividends VERSUS
"Keep the Faith"

On December 1st, 1926, the Alberta Wheat Pool Directors issued a public statement to Pool members declaring that "Each signer must keep the faith." Such a declaration would naturally imply that the Pool Executive would also "keep the faith" with Pool members. Has this been done?

Recently the Alberta Pool announced the payment of a patronage dividend. We have been asked how this is possible.

The reason that the Alberta Wheat Pool has been able to pay a patronage dividend is that they are performing the old feat commonly known as "robbing Peter to pay Paul." In this case it may be more aptly expressed as that of "robbing Peter to pay Peter."

Payment of patronage dividends by the Alberta Pool is made possible through their failure to live up to their promise to pay interest on money which they borrowed from Alberta farmers on wheat delivered to the Wheat Pool in the years 1923 to 1929. You will remember that on all wheat delivered to the Wheat Pools in that period, they deducted two cents per bushel for the building of elevators.

In addition to borrowing from the farmer two cents per bushel each year for the building of elevators the Pool collected each year from the farmers' grain a further deduction amounting to one per cent of the selling price of the grain. This commercial reserve deduction amounted to approximately 1½ cents per bushel each year, bringing the total yearly deductions to approximately 3½ cents per bushel. In the crop years 1923-24 to 1928-29 growers delivered 286,227,734 bushels of wheat to the Alberta Pool. During this period the Pool borrowed from farmers approximately 15 cents per bushel for elevator and commercial [illegible]

The total amount of money borrowed in cash by the Alberta Pool from its members in the form of elevator and commercial reserve deductions was $7,432,250.28. In addition the Alberta Pool has retained since 1928, and still holds, $1,037,554.35 due Alberta farmers as the final payment on the 1928 crop. This brings the total amount of money which the Alberta Pool has borrowed from farmers to $8,469,804.63 which was evidence of a lot of faith.

When this money was being borrowed from Alberta farmers the Board of Directors told farmers in Fifth Annual report of the Alberta Wheat Pool for the fiscal year 1926-27:

> "Our reserves have apparently occasioned some anxiety to a few growers in as much as no re-payment has as yet been made, though it has been stated time after time that as soon as it was possible to start re-paying these reserves, without impairing the credit of the organization, that repayment will be made."
> "All members are paid six per cent interest, in cash, on elevator reserves, from the time that the deductions are made until they are [illegible]

The next year the Pool directors decided that it was only just and proper to pay the farmers interest on the Commercial Reserve deductions as well as on the Elevator deductions which they had borrowed. In the report of the Board of Directors of the Alberta Wheat Pool for the fiscal year 1927-28 it is stated:

> "During the past year your Board has decided to include payment of interest on Commercial Reserve along with the interest paid on the Elevator Reserves. This interest will be reckoned as from the 31st of August, 1927, and payment will be made at the rate of 6 per cent on the Reserves standing to the credit of each member on the 31st of August, 1927. These payments will be made as soon after the first of the year as it can conveniently be done."

The interest at 6% on $8,469,804.63 for one year amounts to $508,188.27. The Alberta Pool has had the use of this money since August 1st, 1929, without paying interest to the farmer from whom it was borrowed. The interest which should have been paid to farmers since 1929 amounts to $8,581,037.36. Every farmer in Alberta knows that he had to pay interest on money that he had borrowed, and it was usually more than six per cent.

Payment of interest on capital funds of co-operatives, obtained from members, and on savings borrowed from members, is an established principle of the Co-operative movement as being legitimate 'hire' for money.

It is obvious that the Alberta Pool properly owes the Alberta farmer:

First: The $8,469,804.63 which they borrowed from farmers for elevator and commercial reserves.

Second: Interest on this money amounting to $8,581,037.36.

These two amounts which the Pool owes its members total $17,050,841.99.

That again is evidence of a lot of faith.

But that is not all of the story about just why it has been possible for the Alberta Pool to distribute the patronage dividend which has been advertised so widely.

It is our contention that the Alberta Pool Elevators have been evading the payment of Dominion Income and Excess Profits taxes since the Wheat Pool operations were abandoned. Since that time the Pool Elevators have been functioning just the same as any other elevator company, except that the Pool Elevator Companies must have spent amounts totalling millions of dollars in propaganda, through publicity, radio advertising and field service work.

There are only two ways in which to obtain money to provide our soldiers, sailors and airmen with fighting equipment. One is by way of taxes and the other is through Victory Loans. The Alberta Pool has not paid the Dominion Government one cent in Income and Excess Profits taxes, while other elevator companies have been paying this tax. The minimum Income Tax is now 40%, which is a substantial amount. Some may think that it is smart to evade taxes, but if every corporation in Canada failed to contribute to the Federal Income Tax department in the same manner as the Alberta Wheat Pool, Alberta soldiers including your son or sons who may be in the forces, would have to fight German and Japanese tanks, guns and dive-bombers with their bare fists.

It is estimated that the amount of Income and Excess Profits taxes which the Alberta Pool should have paid the Federal Treasury in the years 1930 to 1941, and which they have so far escaped paying, totals $778,732.00. This would buy a lot of fighting equipment which is badly needed. To obtain it every organization must contribute its fair share of taxes if our army is to have proper equipment for modern warfare.

It is quite fair and proper for you to ask why the Alberta Pool is able to pay a patronage dividend.

Our reply is that if the Pool were to live up to its undertaking to pay interest to farmers on the money which it borrowed from farmers and pay taxes as everyone else is doing, in the defence of our country (which includes the defence of co-operative principles and even the defence of the Pool elevator system) they would be in no position to pay any patronage dividends.

The Alberta Pool properly owes Alberta farmers $17,050,841.99 which is made up of $8,469,804.63 taken in cash from the farmers, plus $8,581,037.36 of interest on that amount for the years 1929 to 1941. In addition their estimated tax obligation to the Dominion Government is $778,732.00, making a total of $17,829,573.99.

Interest at 6% on $17,829,573.99 is $1,069,774.44 annually.

We have also been asked about the letter forwarded to Alberta Pool members under date of April 15th, 1942, along with a cheque for five per cent of the value of the Elevator and Commercial reserve deductions taken from the Pool members. Some farmers who have inquired are under the impression that this is a partial payment of interest promised to them by the Pool on these deductions. This is not the case.

What the Pool is doing is buying off the farmer's equity in the Pool Elevator system at less than 50 cents on the dollar on the amount properly owing the real owners of the Pool Elevators and who contributed to the Elevator and Commercial reserves in the years 1923 to 1928. If the Pool was living up to its solemn obligation, as cited above directly from the report of the Pool Directors, they would have sent their farmer owner members a cheque for twice the amount that they sent out to individual farmers on April 15th. And it would merely have been payment of interest alone for one year on moneys which they owe the farmers, and not the questionable action of repayment of their obligation to farmer members at less than 50 cents on the dollar.

On December 1st, 1926, the Alberta Wheat Pool issued a statement saying that it had compelled Halvig Holmburg, a Pool member, to pay liquidated damages of $1,000.00 for selling his wheat outside the Pool. In this statement the Alberta Pool said publicly:

> "The action taken by the Wheat Pool was inspired by the fact that the welfare of close to 30,000 Alberta farmers depends upon the integrity and trustworthiness of individual signers.
> "When a contract is broken the sufferers are the rest of the members of the Wheat Pool.
> "A contract is a contract whether it be an agreement for sale or a Wheat Pool contract.
> "Each signer must 'Keep the faith.'"

Pool members for twelve long years have failed to receive interest on the money which the Alberta Pool borrowed from them. They are now asked to accept less than 50 cents on the dollar on the amount which the Pool should properly be paying. How can this be explained as "keeping the faith?"

In forcing Halvig Holmburg to pay $1,000.00 liquidated damages the Pool said of Mr. Holmburg, ". . . it is generally understood that he was in comfortable circumstances." Today the Alberta Pool is also "in comfortable circumstances" and is well able to "keep the faith" by living up to its promises to members from whom it borrowed money.

In time of war it is preferable to avoid as far as possible, internal controversies. Under the circumstances we have, however no apology to offer in placing these facts before you as every farmer is entitled to know all the facts relating to the price which he receives for his product.

The figures given in this statement can be substantiated by a careful study of the financial reports of the Pool.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, April 27—Complete revision of the Alberta highway program for this year is necessary because of the Oil Controller's refusal to permit hard surfacing of 60 miles of main highways, according to Hon. W. A. Fallow. "Mr. Cottrelle has advised that he will do all in his power to see that asphalt is made available for road repair work," said the minister of public works. It was added that certain blistered sections needed repairing, and that it had been planned to put an armour coat on certain sections, including the Medicine Hat-Suffield road to the "British block".

Enhanced wool production is likely to engage the attention of agriculturists, according to Dr. R. D. Sinclair, acting dean of agriculture at the University of Alberta. Shipping shortages are threatening the shipment of wool from Australia, and since Canada produces only one-fifth of the wool she consumes, the answer lies in greater home production.

Declaring that an unfair campaign had been waged against him, Premier Aberhart said this week that John Blackmore, M.P., leader of the Ottawa New Democracy group, was the proper person to speak on the federal plebiscite issue. It had been reiterated by the Premier that the vote is an individual matter of federal concern. Among cabinet ministers who have quoted Hon. W. W. Cross and Hon. Lucien Maynard, have stated they are casting "yes" votes. "At the outbreak of war" said the Premier, "the Alberta Social Crediters were the only political group in all Canada to come out with a definite war policy." He cited determination to fight with Britain, and war on the basis of "utmost effort" with "greatest possible equalization of sacrifice", including conscription of the money system before manpower.

The sugar shortage is tending to swell the ranks of beekeepers in Alberta, and according to W.G. LeMaistre, provincial apiarist, 700 newcomers to the field are known in central and northern Alberta. Last year there were 1,500 beekeepers in these areas. The official also reported increased orders for package bees, ranging from 12 per cent. south of Red Deer to 50 per cent. north. They are going as far north as McMurray, he said. Bees are already at work and first honey is expected this week for use by the bees themselves to build up hive populations.

Set tentatively for commencement May 19, talks between Alberta government officials and representatives of the bondholders' body will bring the question of refunding to the fore once again. It was reported that satisfactory progress was made at the initial talks, and it is anticipated that the committee will make further headway on resumption.

Speaking of the Brown conservation plan for Turner Valley production, J.J. Frawley, K.C., chairman of the Alberta petroleum and gas conservation board, said that in a general way the plan is working satisfactorily, and has been well received by operators. Dr. G. G. Brown of Michigan surveyed the field last year, and advocated a maximum production of 25 barrels per day of reservoir fluid. It will take about six months for a proper appraisal of the conservation measure, according to Mr. Frawley.

First meeting of the Alberta tourist advisory council, recently set up to deal with this important and growing industry, was held in Edmonton Friday, April 24. Special needs of war and their effect on tourism now and in the future were topics expected to receive consideration.

SALESMANSHIP

A tourist stopped in front of a little country store, dumbfounded at the sight of an enormous display of salt piled on the premises. Stack after stack, boxes, barrels and bags. Tons of salt, inside the store and out. "You must sell a lot of salt," exclaimed the tourist. "No, I don't sell much," replied the storekeeper, "but you shoulda seen the guy that came here last week. He really could sell salt."

YOUR SCRAP RUBBER
is now a vital war material

Enemy action in the Far East has caused such an acute shortage of rubber that our whole war effort is in serious danger. Canada [illegible] Allies must have rubber, quickly, for the armed forces, for factories, for ships. The Japanese control our source of crude rubber imports—the only other quickly available supply is old scrap rubber, which can be reclaimed. Every citizen in Canada must do his part in collecting all the scrap rubber in the country and turning it over to the Government for war purposes. Here is how to do it.

THIS IS AN URGENT APPEAL FOR YOUR HELP

Question: Is the rubber situation really serious?

Answer: The shortage of rubber is so grave that any citizen hoarding rubber or using it unnecessarily is committing an act of disloyalty. It is now illegal to destroy any rubber article.

Question: Of what use is reclaimed rubber?

Answer: Old rubber is processed so that the rubber content is reclaimed. This reclaimed rubber is used in the manufacture of essential articles for our war effort, thus replacing crude rubber.

Question: How much scrap rubber is needed?

Answer: Fifty Million Pounds. This is a large quantity, but it MUST be found. Every old piece of rubber in Canada, no matter how small, is needed, QUICKLY.

Question: Should I turn in any usable rubber articles as well as worn out ones?

Answer: Absolutely not! By no means discard anything that is still useful and that might have to be replaced. On the other hand, rubber tires used as boat bumpers, swings, etc., should be turned in for war use.

Question: What kind of scrap rubber is needed?

Answer: Every all-rubber or part-rubber article must be salvaged. Here are a few of the articles you must turn in:

Old Tires of every kind Rubbers
Old Inner Tubes Overshoes
Rubber Boots, Hats, Coats, Aprons, Pants,
Gloves, Tubing, Matting, Toys
Sport Shoes (crepe soles are especially good)
Garden Hose Hot Water Bottles Stair Treads
Bathing Caps and many other articles

Question: What happens to the scrap rubber collected?

Answer: The scrap is sorted, baled and assembled into carload lots and is then purchased by the Government at fixed prices throughout Canada. The Government pays forwarding transportation charges on these carload lots, and is responsible for their allocation. You may be sure that every pound will be used directly or indirectly in the war effort.

Question: How do I go about saving scrap rubber?

Answer: Start hunting for it TODAY. Clean out your cellars, attics, garages and sheds right away. You will find more rubber articles than you expect. Start them all on their way to the battlefront.

HOW DO I TURN IN MY SCRAP RUBBER?

The school boys and girls of Canada are being organised, through the school authorities, to act as Official Collectors of Scrap Rubber. The school nearest you is, therefore, your best Collection Depot. You may dispose of your scrap rubber in any one of the following four ways:

1. Give it to the children for their school collection.
2. Give it to your local National Salvage Committee.
3. Leave it with any Service Station or Tire Dealer where you see the sign: "Voluntary Scrap Rubber Receiving Depot."
4. Sell it to a junk collector.

When you gather up your scrap rubber and dispose of it by one of these methods, it will be used by the Government for Canada's War Effort. Do it NOW!

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

In face of all the other news featured in the headlines, yet a veteran observer, who gets a close-up of the latest doings along Parliament Hill, must state sub voice that Premier King's latest and rather surprisingly sudden consultation with President Roosevelt in the White House in Washington has succeeded in infusing the nation that it is really a sign and token of the wider and wider interests or actions which Canada is bound to take in this war in the future.

It must be stressed that, when Premier King and President Roosevelt talk over matters heart to heart and face to face, there are always recorded some outstanding historic agreements not only for this country and her great next door neighbor but beneficial results for all mankind are writ large for the whole world to read though generally these are accomplished without oratorical flourish or complicated intrusions of official diplomacy. Apart from their Anglo-Saxon heritage and their many years of blessed peace and cordial friendship on either side of the border, these leaders recognize that this planet, the earth, has shrunk in size through the wonders of science until now every democratic nation on earth must get together to fight in this war on one side or another for the same common purposes.

This means that Pan-American sentiment is growing in North Central and South America and altogether the Western Hemisphere is on the high road to unanimity of purpose even if the man-in-the street throughout Canada has not grasped the fact in the alarums of war. It is no longer a case of the wish being father to the thought or of appearances being deceptive, but it is indicative of the shape of things to come. Though some time ago it seemed like a dream yet today it is a solemn reality of the greatest historical importance and it will produce rejoicings to the New world as well as growing nightmares for the fuming dictators before the echoes of continental unanimity have scarcely died away.

As it may be recalled, the Inter-American Conference, which was held in Rio de Janeiro, the capital of Brazil, at the beginning of this year, saw only the objections of two nations, Argentina and Chile, prevent the adoption of an unanimous resolution of the 21 republics of the New World that aimed to break off all diplomatic and trade relations with the Axis Powers, Germany, Italy and Japan. However, after much effort the representative of the United States, Assistant Secretary of State, Sumner Wells, succeeded in obtaining the adoption of a compromise resolution that allowed each nation to sever its relations with the Axis Powers.

But the great happiness was premature!

Within a week of the closing of the Inter-American Conference in Rio de Janeiro, the candidate for president of Chile, who had aroused the suspicion that he favoured the Axis Powers, was utterly defeated, and the candidate, who was an open enemy of the Axis Powers, was elected by a huge majority. Now, there is no doubt that Chile will line up with the other republics in this struggle.

Likewise, Argentina is coming around to this view of unanimity. In fact, Argentina is arresting subversive agents of the Axis Powers who have been active there for the last 8-9 years and this is indicative of the new trend in that republic since that nation and Chile prevented unanimity of purpose in the Rio de Janeiro Conference. It is apparent that the vast majority of the people there is in full sympathy with the democracies and opposed bitterly to the dictators. There are a great many Germans in that big republic, but many of them hate Nazism. Indeed, many of them are descendants of those Germans who left their Fatherland after the unsuccessful revolution of 1848 or later when Bismarck enforced the anti-socialism laws. Other Germans came to that republic after Hitler came into power in Germany. Only a small minority of the Germans in that big republic is sympathetic to the Nazis, but it is well organized and disciplined. With the backing of the Government of the Third Reich, these subversive elements have been able up to now to terrorize the other Germans and to spread their nefarious propaganda amongst the masses. However, it must be born in mind that liberalism is stronger in Argentina than in all other Latin American republics. There is an excellent trade-unionism movement and a strong socialist party, which has six representatives in parliament and a big, influential daily newspaper in Buenos Aires. Moreover, a socialistic member of parliament is secretary of the parliamentary commission which is investigating the activities of subversive elements in Argentina. Therefore, it is certain that sooner or later Argentina will act in full accord with the other democracies.

All the nations of the New World are slowly but surely moving into a line of thought, expression or action in striking parallel to that first initiated activity by Canada in the Western Hemisphere at the start of this war, and these nations are now gradually forming a unanimous front against the Axis Powers. It is a momentous development. This is not merely verbiage or phraseology. In other words, in the seventy-five years that have passed since Confederation was born, no leader's trips across the border have been so productive of such direct and indirect results as that of Premier King's pilgrimages to Washington, though their practical and exact significance in world affairs will only be properly surmised in future.

The Unseen Army

BY J. W. ROBINSON

Far from the haunts of men where the deer and the moose make their home, come sounds of toil, grief and care. Yes, sounds of toil where men are toiling night and day to wrest the coal from the mountains to keep the wheels of industry running, more vital today than ever before when we are fighting for our liberty. Yes, fighting for our very existence, fighting to overthrow Hitlerism and dictatorship and slavery—fighting that we may retain our freedom and that the vast riches of these mountains may never fall into the hands of a taskmaster. Canada, God blest you with vast riches and we are guarding them and handing them down to our children, not to any dictatorship. Even the trees in their majestic splendor stand as sentinels on guard and are symbolic that they will never fall. Yes, men are toiling to win these black diamonds from the mountains, yet happy in their toil, well paid, well fed and enjoying a happy understanding between the management and the men, and each doing his share in War Savings Certificates that we may overthrow this demon of humanity.

Yes, the men are toiling for a living, but toiling for a common cause—yes, a righteous cause, for right is might and might is right and right will prevail. There are men of a dozen nationalities working together in harmony—an example of how nations could work together.

Grief, yes there is grief, grief with zero weather and winter storms; grief moving huge mountains of rock that covers this coal; grief with machinery which is massive and powerful, yet sometimes breaks down. Yes, there is plenty of grief toiling in the dark.

Care, yes there is care, the care of some hundred men and some thirty families who are living in comfortable homes. Many are modern and steam heated. The small village is set in the midst of majestic spruce, a fairy like village, so peaceful and quiet. Then there is the care of the children who are enjoying a new and modern school and the whole village enjoys an up to date store, skating rink, recreation hall, tennis courts and a picture show.

Such is the mining camp of Coal Valley—there are hundreds of similar camps in Canada, each part of the Unseen Army contributing its share to the welfare of the country.

It is the Unseen Army doing its share in the fight, for freedom and the head of this army at Coal Valley is a lady, who, when her husband laid down the command, took up the torch and carries it forward, yes ever forward. May God bless her years and give her wisdom, counsel and understanding.

'Think of the toiler's load of care,
And pray for all in God's own prayer,
Give us this day our daily bread.'

DEHORNING CALVES

Treatment of newly born calves to prevent the growth of horns is a simple, inexpensive operation. It is much easier to prevent the growth of the horns than to remove them at a later date, and the young calf suffers no ill effects, whereas older stock may receive a set back when the horns are removed.

The treatment consists of applying caustic soda, or caustic potash to the horn buttons before the calf is five days old. Either one of these substances properly applied prevents the growth of horns.

Caustic soda or caustic potash may be obtained at drug stores in stick form or as horn paste. Both the stick and the paste should be handled with the greatest care.

Caustic sticks should be wrapped in paper with one end free. The skin over the horn buttons should be washed with warm soapy water and thoroughly dried. Cut the hair from the horn buttons and then moisten the end of the caustic stick and rub it gently on the horn buttons. Repeat the operation two or three times allowing the caustic to dry before the next application. When using the paste, follow the directions on the container.

The greatest care should be taken to prevent the caustic coming in contact with the surrounding skin or getting into the eyes. Severe burns may be caused to the tender skin of the young calf. Vaseline or lard rubbed into the hair surrounding the horn button will prevent the burning. When using the caustic stick do not have it too moist, and if rain is falling, keep the calves inside so the caustic cannot wash off and run down the face of the calf or into its eyes.

AN IDEAL FOR FREEDOM OF PEOPLES

It was an Indian, Sir Rabindranath Tagore, who in "The Gitanjali" expressed an ideal for freedom of peoples and the world which might well be accepted by Canadians, too:

"Where the mind is without fear and the head is held high;
"Where knowledge is free;
"Where the world has not been broken up into fragments by narrow domestic walls;
"Where words come out from the depths of truth;
"Where tireless striving stretches its arms toward perfection;
"Where the clear stream of reason has not lost its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit.
"Where the mind is led forward by thinking into ever-widening thought and action—
"Into the heaven of freedom, my Father, let my country awake."

LIVER RICH SOURCE OF VITAMIN A & B

Since every Homemaker needs to watch for vitamin-rich and mineral-wealthy foods available to her at low prices, she does well to look over available varieties of liver. Liver is one of the richest sources of vitamin A and also of the B vitamins, notably thiamine and riboflavin. In it is also the iron and copper needed for building blood and avoiding anemia. Liver is known to health authorities as one of the most nutritionally valuable foods.

Pork liver, lowest priced of all livers, can be deliciously prepared by braising, that is by browning, followed by slow moist cooking until tender. Beef, lamb and calves' liver is also delicious in many dishes other than as fried.

Care in cooking liver brings good results. Too long cooking and too high a temperature brings undesired results a hardened product and loss of flavour.

AIDING THE WAR EFFORT

If you're one of the many who for some good reason cannot join the Forces, but wish to do something to aid the War effort, here's how to do it.

Mr. Walter S. Campbell, Regional Representative in Alberta for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board says: "Don't make unnecessary purchases of goods. Shipping is scarce and space is needed. Don't use a drop of gasoline unnecessarily. Men are risking horrible death to keep the nation supplied with gasoline. The Army, Navy and Air Force need all they can get. Above all, don't hoard! It's not only illegal; it's mean and unpatriotic.

ODDS AND ENDS

Exposure to sunlight deteriorates natural rubber rapidly.

About $4,000,000 worth of bricks and metal were salvaged from bombed British houses last year.

A cork tree must grow for 15 years before its bark is ready for "stripping."

About 14 pounds of manganese are needed to produce a ton of steel.

ON IGNORANCE

At a Washington party, the late Justice Brandies was discussing the number of simple arguments that wind up in the law courts.

"Arguments for the most part seem so futile," said the eminent jurist. "Behind almost every argument you will find the astounding ignorance of someone."

CHURCHILL SAID IT!

"THE HOARDER"

PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1

People who buy more of anything than they currently need, and merchants who encourage them to do so, are sabotaging the war effort and are therefore public enemies.

Loyal citizens do not hoard. They buy only for their immediate needs. They cheerfully adjust their standard of living, realizing that their country's needs must come first. They do not try to gain unfair advantages over their neighbours.

Are you a hoarder or a loyal citizen? Are you hampering Canada's war effort by unnecessary buying? Or are you co-operating to the best of your ability to save Canada from such horrors as Hong Kong?

If Canadians do their duty, there will be no more hoarding. Everyone will get a fair share of the goods available. More food can be sent to Great Britain. More raw materials — more manpower — will be available for making guns, tanks, planes and other armaments to back up our armed forces.

In cases where it is advisable for you to buy in advance of your immediate requirements—such as your next season's coal supply—you will be encouraged to do so by direct statement from responsible officials.

THE RED CROSS STANDS READY

In two and a half years of intensive submarine warfare less than three per cent of thousands of tons of goods sent overseas by the Canadian Red Cross has been lost by enemy action. This outstanding achievement was pointed out by Captain David M. Logate, Assistant Commissioner Overseas of the Canadian Red Cross Society, who is home for a brief visit after 30 months' duty in the British Isles.

"If Britain were to be invaded tomorrow," said Captain Logate, "The Red Cross is completely organized to carry on without a hitch. In the event of our London headquarters going up in smoke we have five other departments which can function immediately either independently or together. Our staff would be dispersed to areas, the virtues of which have been weighed well in advance. If the invasion initiative is taken by Britain, the Canadian Red Cross is on its toes and ready to go. When the Canadian Corps "moves up" Red Cross supplies will go with it and there will be Red Cross officials right on duty at the bridgehead."

Captain Logate explained that new methods have been developed for the distribution of supplies to troops in action. Not more than one week elapses between a request and the arrival of supplies at that post.

Five different departments, including one for civilian relief, hospital supplies, invalid delicacies department, comforts department and the department which traces the whereabouts of prisoners of war and missing soldiers advising their relatives back home in Canada, function in the Canadian Red Cross overseas.

CHURCHILL MEETS GOEBBELS

Privates Churchill and Goebels showed up in the group of 245 selectees bound for Camp Polk, Louisiana. They are Joseph Goebels of Chase, Kansas, and Clarence Churchill of York, Nebraska.

Eleven warehouses placed at strategic points in the British Isles house the shipments coming in from Canada. The contents of each warehouse include every necessity. If ten of them were destroyed there would be no vital shortage of anything required.

Captain Logate doubted that there was a convoy that left Canadian shores that did not carry something for the Red Cross.

LINDBROOK

It is getting rather dry around here again, and instead of the drying winds that we have been getting, a few nice showers would be a welcome change.

The smoke of many brush piles, etc., has been seen all around of late. It looks like the pictures from the war fronts, the scorched earth policy in action.

Arbor Day, Monday, May 4th, was fittingly observed at the school here. A general clean up took place both inside the school and around the grounds. Trees were planted and at noon the children enjoyed a weiner roast instead of the usual "luncheons" carried by them.

The V.V.R. had its first parade here last Thursday night. The attendance was exceptionally good. The squad took their first lessons in elementary drill and "believe you me" they did exceptionally well. All the Vets were very much pleased both with the attendance and the fine showing put on at their first attempt. There were about 30 present, many of whom joined up after the parade. The V.V.R would like to recruit men from Woodlawn, Ketchamoot, Tofield, Ministik, Deville and Cooking Lake, the idea being that of always having enough present to form a squad, it being purely a voluntary attendance, and there is no compulsion to attend parades. Courses in A.R.P. work, P.T. and First Aid are to be given, also musketry, etc. See any returned man for particulars. Remember! Hong Kong?

The Free Movie show last Friday evening was pretty well attended, there could have been more, but everyone is busy these days so that probably after the spring rush the attendance will be better. A dance followed the show, Tofield orchestra supplying the music and whilst the crowd was not large, it still was quite an enjoyable dance.

Mr. Ronnie Richardson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Richardson, left on the flyer last Sunday night for Copper Cliff, near Sudbury, Ontario, where he has obtained employment at a mine there. He intends working there until the University term opens next fall. He is an engineering student at the University.

The fever epidemic still hangs on, two more "casualties" reported today, Monday.

At the show last Friday, Mr. Richardson spoke on the subject of the formation of a class of instruction in Home Nursing under the auspices of the Holden School District, and invited the ladies of the district to join same. Many signed up at the close of the show. Mr. Richardson also spoke on the Salvage campaign, and urged all to save rubber particularly. Mr. Bracegirdle spoke on the V.V.R. unit being formed here and invited all to join.

The V.V.R. will parade on Thursday May 14th at 8:30 p.m. Squad drill under section leaders from 8:30 to 9:15 p.m., from 9:15 till 10 p.m., platoon drill under platoon sergt. Dress: "mufti" caps and arm bands to be worn.

Mr. Robert Smith had the misfortune to lose two horses last week. It seems that during the night they got access to some treated wheat and paid for their feast with their lives. Tough luck Bob, but these things will happen in spite of precautions taken.

Local Red Cross To Stage Drive Here

At the regular monthly executive meeting of the Tofield Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society held at the Town Hall, Tofield, on Wednesday night, it was decided to stage a Red Cross drive here this coming week. This is in line with the Dominion wide campaign during which it is expected $9,000,000 will be subscribed.

The plan adopted on Wednesday by the local branch was to divide the Tofield territory into divisions and ask one or more persons within these divisions to make a personal canvas. Another meeting was called for tonight (Thursday) when the district will be divided and the people appointed to do the canvassing.

WILD GEESE NESTING

This week on invitation, the editor visited the farm of Mr. Oulton, just three miles up the highway from Tofield. We know it is three miles because we walked two thirds of the way both going and coming, our patriotism as regards tires and gasoline being at a high level just then.

It was an interesting visit as wild geese nesting, both waveys and Canada geese is an unusual sight. Normally they nest far away from the haunts of civilization and to say the least, as far as they are concerned, are not at home to visitors at this time.

Mr Oulton, as quite a number around here knows, has been raising wild geese for some number of years, treating it pretty much of a hobby. He has quite a number of pairs around the place, the life history of which he knows quite well. Some of them have names even. One pair has been nesting in the same place for quite a number of years, coming back faithfully each summer to raise their young. The winter is spent in the southern States as bands put on birds here have been returned from that area. Sometimes one of a pair of geese will go away during the winter and the other remain here, sometimes both will go away. Not every bird returns. It is expected some are shot, others just naturally fail to return.

Barring accidents wild geese mate for life, and during the nesting season at least stay quite close together. At any sign of danger the gander is on the spot to defend his spouse and if unmistakable warning is not heeded Mr. Gander is just as likely to take a jump at you as not, and if the going is too tough, Mother Goose will take a hand in it too. Nesting is generally done on the ground, on a piece of raised land in bushes close to a stream. "Silly as a Goose" does not always apply as they can be taught to stay out of the garden when necessary, even when the gate is open.

There were also two pens of Chinese pheasants. The male bird of these is very beautifully marked. Mr. Oulton has in previous years raised quite a few of these and liberated them. They are not prolific layers but like most wild fowl lay several eggs a year for hatching, the number of eggs laid per bird increasing from the time the bird is one or two years old to the time it is five or six. The flesh of the pheasant is very nice eating.

There were also several peacocks there. These are a relatively rare bird in these parts. The male bird's long flowing tail being a thing of beauty. These are quite difficult to raise here. The cost of the original pair was well over the hundred dollars so one has to be a genuine bird fancier to keep peacocks. Bred in India and Ceylon, of which countries they are native birds, the different colors, shapes and number of their feathers are said to represent quite a number of different things.

Just in case it should be imagined that utility is a minus factor on this farm, we saw several hundred two-month-old White Leghorn chickens, which by all appearances will do their share in the Eggs for Britain campaign. And close by, 12 very young piglets were being treated to a free lunch by a non too handsome but intensely patriotic mother, who evidently had definite ideas as to what should be done regarding the Bacon for Britain Campaign.

THE HEAD OF 'VARSITY ON SCOUTING

"I have long believed that the Boy Scout movement is one of the sanest and most influential of modern educational efforts, and that Lord Baden-Powell was not only a fine general but an educational leader of the highest quality. He aimed to teach, to train, and to discipline boys at the most difficult and critical period of their lives. He conserved human energy not by repressing it, but by giving it a constructive expression and a right direction." —The Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody, President, University of Toronto

Grass Seed Sells Quickly

As was expected right at the opening of the sale of grass seed by the M.D. 487 on Thursday morning last there were customers on hand anxious to buy. While the fact that on limited quantities the seed was sold at half price had something to do with the keen desire to procure some, it is also true that there is a growing consciousness among farmers that the growing of some tame grass is a good thing.

From Thursday to Saturday the office at Tofield passed out about 1000 pounds of seed On Monday about 175 pounds were sold from the same office This took care of three divisions, the other three getting their seed from Hay Lakes, Kingman and Ministik.

This is the third year of the Forage Crop Plan, by which ratepayers were assisted and encouraged to grow some kind of forage crop. The details of the plan are rather complicated but have been explained once or twice in this paper.

The plan as far as this municipality is concerned, has proven a success.

An impartial observer of the activities along Parliament Hill at this perilous time is forced to report that he is more deeply impressed by the greater degree of unity, by the more sober considerations, and by the better perceptions of the dangers in this war on the part of the leaders of all political parties in the nation's capital than by the extent of realization or knowledge of these facts on the part of the great mass of the people.

After more than two and a half years of war, the overwhelming majority of the people in sharp contrast to their leaders, still seem unable to evaluate properly the great need of national unity being in practical and working condition or the great danger of disunity in this extremely critical period. This is why capital and labor relations in this war had to be regulated firmly by law. This is why in stark realism a Federal election was held in wartime. This is why war enquiries on different matters were found to be necessary from time to time. This is why economic or industrial disputes in wartime have arisen in various sections and between various sections of the country. This is why a plebiscite was advisable. In other words any factor of disunity really exposes the people to the grave possibility of evil infection from the venom of enemy propaganda which always works on the theory that if you "divide" your opponents then you can "dominate" them.

Of course, these leaders in Ottawa represent the intelligentsia, the political economy experts and the diplomats of this nation, perhaps, persons knowing facts that enable them to be in a better position to pass judgment on events and necessities of this war, but this does not counterbalance the indications that the receptive ability or understanding of the great masses is only very limited. This does not mean that the Government is to blame for the state of affairs. This does not mean that there is inertia since the contrary has been shown clearly by the people themselves in the consistent expressions of positive feelings and sentiments in favour of following any course necessary to win this war. However in directing the masses towards the goal of victory, the outstanding fact must be born in mind that enemy propaganda methods are aiming persistently to "divide" in order to "dominate", encouraging disunity in their opponents' ranks and spreading lies about this country, our allies, and the war situation in general.

One of their latest and most "popular," if this word can be used, lies is that one or other of the allies is not doing as much as the others and that one or another of the allies wants the other nations to "pull their chestnuts out of the fire." Thus, it is reported that an English-speaking orator on one occasion broadcasted from Berlin to the New World that "whether you like it or not, yet it is true that the United States is more and more being dominated by Britain", and only a day later the same speaker, addressing himself to the British people, stated that "whether you like it or not, yet Britain is becoming more and more a colony of the United States". By such false propaganda and lies, the enemy is attempting to arouse unwarranted feelings of disunity between the allies or amongst the masses.

In this current enemy propaganda offensive directed towards the New World in an effort to "divide" and to "dominate", there is a definite objective now to create elements of confusion, uncertainty and doubt amongst the masses here so that the absolutely false impressions may come into existence that Britain is not doing enough or that Britain is only concerned about her own defence, retaining at home a tremendous army for this purpose. Of course, these are enemy inspired lies and are entirely out of tune with the real facts. Indeed, these are malicious libels against the gallant people of Britain who fought bravely to keep the seven seas open, who fought against odds to keep the enemy busy in the air, and who fought wherever feasible on land, aiming to keep the enemy at bay until other democracies could get organized for the struggle.

In France, at the outbreak of hostilities, Britain sent immediately a huge expeditionary force which fought with remarkable courage until the last minute. If France had not surrendered, Britain would have continued to fight without limitations or reservations. In Greece, the British losses were twice as large as those of the Australians and New Zealanders. In Crete, it was the same story.

The number of British ships sunk in this war by enemy action or combat is large, with the great majority of these ships having been constructed in Britain and the officers or men who manned them and who died in action being from the British Isles.

Out of the huge force of men who are guarding day and night the British Isles, a large proportion of them are not regular soldiers, but so-called "home guards", that is members of the civilian population who not only work but often work very long hours and in their spare time, they engage in extensive training in order to protect their homes and to help the regular forces in guarding Britain's coasts, which extend 3000 miles and the 90,000 square miles of territory. Furthermore, in face of the huge war supplies sent to Britain from the United States and Canada, yet it is a fact that in critical stages of this war Britain in turn has shipped tremendous quantities of such supplies to other nations, especially Russia, with the latter acknowledging officially that the huge supplies of British tanks, aeroplanes, etc., had much to do in stopping the Germans. This was done by Britain in addition to the activities of the R.A.F. which forced a division of the German air forces.

It is a fact that Britain is shipping steadily huge war supplies to Russia to the maximum possible extent. It is a fact that British soldiers are fighting gallantly or are preparing to fight on many fronts to their maximum capacity. It is a fact that the British Navy is fighting, guarding and doing all in its maximum power to keep open all the sea lanes of the world. It is a fact that the R.A.F. is developing to its maximum ability one of the most striking, most active, most heroic, and most effective fighting machines in the world. These are facts. Stories to the contrary are lies. Britain has done, is doing, and will do her maximum under the circumstances to win this war, without limitations whatsoever being made as to the extent of her own sacrifices in her own blood, in her own money, in her own materials, or in any of her own worldly possessions.

Therefore, unfortunately at an extremely critical time in this war when Canada needs most of all a united front amongst its people against the common foes, those who, consciously or unconsciously, directly or indirectly, listen, speak, read, write or tolerate in any way malicious lies are simply gullible victims of the venom of current enemy propaganda which is being waged as a war of offensive action with no lesser fury and seriousness than the military operations and which is aiming desperately to "divide" now the masses in Canada as elsewhere amongst our allies in order to "dominate" later. Fortunately, the leaders of all political parties on Parliament Hill, usually adroit persons as well as politicians, are not victims of this kind of vicious propaganda and they are devoting their energies to all-important matters of war, with internal strife or political dissension in the capital itself decreasing rapidly as the war effort is increasing.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

News from Britain tells us that meat is becoming so scarce that the present ration, which is no more than one pound for each person each week, may have to be further reduced. There is, of course, not a single person in Canada who would not like to share some of the bountiful supplies we now enjoy of meats and other animal products such as bacon, cheese, eggs, butter and milk, with our British friends who are our most valiant comrades-in-arms.

Fortunately there is an easy method by which we can share to some extent. We can eat less of these precious foods ourselves and so release more to be sent to Britain. We can do this by consuming more vegetables; indeed nutritionists tell us that we eat nothing like enough for our own good health of the wonderful vegetables that our prairie lands can grow.

Every farmer, therefore, should certainly put in a vegetable garden this spring, both to help Britain and for his family's sake. Green-stuffs, such as broccoli, mustard and cress, brussel sprouts, spinach, lettuce and cauliflower, should be included in the garden, for these leafy vegetables it is now found have a high content of those most precious "A" and "C" health-bringing vitamins.

HOME-MADE BEET SUGAR

In Great Britain, due to the scarcity of sugar, people are raising sugar beets from which to produce their home requirements. While the sugar scarcity in Canada is not so severe as in the old land, many inquiries have been received by the department of agriculture at Ottawa as to the proper method of making sugar from beets. As a result C. H. Robinson, Dominion Agricultural Chemist, has issued the following formula.

The beets are first well washed and the crowns cut off one half to one inch below the lowest leaf scar. The beets are then peeled and sliced longitudinally and put through the meat chopper or sliced very thinly and not put through the chopper. Two quarts of water are put into a pot and brought to boiling and to this water about five pounds of ground or sliced beet are added gradually, care being taken not to cool the water below 167 degrees F. It appears that pulp leached in water below this temperature gives up organic substances which impart a dark color and disagreeable taste to the syrup. After adding the five pounds of beet the whole is boiled for fifteen to twenty minutes, then strained into another pot and the pulp on the strainer is washed with a little boiling water. The thin sugar solution is next boiled slowly to half its volume and allowed to stand overnight when considerable solid matter will settle out. In the morning the clear liquid is poured off and is boiled slowly to the required density. It was found that by boiling down to a temperature of 223 degrees F. a syrup is obtained having the following analysis:

Sucrose	51.8
Invert sugar	6.6
Ash	3.3
Undetermined organic solids	2.3
Total solids	64.0

It takes about 18 pounds of beets to make one quart of syrup of the above density.

The culture of sugar beets is about the same as that required for garden beets, carrots, etc., except that the sugar beets are thinned from eight to twelve inches apart in the rows when the beets have from four to eight leaves. Beets require about the same length of time to mature as a wheat crop and will stand considerable frost in the fall.

LONGER RUNS FOR LOCOMOTIVES

Toronto, May 4— The longest single locomotive run in Eastern Canada, and one of the longest in the Dominion, was inaugurated by the Canadian National Railways recently, between Montreal and Halifax, a distance of 841 miles. The decision to operate single locomotives between Montreal and the Atlantic seaboard was made to release additional heavy motive power for Canada's war service.

The locomotives used on the through trains between Montreal and Halifax are of the Northern type, No. 6100 Class, which were built for either fast passenger or freight service. They have a tractive effort of 57,000 pounds and are counterbalanced for a speed of 86 miles per hour. In passenger service they will handle 20 coaches, and in freight service, over some portions of the road, they will handle more than 100 freight cars. They have been known to haul as high as 8,000 tons of freight, or a train approximately a mile in length.

By the change to single locomotive operation between Montreal and Halifax, seven of these locomotives will be released to handle essential war supplies and materials to the Atlantic seaboard.

EXTRA CARE PROVES PROFITABLE

That extra care and attention in the care and feeding of hogs pays, is demonstrated in a letter received from a farmer at Hobbema.

This farmer points out that in 1941 he lost 130 pigs, but at the present time he has 198 pigs born in February and March of this year. These pigs, he states, are the best he ever had and he attributes this to the fact that he insulated his hog house, put in a new ventilating system and adopted new feeding and management practices.

The farmer goes on to say that the feeding of more minerals has worked wonders. The young pigs were strong at birth and are making good headway. These young porkers are fed in creeps; they receive rolled oats, cod liver oil, reduced iron and mineral mixture.

This particular producer is confident that the adoption of better feeding and housing practices has reduced losses of young pigs and has resulted in stronger, healthier litters, which should market earlier and thereby increase the owner's income.

A TIME OF APPEAL—

IT WOULD SEEM that scarcely a week passes but that the press, radio and any other form of publicity available is not shouting to the general public to do this or that, give to some worthy cause, or save something or other. It is a time of appeal, appeals that can be answered and in many cases have already been answered. It is all a part of the war effort and a part of total war. It is the private citizen's backing up of the armed forces or the response of those who are well and well to do to those who are sick and perhaps destitute. Most citizens would not have it otherwise. Inasmuch as war is upon us with all its grief and care and inasmuch as doing, giving and saving are vitally necessary, the average citizen feels that to be a part of the modern crusade, he or she should give due heed to the appeals that are constantly being made.

On Monday, May 11th, there commences all across Canada an appeal for funds by the Red Cross Society. During the years that have passed since the Red Cross was first organized and since it became an international society at Geneva, when disaster strikes, people have turned naturally to the Red Cross for succor and help. We have just finished reading a manuscript written by Mr. H. W. Lovell on field ambulance work based on actual experience in the last war. Mr. Lovell, from personal experience pays tribute to the Red Cross for its unswerving devotion to duty in times of stress and speaks very highly of its work under actual active service conditions. In the present war the work of the Red Cross has been vastly increased as not only must help be given to the armed forces in time of distress but tens of thousands of private citizens who have been bombed out of their beds and homes can testify to the genuine, timely and practical help rendered them by this organization. Moreover the steady stream of food parcels for prisoners of war in Nazi held territory is in itself a vast, costly, yet withal merciful undertaking.

On Monday, May 11th, there will commence an All-Canada drive to raise nine million dollars for the Red Cross Society. This is quite a large amount, almost one dollar per head from the entire population. It is more than a dollar per head from the working population. In considering the drive or discussing it, it should be remembered that unlike some of the other organizations the Red Cross Society is unable to accept money from the government from a special fund created to assist worthy war societies. The Red Cross being an international organization and governed by international laws, by which friend and foe are treated alike, must raise its money by voluntary subscription. One of the best methods for the average citizen to do his or her bit toward the alleviation of suffering caused by the war is to make regular monthly contributions to the Red Cross. For those in moderate circumstances 50c a month could surely be spared, for those more fortunate financially, $1.00 a month would do, for those with a really good income, anything up to $5.00 a month. The amount is purely a matter of choice, but the decision to contribute regularly is hereby urged.

Throughout the region in which this paper circulates there are several local organizations. Give to the secretary of the one nearest to you. At Tofield, Mr. Allan at the Bank of Montreal will be pleased to receive your Red Cross contribution.

WAR FINANCE—

SINCE THE BEGINNING of the war there has been evolved a system of war finance that takes in the resources of all classes of people. This system includes war savings stamps, war savings certificates and victory bonds. Originally, as outlined by the war finance committee at Ottawa, the stamps were chiefly for children and those in the very small income class, the certificates were for the wage earners and those with a moderate income, and the victory bonds were for those with good incomes or resources. In theory at least, the above appeared to be a perfect set up but in actual practice it did not produce the volume of war finance desired. Those who bought a few stamps rightfully felt that they were doing something for the benefit of their country, but they failed to realize that they were not doing enough. Those who bought savings certificates were doing better but still not good enough. Those who bought Victory bonds were among the financial elite. Since the war commenced, roughly well over one thousand million dollars have been raised by the sale of victory bonds and one hundred million dollars by the sale of war savings certificates.

Now, we understand, for the immediate present, the emphasis of war finance is to be shifted back to war savings stamps with periodical victory loan drives. The war savings certificate while still being sold, will not be "played up" as much as war savings stamps and victory bonds. We regret this. Not that it makes a particle of difference how the government gets the money as long as they get it, but to us the war savings certificate was an ideal medium of savings for many thousands of people. The amount of four dollars, which could be increased as many times as the purchaser desired, was ideal. It is a straight transaction between the individual and the government, the certificates are non-negotiable, there are no coupons to bother with, a citizen simply pays over four dollars and in due time it becomes five. We feel that a steady persistent educational advertising campaign, even if not a spectacular one, would in time have made the people war savings certificate conscious, particularly young people. Perhaps as a war measure this is not fast enough, speed in finance as well as in everything else is important.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, May 4—Designed to relieve the present and potential teacher shortage in Alberta and keep all school classrooms open, a war emergency teacher-training programme has been organized by the Department of Education. Details of the new program are incorporated in a booklet which is being sent out to all principals, trustees, superintendents, inspectors. It may be obtained free by any interested person by applying to the Department of Education, Edmonton.

V V V

A summary of the war emergency teacher training programme shows that normal schools will open earlier, lapsed certificates may be re-instated by the owner's attendance at summer school University graduates may be certificated as high school teachers and that four groups of normal students will be sent out to rural schools from the opening day forward.

V V V

High School students who plan to enter Normal are urged to apply immediately for admission, and to write the General, English Language, Mathematics and Science Survey Tests at any examination centre on June 1. From the successful candidates 125 will be selected for immediate training at a special summer session at Garneau school, Edmonton. On August 31 this special group will go out to rural schools to teaching duties. Regular Normal sessions will commence August 19th instead of September. From students attending the regular sessions a second group will go to rural schools in October. This and the first group will return to Normal in January. At that time a third group will go out, and a fourth will leave Normal in March for teaching duties.

V V V

It is stressed that no needy student having the proper qualifications should put off applying for normal training. The Department is seeking to obtain certain assistance for such students under the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training plan. Former teachers who may wish to take up teaching as a war emergency job may have their certificates renewed after attendance at summer school and the attainment of necessary credits.

V V V

A special plea is made to women who hold University degrees in Arts, Household Economics and Commerce to take up teaching work in High Schools. A special short course is being organized at the College of Education, from which they may emerge with High School teaching certificates. Undergraduates having two complete university years, and certain others with one year, may also attend this course and obtain a Junior High School certificate.

V V V

The Alberta Highway Board has banned the issue of licenses for trucks operating for hire, and none will be issued except in exceptional circumstances. The order does not affect those who already are in the trucking business. They may still apply for renewal of licenses. But it prevents newcomers from entering the trucking business. Some time ago the Alberta Motor Transport Association asked for such a ruling, arguing that those now in business were not operating at capacity. A total of 21,000 truck licenses have been sold to date.

V V V

Speed limit of 40 miles per hour became operative on Alberta highways May 1st, in consequence of dominion and provincial orders issued in the interests of tire, gasoline and automobile conservation.

SPECIAL FARES FOR VICTORIA DAY WEEK-END

Winnipeg, Man., May 4—Special holiday fares for the Victoria Day week-end will be in effect between all stations in Canada, on the Canadian National Railways, according to Osborne Scott, passenger traffic manager. With May 24th falling on Sunday, the holiday will be observed on Monday and will not only be the first long week-end of the summer season, but will provide an opportunity for a visit home or to see that husband, son or brother, who may be with the armed forces.

The special fares will be available from Friday, May 22nd until Monday, May 25th, and will be good to return leaving destination until midnight of Tuesday, May 26th.

FLAX-SEED BEING INCREASED

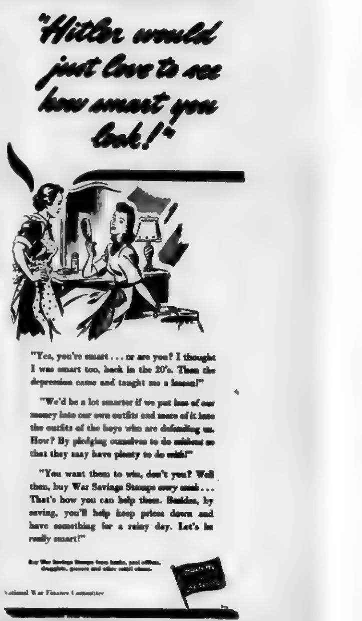
Canadian farmers are not the only group who are being asked to grow more flax-seed.

Farmers in fourteen States in the United States have been requested to increase the flax acreage. The largest increase is being sought in North Dakota, Minnesota, South Dakota and Montana. In 1941 these States planted 2,000,000 acres of flax and this year are being asked to put in 2,700,000 acres.

Difficulty is being experienced in obtaining seed of which an extra 750,000 bushels is needed.

Increased production of flax-seed in the United States is, of course, for the same purpose as it is being requested in Canada—oil.

Flax-seed must be produced on this continent to replace the vegetable oils formerly imported from the East Indies. As large an increase as possible in the flax-seed acreage in Alberta is desirable.



"Hitler would just love to see how smart you look!"

"Yes, you're smart . . . or are you? I thought I was smart too, back in the 20's. Then the depression came and taught me a lesson!"

"We'd be a lot smarter if we put less of our money into our own outfits and more of it into the outfits of the boys who are defending us. How? By pledging ourselves to do without so that they may have plenty to do with!"

"You want them to win, don't you? Well then, buy War Savings Stamps every week . . . That's how you can help them. Besides, by saving, you'll help keep prices down and have something for a rainy day. Let's be really smart!"

Buy War Savings Stamps from banks, post offices, druggists, grocers and other retail stores.

The Voice Of Great Britain

(By DOROTHY DAVIS KYNNERSLEY, Courtenay, B.C., in The Courtenay Free Press)

Britain has spoken. Through a thousand years
Her clear, quiet voice has ranged a stormy world
Upholding justice, or has her show fears,
Sheltering the waif beneath her Flag unfurled
Now! Let them wreck her fanes, ruin her altars;
Her prayer and praise, in flight beyond far skies,
Have reached her GOD as faith that never falters,
While on His answering Presence she relies.
Rich incense rise the scents of her burning palaces . . .
Most precious wine, her children's blood outpoured
Turns flaming cities into holy chalices
Lifting to Heaven the warranty of her word . .
Britain has spoken . . . She is speaking still
In laughing courage and disdainful tears,
In dauntless patience and unshaken will,
And she shall speak another thousand years!

Britain has spoken . . . Noble is her voice,—
Noble, despite mistakes, her steadfast creed,
Her sworn allegiance to the loftier choice
Whereby she owes her are in word and deed
She stands for Freedom, Honour, Peace, and Duty,—
"Word of an Englishman," her spent claim,—
Her people's welfare, brotherhood, and beauty,
The only wreath she asks to crown her name
She has given her pledge of a new world for tomorrow,
And up all ages will its message ring.
Nor can disaster, death or desperate sorrow
Its echo mute, maim its victorious wing . . .
All nations know her voice . . . Britain has spoken!
And though her statesmen often may have erred,
Her standard flies unfurled . . . And unbroken
Shall stand, as [illegible] her given word

She has not fa[illegible] never fail
That little f[illegible] its ramparts strong
In the mighty love and purpose welding all
With Right [illegible] storming wrong
From shipping yard and [illegible] in the rugged Highlands,
Lonely Welsh farm, green Ulster's loyal co[illegible],
Death-shadowed English factories,—those islands
Speak with one voice which war can silence not!
Let immemorial [illegible] be stripped for sacrifice!
Let stately halls, where once our forbears trod,
Litter their velvet lawns! Let utter wreck be price
She pays for honour and covenant with GOD!
Though spires crash ringing in her streets and lanes . . .
All homes be shattered . . Thames aflood with tears .
Her changeless soul eternally remains
And still shall speak for many a thousand years!

Sport Fishing from Coast to Coast

A TOPSY-TURVY world seems right side up again when viewed by an angler from the bank of a fast-flowing Canadian stream or from the prow of a canoe on a tranquil Canadian lake. Nor does any form of recreation pay richer dividends in health at a time when physical fitness plays so vital a role in war work.

Canadians are particularly fortunate in the variety of fishing waters at their disposal and wide choice of species they contain. These range from giant Atlantic tuna and the west coast's fighting Tyee salmon to the scrappy muscalunge, pickerel, pike, bass, salmon, trout and other fresh water favorites inhabiting Canada's many inland lakes and streams.

The Canadian fishing picture is further enhanced by ideal rail and hotel services of the Canadian Pacific Railway, whose lines take the angler direct to such renowned fishing centres as French River, Lake of the Woods, and Western Ontario's rugged Lake Superior country, where muskies top the 60-pound mark. Guides, bait, and tackle are available at larger resorts.

Other favored fishing zones include Quebec's Laurentians, Gatineau district, Eastern Townships, Lake Temiskaming and Muskoka Lakes, while splendid salmon and trout catches are chalked up annually in the rivers and lakes of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. West of the prairie provinces, whose northern areas pay rich dividends to the angler, the fishing picture acquires fresh glamor, particularly around Banff and Lake Louise, Alta., where the scrappiest species of Rocky Mountain trout are found.

WAR IN ORIENT INCREASES VALUE OF PAINT BRUSHES

Paint brushes that have accumulated over the years in many households may be more valuable now than when they were first bought. The sources of supply of the finest bristles—China, Japan and Siberia—are no longer open, while the need for these brushes is stepped up in industries supplying the needs of the Navy, Army and Air Force.

Conserve new brushes by eliminating the possibility of their becoming hardened and caked with paint.

Immediately after completing the paint job remove as much paint as possible by brushing out on an absorbent surface. Rinse the brush in paint thinner, wipe dry, and scrub thoroughly with warm water and soap. Rinse thoroughly until all traces of soap are removed. Straighten out the bristles by combing with an ordinary comb. Finally wrap the bristles in paper and fasten with a cord tied around the ferrule. The brush will then be in good condition when it is required for the next job.

If the brush is to be used on two or three successive days, it may be kept overnight with the bristles immersed in paint thinner, preferably [illegible].

Old brushes which have become hardened may be reclaimed by soaking the brush in a paint brush cleaner according to directions on the packet. Soaking for 24 hours in a lacquer thinner is excellent but this substance is no longer available for civilian use.

After using the paint brush cleaner, gently remove paint still adhering to the brush with a dull knife or comb. Finally the brush should be scrubbed with soap and water and rinsed thoroughly.

PEANUTS AMONG VALUABLE FOODS

Look to peanuts when you're shopping for an inexpensive source of several important food values.

According to nutrition experts they contain about 28 per cent of good quality protein; their fat content averages 40 to 50 per cent which means high energy value and good staying power. They also furnish valuable amounts of the B vitamins and minerals.

Peanut butter is tops as a sandwich filler for snacks and school lunches. For added flavor combine with any one of the following: honey, pickle, relish or finely chopped celery, using whole wheat or Vitamin B white bread Canada Approved.

For extra vitamins with peanut butter sandwiches serve raw carrot or turnip sticks; celery in season, or cole slaw with mayonnaise or salad dressing, easily put up in a container for the lunch box.

Emergency Change in Price Rates of Hog Grades

Like Easter bonnets, fashions in hogs change too. A little more weight and finish on the market hog is the order of the day. The recent announcement that the [illegible] will be paid for B-3 hogs as lighter weights in the same grade category does not represent [illegible] in the minds of [illegible] Board officials. They have been urging heavier weights in order to make more certain that the 600,000,000 lb. British bacon contract will be fulfilled or exceeded. The change should be regarded as a temporary expedient rather than a permanent measure. The object is to get more pounds of bacon from the hogs marketed. Farmers are asked not to market a hog until it has reached at least 200 lbs. live weight. This should be good news for farmers. A little more finish can be put on their hogs with that extra barley they are planning to grow this year, without fear of a price discount on B-3 hogs weighing around 230 lbs. The change in price regulations does not apply to C-3 or D-3 grades.

There are six official carcass grades. These are "A," "B," "C," "D," "E" and Sows. "A's" are carcasses from top quality bacon hogs. The remaining grades [illegible] progressively in [illegible].

Grade	Carcass Weight Range Class 1	Class 2	Class 3
	lbs.	lbs.	lbs.
"A"	140-170	—	—
"B"	130-175	125-134	176-185
"C"	130-175	120-134	176-185
"D"	130-175	120-134	176-185
"E"	Includes — unfinished, oily, rejected, condemned, physically injured, stags or ridglings.
Sows	Includes all females that have raised one or more litters.

Page 10 of the Producers Grading Guide, published by The North-West Line Elevators Association, describes and indicates the weight ranges for the hog grades. If you should not have a copy of this booklet which, incidentally outlines the official grade descriptions for all prairie farm products, your local line elevator grain buyer will gladly secure one for you. — Contributed by T. COMMUNICATION

[To The Editor]

A few days ago I received the usual bundle of past issues of the Tofield Mercury and as I read through them I feel that I am back again in the good old town.

It is with the realization of the passing of time that I read of the old friends leaving us. But glad that I have known them in days gone by. When I read of some of the boys taking part in this or that activity, it is hard to realize that those with whom I worked and played in the Tuxis groups have grown and are growing into manhood; but good to hear that they are developing the sturdy characteristics of real Canadians.

I read with avidity "Behind the Flag" and wish to thank A.B.C. for the column, it adds spice to life. In a February issue he asks how many miles the curlers would travel if they followed each rock down the ice. And I beg to reply as far as the average sized Active Service [illegible] would, in one day's march and work.

With mental reservations but with profit and pleasure I read the editorials. Even read the Municipal notes.

With interest I read the news from Lakeshore, McKenzie, Bardo, Ketchamoot, Ingram, Lindbrook and others. I see the names of friends joining the services, both men and women, and wonder how many of them I will meet afield. By mere chance, in a little news stand, I met a man who was an R.C.M.P. stationed at St. Paul at the beginning of the last war who knew my sister's husband. I am glad with those whose destinies have been joined by the darts of Cupid and happy with those homes which have been brightened by the visit of a [illegible] legendary bird. Thus, the press makes the world smaller and friendlier. Yes, it seems to bring the community close to those who are away, and to help them feel that they are at home. Also to hope and believe that it will not be many months until all are back again ready and willing to do their part in building a new order that we feel sure will follow the war. Yes, even at [illegible]. Cheerio,

L.A.C. Abernethy, Geo. G.

M.D. Cornhill Arrange Govt. Grant, Road Work

Conferring with Mr. D. W. Ritchie, government engineer, Cornhill Council on Friday at their regular meeting decided on the amount and location of road work to be done under a grant from the Provincial government. The grant will be $1500.00 to which the council adds another $1500.00. The roads to be constructed under this plan are described further on in the report of the meeting.

There were present at the meeting, Reeve Walker; Councillors Anderson, Blake, Breen, Coombes and Swabey.

Minutes together with a list of accounts passed for payment at the last meeting were read and on motion by Councillor Coombes adopted.

The monthly financial statement for April was studied.

Communication from Prairie Farm Assistance Act and Crop Reduction Plan authorities. They desired the secretary to do the same work as last year and requested a resolution from the council authorising the secretary to act.

Moved by Reeve Walker that secretary be authorized to co-operate with Federal Dept. of Agriculture regarding Crop Reduction Plan and Prairie Farm Assistance Act.

Letter from Prairie Farm Assistance Branch regarding yield in township 49-19-W4M saying sections 3 to 10—15 to 18—tp. 49, rw. 19, are in [illegible] category 8 to 12 bus. This means that farmers in this area will receive some payment due to drought.

Letter from Dept. of Agriculture re flax. Farmers in general were urged to grow more flax wherever suitable as it was a commodity much needed to aid the war effort.

Letter from Dept. Munitions and Supply, re preference rating on repairs.

Letter from Dept. of Public Works regarding two bridges in poor condition. The M.D.'s letter had been handed to the government engineer and would be included in his report.

Letter from the Fuel Controller stating that councillors were in proper category regarding gasoline supply.

Third readings to bylaws covering the following land transactions were given. These sales are now subject to the approval of the Minister and when approved will go into effect forthwith. N.W. 4-51-21 to Alex Boss for $350.00; N.W. 6-51-20 to J. Simpson for $300.00; S.W. 10-51-20 to Benjamin Tiedeman for [illegible].00; N.E. 34-49-20 to Mrs. Tillie Winder for $300.00.

Reeve Walker and Councillor Anderson who were delegates to a meeting called by M.D. of Strathcona regarding the enlarged municipal units gave a brief report of the meeting. There were M.D. representatives present from Clover Bar, Blackmud, Sturgeon, Liberty, Unity, Strathcona and Cornhill. There were also present R. E. Ansley, M.L.A. for Leduc and F. M. Baker, M.L.A. for Clover Bar. J. B. Ritchie was appointed chairman of the meeting. The meeting consisted of a searching discussion of the topic and included addresses by both M.L.A.'s. It was definitely stated that the government intended to go ahead with the plan but it was not known how soon further enlarged districts would be organized. Much criticism was expressed that the government should go ahead with this plan without submitting it to a vote. It was brought out that if the idea was to help the poorer M.D.'s then the responsibility for such help rested with the province, not a neighboring M.D. This was on the principle that the M.D. was responsible for a needy ratepayer not the ratepayer's immediate neighbor. In his address Mr. Baker said he was of the opinion that Clover Bar, Strathcona and part

L. E. Schmeltzer Meets Sudden Death

The sudden death of Lawrence Edward Schmeltzer occurred on the Foreman farm, where he worked, on the morning of Thursday, May 7th. The exact cause of death still has to be ascertained. The body was discovered in the field about half a mile from the house quite early. He had gone to bed as usual the evening before, but when called in the morning his bed was found to be empty.

Constable James and Dr. Caldwell were called. There were slight marks on the head which could have come from a kick from a horse, though externally they did not appear serious enough to cause death.

The body was taken to Edmonton where a post-mortem was performed.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Schmeltzer of Goodridge, Alberta, also five brothers and five sisters. Funeral services were held at Goodridge Roman Catholic church, Rev. Father M. L. Schmeltzer officiating.

Rev. Father Schmeltzer is the parish priest at Tofield and the sympathy of the community goes out to him and the family in their sad bereavement.

It seems that is just can't happen here. By this we don't mean the ravages of war, but refer to the stuff that is known as rain. It has certainly looked like it here on several occasions for the last week, but the winds blew it away. Still we live in hopes.

Work is in full swing on the land now and some long hours and hard work is being done, owing of course to the shortage of help. In fact a nice "cushy" job in the army would look pretty soft as compared to this battle of the home front.

The Richardson farm here was augmented in one day by the addition of a calf, a bunch of chickens and a hatch of goslings, and a grove of spruce trees that grew overnight. If it keeps that up it may be a show place yet.

Mr. Bob Scott, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Scott returned to duty at Calgary. Bob, who is in the R.C.A.O. Corp has been on sick leave. Whilst here he gave the new V.V.R. unit the details of the new drills and drilled with them.

We hear that Mr. Clifford Appleby, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Appleby of Lindbrook, had a narrow squeak the other day when a tractor that he was driving, backed down the creek bank. The plough attached to it stopped its total descent, enabling Clifford to jump clear. Congratulations on a lucky escape!

THE GREEN LIGHT FOR AGRICULTURE

With the exception of a few products, the most important of which is wheat, farmers of Canada have been given the "go" signal for production in 1942. The agricultural economy of this continent was based on unlimited markets for almost everything that could be produced and serious results occurred in the last decade when certain restrictions were imposed. Unfortunately a world war has been the direct cause for the return of growing markets for agricultural commodities.

Alberta's share in the production of agricultural produce is important. While her acreage in wheat may be reduced, she is being asked to grow up to one and a half million more acres of barley, double the acreage of 1941. Alberta farmers are requested to sow more oats and a 300 per cent increase in flaxseed acreage has been suggested.

Besides these crops there has been an increase authorized in sugar beet production from about 24,000 acres in 1941 to an estimated 28,000 to 30,000 acres this year and upwards of 500 acres of soybeans will be seeded. Feed crops of all kinds, notably legumes, are being increased to take care of the expanding live stock industry. Such crops as corn, peas and garden vegetables are taking a more important place as well.

The live stock industry has a huge order to fill. Alberta has set a tentative goal of 2,750,000 hogs for 1942 and recently an increase of 200,000 sheep for this province was recommended. Domestic consumption and export markets have created growing demands for beef cattle and the dairy industry is being called upon to produce more dairy products.

Poultry products are on the list of essential commodities and huge supplies are needed. A substantial increase in poultry numbers is justified and is taking place.

Beekeeping has forged ahead as a result of the sugar rationing program. A large increase in honey production is anticipated.

On the home front "self sufficiency" is the goal. Gardens are being increased and plans are being made to can home products.

HEAVIER DEMANDS ON MOTOR TOUR CAMPS

With plans for the holiday season under way, there is need to make improvements to auto camps at points where such work has been delayed.

Motor tourist travel in this province may be heavy this year, and demands on auto camp may show a substantial increase.

Last year the demands on these camps in various parts of the province proved to be heavy and at some points plans were made for an expansion program this year.

At Edmonton, where a program of heavy expenditures on new camp dwellings was carried out, the number of visitors last season showed a big increase.

Towns and municipal districts that have auto camps have been urged to take steps to effect improvements to the approaches and facilities where such can be carried out this season.

During this season thousands of visitors probably will take in Alberta's auto camps and the better these are, the more favorable the reaction will be on Alberta's tourist industry.

Maybe you think your small change cannot help... that "total war" means "somebody else."

Maybe you're one of the thousands of housewives who haven't yet started to put even 50¢ a week into War Savings Stamps—just a neutral...

There aren't any neutrals in this war! You're a help or a hindrance to victory. You can't get out of it. If you spend thoughtlessly you'll deny our fighting forces the arms they need and imperil your own future. If you—and 2,000,000 other housewives in Canada—put only 50¢ a week into War Savings Stamps, it means $1,000,000 a week to help win the war. Which side are you on?

BURMA AND INDIA

Burma has almost completely fallen to the Japanese, and India is being threatened. These two countries, long noted for their extremely fertile soils, are of particular interest to Western Canada because the foodstuffs which they produce, import and export in ordinary times have an effect upon the wheat industry of our prairies.

BURMA has a population of some 15 million people, and is one of the largest rice exporting countries in the world. Rice production averages yearly 363 million bushels of which Burma exports 134 million bushels to Japan, China, India and other countries. An abundant rice crop in Burma has the effect of curtailing somewhat the need of certain countries for Canadian wheat and flour. Burma has always been regarded as a part of India, but for over 80 years it has been administered by Britain as a separate part of the British Empire.

INDIA has about 390 million people and in normal times produces yearly around 900 million bushels of rice and 363 million bushels of wheat, and in years of good yields exports some rice and wheat.

The civilization of part of India, as revealed by archaeological excavations, dates back probably to 6,000 years and the legendary history recorded in sacred writings and hymns extends back for almost 4,000 years, but the written history, which can definitely be relied upon, goes back some 2,300 years, dating from the invasion of India by the Greek Conqueror, Alexander the Great.

INDIA NEVER HAS BEEN ONE NATION

It is quite wrong to think of India as one large nation. It is not now and never has been one nation. A more accurate view is to regard India as a whole continent made up of many nations, containing peoples of different religions, different colours of skin, and of different races. One proof that this is so is that there never has been, and is not today, one single word in any of the native languages that describes the vast area which we now call India.

The name India has only been familiar since the British occupation of the country, something less than 200 years ago. The name Hindustan that many use instead of India refers only to the northern portion of the great peninsular continent. We are told that the 390 million people of India speak at least 222 different languages, and that the people are followers of at least five main, distinct and separate religions.

This great peninsular has ever been noted in fable, legend, song and story as being immensely rich in fertile soil, in minerals and precious stones, and our knowledge of India as revealed by archaeological legendary and written records, makes it clear that parts of this great country have ever attracted aggressive invaders. Long before Alexander the Great invaded the country in 326 B.C. Aryan or white invaders came from the West and North, then came successively the Greeks, the Huns, the Mongols, the Turks, the Arabs, the Afghans, the Persians, the Portuguese, the Dutch, the French and the British, to say nothing of numberless invasions of each other's territory by the various nations comprising India. Never in their long history have the various nations and peoples of different religions and races of the great peninsula of India, been ruled by one central Government until the British took the responsibility of governing the country, and only since then has there been internal peace, freedom from invasion and aggression, safety of life and property and justice for all; and certainly the British rule has brought a higher standard of living for the mass of the people than they had enjoyed for thousands of years.

INDIA MAY NEVER HAVE COMPLETE INDEPENDENCE

We hear much today of a demand that Britain should grant complete independence and freedom to India, but the first question to be asked is "Complete freedom and independence from whom?" for the 75 million Moslems, or for the Sikhs, or for the Buddhists, or for the Brahmins, or for the lower caste Hindus, or for the people of the Principalities (which are separate States within the Continent) or for the 50 million so called Untouchables? Each of these large groups separately would like complete freedom and independence always supposing that each could be dominant and rule over the others, illustrating the truth of the old adage that "Where all demand complete freedom, none has any."

The truth is, that to have independence and freedom for that whole continent of what is called India today, would be much more difficult than to achieve independence and freedom under one government for all the nations of Europe, and even though it could be set up in India, it would have as much chance of being successful as would independence and freedom for say the Philippines or Hawaii if they were to be granted by the United States.

WHY SOME COUNTRIES WILL EVER BE GOVERNED BY OTHERS

But there is something which explains India's long record of invasions and similar long record of invasions of countries like Java, Sumatra, Borneo, the Philippines, Burma and other countries. It is simply that there are certain areas in the world which are exceedingly rich in fertile land and natural resources, hence which are densely populated, but where the overpowering effect of the tropical climate is such that the people never have produced, and do not today produce, fighting men. This area extends about 25 degrees north and 25 degrees south of the equator—a belt almost 3,000 miles in width and which runs all around the globe. From the dawn of history the people living in this tropical belt have ever been ruled by a succession of invaders who came down from the northern countries where live the more aggressive and virile peoples. It almost seems as though this is a fundamental principle of human drift and migration. If this principle is true, then those who live in this 3,000 mile wide equatorial belt running around the world, can only have complete freedom and independence for themselves when human nature changes to the extent that the weak and indolent who occupy rich lands will be left in undisturbed possession by the strong and virile who are hungry for foodstuffs and who lack raw materials. In short, when the lamb can lie down safely with the lion, then apparently will complete independence be possible for the peoples of the equatorial belt.

A BETTER STANDARD OF LIVING THE CHIEF NEED

There is something, however, which is of far more importance than political independence to the teeming population of Burma and India and of such other countries. It is that the British, the Americans, the Dutch and the French and others who have the responsibility of governing these countries shall do their very best to improve the standard of living of the inhabitants by making production more efficient and by arranging that the things the people of these countries produce shall exchange for a proper quantity of the goods and commodities which the people of other nations have to offer in exchange. This all can be brought about by eliminating the evil economic diseases of "Nationalism" and "Self-Sufficiency", and by tearing down the barriers which in recent years have obstructed the exchange of products, goods and commodities between the nations of the world. The inhabitants of these equatorial countries are much less concerned, in the main, about who governs them than they are concerned about whether individually they enjoy justice, liberty and freedom, and a reasonable standard of living.

The press tells us that the Congress Party—which only represents a small part of India's population—has now adopted Mr. Ghandi's leadership and his principle of non-violence and non-cooperation. For many years the British have regarded non-violence and non-cooperation by millions of Indians with tolerance and sympathy. Should the Japanese, however, get a foothold in India they would regard the non-violence with amused contempt, and would swiftly and ruthlessly deal with non-cooperation.

RED CROSS SPECIAL

London, May— Blue-coated firemen have been pouring water on blazing buildings blitzed during the past few days in west country towns. Many of these civilian defence heroes have been gravely injured or killed.

I met one of them—Edward Morgan—he left hospital where he had been receiving treatment for injuries received fighting Nazi-lighted fires. A Canadian Red Cross ambulance took Morgan to the hospital with two other fire victims, a woman with a black and blistered body and a little boy with nothing worse than smoke smarting eyes, not knowing that his unconscious mother would spend the next month in pain that he could be spared completely.

Early that morning Mrs. Winnifred Upton had been awakened by the smell of burning. Rushing to the door of the bedroom on the top floor of the apartment building where she lived with Patrick, her two-year-old son, she found the place full of flame-streaked smoke. Terrified she dashed to the head of the staircase only to discover that sole line of retreat in flames. She rushed to the bedroom closing the door on the flames, opened the window and looked down on the street many feet below. She could see no hope of escape that way. The door crashed in. Flames began licking at the bedclothing. The linoleum was set a-fire. Winnifred Upton was trapped in a roomful of advancing flames with little Patrick.

She could hear the shouting in the street and the noise of the firemen hacking their way up the stairs. The flames were hot at her feet. Could she hold out until the firemen reached her. Even if she could possibly hold out until the firemen reached her she realized that her little son would be agonizingly burned and disfigured for life. Then she made a great decision. Rapidly gathering up little Patrick from his crib she ran with him to the open window and leaned out as far as she could, holding the little body away from the flames into the cool night air. As she stood there, her senses swimming, her heart cold with fear and her dry lips moaning a prayer for strength, she heard the firemen below.

"Help—help up here," she tried to shout but it was only a whisper far back in her dry throat.

Flames had reached to where she stood. Looking down she saw that they were licking her boots. With torturing slowness the fire began to burn through her stockings—through the clothes on her body—till she was standing waist high in flames with little Patrick in her aching arms stretched far out into the cool night.

That's how Ed. Morgan found her when he had battled up the blazing stairway. All he could see was a mass of smoke and flame and the upper part of a woman's body leaning out of the window as if petrified. Then she saw him. "Thank God," he heard. "Take little Pat," and to his amazement she passed a little naked boy through the window. He took Patrick from her. Then she collapsed in the flames.

Dipping into the blaze he lifted the woman to his shoulder, with little Patrick in his arms. In a few minutes a helmetted comrade appeared at the window. Ed. descended with the little boy trying to rub the smoke out of his eyes. Below a waiting Red Cross ambulance rushed the trio to the hospital that Ed. came out of today.

Mrs. Upton is still there, lying enveloped to the waist in oiled skin. These envelopes can be pumped full of oxygen to feed the new skin and they are one of the most priceless gifts of the Canadian Red Cross to bomb victims. This morning she sat up in bed and Patrick toddled down the ward and was lifted up and put in his mother's outstretched arms.

$9,000,000 NEEDED NOW!

Every dollar you give to the Red Cross is multiplied by three!

EVERY RED CROSS DOLLAR does the work of three dollars. The Red Cross buys materials at bottom prices. Then, millions of Red Cross workers, knitting, sewing, toiling, without pay, finishing these goods and transporting them free, multiply the original dollar-value threefold.

It is well that this is so, for food, clothing, shelter and hospitalization cost millions.

Every week, 40,000 parcels go overseas now, from the Canadian Red Cross, to prisoners of war. This must be more than doubled to meet the actual need. The need is continuous; the income must be continuous.

The Red Cross is on duty 24 hours every day. Never was a dollar worth more in the hands of the Red Cross than now. Do your part to keep this Army of Mercy on the march. Open your heart and your purse strings—GIVE generously.

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

It was Mark Twain who once remarked that everyone complains about the weather, but no person ever does anything about it. If he could listen to all the open discussions in the resumed session of Parliament and whispered conversations going the rounds now among well-informed persons Mark Twain would make the same remark to-day about the political repercussions of the plebiscite whereby the man-in-the-street informed the Government to go ahead with unlimited plans for total war. In fact, this veteran and impartial observer can detect now backstage along Parliament Hill an extremely tense feeling and an unusually explosive atmosphere in political circles as the representatives of the people are confronted with the task of making the most solemn decision in the history of this country.

Although it is conceded in responsible quarters in the capital that the war is getting graver and that in the coming weeks as events move in a quickened pace that a number of vital problems must be solved in equitable manner, yet the political repercussions resulting from the plebiscite will cause the parliamentary session which lies ahead not only to be long and lively but to be productive of most interesting and most important news which will affect every man, woman and child in this nation.

There are several serious and highly controversial problems facing the legislators and each one may cause a rustle in the political hedge. There is the problem of a record $3,500,000,000 Budget for this year of such magnitude and such complicated form that its presentation has been delayed. There is the problem of enquiries, including the Wheat Board, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, War Expenditures, Canteen Funds, Vocational Training, Reconstruction, etc. There is the problem of 15 vacancies in the Senate and its lack of work, though this is due to the fact that all legislation directly or indirectly involving expenditures must originate in the House of Commons and all war legislation so far has involved the spending of public money. Moreover, in the past both political parties have accumulated a large number of Senate vacancies, filling them all suddenly by one move usually on the eve of a general election. Indeed, when Meighen became Premier in 1920, there were only 4 vacancies in the Senate, and before he ceased to be Premier in December 1921, he named 15 Senators in this short time. Likewise when R. B. Bennett was Premier, he appointed 17 Senators just before the 1935 election.

But these problems are likely to cause only a rustle in the political hedge in comparison with the real political fireworks that may be brought on at any time now in this session by spontaneous cogitation amongst the people's representatives for all-out compulsory overseas service in accordance with the results of the plebiscite.

Amongst the Liberals, the head of the party, Premier King, has taken the same attitude as did Sir Wilfred Laurier in 1917 when he proposed an amendment to the Military Service Act whereby provision was made for a referendum, inferring that, whatever the result, the minority must submit to the will of the majority. He has emphasized in terms of unusual gravity the necessity of a "supreme effort" to meet the present menace and his Government has been given now by the people a fresh and undoubted mandate to do so. Ever since he became the party's leader in 1919, he has been Prime Minister for almost eighteen years and the Liberals have won many general elections including 1921, 1925, 1935, and 1940, with the present Parliament having no less than 184 Liberals, 40 Conservatives, and 29 members of other parties. Moreover, Premier King commands a healthy respect from his own Liberal followers. Indeed, when he walks through the lobby, many members lounging around make a definite effort to greet him and to shake his hand not merely as leader of their party but as if he was a distinguished visitor. Under these conditions, there is no doubt about the political reaction of the Liberal party and the allegiance of its followers to the opinion of their leader who in the past has entertained certain fixed political ideas, particularly disliking National Government in wartime.

The Conservative leader, Hon. R. B. Hanson, has declared again and again in favour of all-out conscription in the broadest sense. He is now 63 years of age, in indifferent health, and not too anxious to act as leader, but he has been gaining prestige continually as a very able leader, though there seems to be a lack of unanimity in the rank and file of the party in support of any leader. In fact it is stated in well-informed quarters that the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen also did not seek the leadership, being almost drafted by strong influences for the job from his lasting security as leader in the Senate, with Meighen being really selected as leader on November 8, 1941, not by unanimous choice but by a large majority of the committee of 52 which was appointed by the Conservative Conference of about 150 representatives, Members, Senators and others. Now those who supported a regular convention, which was especially true of the Western delegates, believe that it was an error not to follow their advice since it was necessary not only to choose a proper leader but also to decide lasting and proper policies on war matters, though the idea of a National Government in wartime is favoured steadily by all leading members of this party.

Although the C.C.F. party, which demands conscription of wealth as well as manpower, might find it difficult to resist in joining a non-partisan government, National Government, yet for the past 20 years its attitude seems to favour a marriage of the Liberals and Conservatives in Ottawa. It is recalled that the Progressive Party was created in the last war as a third party movement and in the first post-war Parliament, there were 66 Progressives who in 5 years gained more power than responsibilities and who got lower freight rates and tariffs as a "new deal" for the betterment of the farmer. A union of Liberals and Conservatives at any time in this war might cause history to repeat itself in favour of the C.C.F. party, though not simply as an agricultural movement as in 1921 by the Progressive Party but for labor in general.

The Social Credit party wants an all-out war policy, but it looks upon a new monetary policy as essential to it.

While there is a sort of tacit understanding that politics ought to be "out" for the duration of this war, yet it is apparent now backstage on Parliament Hill that the results of the plebiscite may revive some of the old political passions and bitterness may revive, though there are indications now that, if circumstances warrant, compulsory service for overseas as well as home defence might not only be imperative but inevitable, with many well-informed observers in the nation's capital believing that the development of the Government's war policy in future may steadily move in that direction in accordance with the circumstances.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, May 11— Death of Mr. D. M. Duggan, noted citizen and member of the Legislature, brought expressions of condolence from persons in all walks of public life. Thirty years resident in Edmonton, three times mayor of the city and sixteen years in the Legislature rounded out the life of popular "Dave" Duggan. He was known as the most polished parliamentarian in the House, and his contributions to debates were always of consequence. "Regardless of political differences, he was an amiable personality who never carried his opinions to the point that destroyed personal friendships," said Premier Aberhart. "His long experience in the Legislative Assembly was turned to good account in his advice to younger members and he never was found willing to take advantage of those less experienced in procedure."

In a call to agrarians for unity with all producers and other citizens for a program of agricultural reconstruction, Premier Aberhart this week enunciated a five-point program for consideration and submission to Parliament, the sovereign authority. The program follows: (1) The 1926 price level to be taken as the basis for guaranteed prices for all farm products; existing prices, based on point of delivery, to bear the same ratio to existing prices as the general level of secondary products bears to that which existed in the same year; (2) A definite long range policy in regard to grain and live stock production; (3) Adequate low cost credit facilities for agriculture; (4) A comprehensive scheme of crop insurance; (5) An equitable re-adjustment of all debts on a 3 per cent basis.

V V V

Speaking of the need for unity, Premier Aberhart said; "At present there are several farmers' organizations. The old age pensioners have their own organization. Wage earners are organized under their own unions. Business men are organized in various associations. Separately these various organizations are weak. They can be played off one against the other. But united for a common purpose they would be able to achieve their worthy objectives. To unite the people of Canada as one effective democratic authority there is no need to discard existing trade and occupational occupations. In fact these should be strengthened. Each must support the other in a united effort to obtain the results everybody wants in common."

Incorporation of five new credit unions during April brought to 88 the number of such co-operative savings and loan associations in the province. Two of the new ventures are of the rural community type. They are located at Consort and Mallaig. Others are the Alberta Avenue, Edmonton, union, of the urban community type, and two occupational unions among Medicine Hat civic workers and Lethbridge civil servants. At the end of March there were 5,161 active credit unionists, with assets of $181,750 of which $130,885 is out working in the form of member loans. Since inception of the movement, loans have totalled $585,024. Surplus funds invested in approved manner, mostly Victory Bonds, amount to $13,421.

Alberta's system of farm land tenure brought in as an alternative to the homestead system is meeting with outstanding success, with the result that other provinces and sections of the U.S.A. are interested in seeking explanations of the plan. This was made known by Hon. N. E. Tanner when he addressed a Rotary meeting in Edmonton this week. The lands and mines minister outlined details of the system, pointing out that settlers pay rent only on the basis of the crop harvested, and in case of poor yield, no rents or taxes are payable. This abolishes the possibility of piling up arrears and debt. Since the program went into effect in 1939, 300 settlers have been placed on the land. It is hoped to place greater numbers after the war.

More than six hundred girls have been trained for Home Service work under the dominion-provincial youth training program during the past four and one-half years, according to G. Fred McNally, deputy minister of education. Most graduates went immediately into employment, and are still following that employment. Nevertheless, there is still a waiting list at both Edmonton and Calgary training centres, and a call for new trainees has been issued.

V V V

At the Home-Service Training Centres, girls are trained to become skilled housekeepers over a four months period. They learn cooking, serving, nutrition and marketing; laundering, cleaning, sewing and mending; home nursing, first aid, personal improvement; and as time permits, training in handicrafts is given. The aim is "to assist the girl to become a skilled housekeeper, cook and homemaker first as an assistant in the home of her employer and later as in her own home. Young women interested in such training, who can support themselves over the four months training period, are urged to apply to the Youth Training Centre, 10334, 122 street, Edmonton, or 707, 13th Avenue W., Calgary.

AMISK CREEK

The Ladies' Aid met at the I. C. Olson home on Tuesday, May 5th. The attendance was good in spite of the busy time, there was not as many men as usual, but quite a few visitors were present. The ladies had two quilts, two large size and one small afghan on display which are to be donated to the Red Cross. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. G. Valen. This time their boy had the mumps, so we hope nothing will be in the way next time.

Everybody is busy in the field. Most of the wheat has been seeded and quite a lot of the oats. The gardens and potatoes have also been planted on nearly every place. It is very dry tho' and we need another snowstorm or some rain.

Ellen Johnson, who was working for Mrs. A. Pearson last winter, left about a week ago and is now working at the Morden home north of Tofield.

Rev. A. Vinge conducted service in the church last Sunday in the afternoon. The Helter brothers sang a duet in honor of Mothers. Rev. Vinge also used "Mother" as his theme for his address. Flowers were presented to the Mothers as a gift from the young people. Gladys Olson, Lillian Patterson and Anna Berild made the presentation.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilmar Moen and daughter Eunice from Lavoy visited their parents' homes, E. A. Moen's and H. Hillerud's, last Sunday. They left again the same evening.

Glen Olson is home from University which he attended last winter.

Gladys Olson and Lilly Haugen were home for Mothers' Day. They are attending L.C.C. in Camrose this year.

Donald Erickson visited last week with his cousin, Milo Holtee in Kingman.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Johnsrud visited at the G. Valen home after service last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moen, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Moen were supper guests at the Hillerud home last Sunday.

Mrs. A. Flaaten visited with Mrs. H. Jenson in Bardo Wednesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ward and family left Shonts a week ago. There is another family that have moved into Ward's place. We hope they will like it here among us when they become acquainted.

Vernie Valen has been laid up with the mumps, but he was able to start school again on Monday.

SWINE MARKETINGS

685,000 head of swine were graded in Alberta in the first four months of 1942. During the same period in 1941, 466,000 head were graded. Gradings for this year are, therefore, over 24 per cent higher than for the January-April period of 1941.

Gradings for the Dominion as a whole stand at 2,091,342 compared to 1,946,507 for January-April 1942 and 1941 respectively.

Gradings and marketings are not synonymous terms. Marketings, for various reasons, slightly exceed gradings.

of Cornhill might be a logical area for a new unit. He said he was willing to consult with Clover Bar, Strathcona, and Cornhill councils concerning this.

Council then adjourned for lunch.

Re-convening after lunch, Mr. Ritchie of the Dept. of Public Works interviewed council regarding the government grant and where it was to be spent. The government grant amounts to $1500.00 to which the M.D adds another $1500 00 This money will be spent on road between sections 32 and 33—50-19 starting at the gravel and running south to Kingman. Also on road between sections 8 and 9, 51-20, starting at the gravel and running except for a jog in road line straight south for 6 miles, then 2 miles east following the line where townships 49 and 50 meet.

Mr Emil Goubault interviewed council re his brother. He promised to help his brother all he could.

The apportioning of the government grant roadwork money as between divisions through which the roads to be graded run, was then undertaken. This resulted in a motion by Reeve Walker to the effect: "that amount of money allowed each division would be based on miles of road work in each division." The motion carried.

Mr. E. E. Lougheed interviewed council regarding position of third man on large road unit. He was requested to put in application which he did.

Mr. Neil Mortenson interviewed council re "cat skinners" job, saying he had had some experience. Application was considered with others later.

On motion by Councillor Anderson it was decided to purchase a new belt for the elevating grader.

Applications for "cat skinner" were then considered There were four applicants: A. Musterwitz, J. O. Grahn, A. Herndon, Neil Mortenson. The choice narrowed down to between Mortenson and Herndon.

Councillor Swabey moved that Neil Mortenson be engaged. This motion was lost.

[illegible] moved that A Herndon be engaged as caterpillar man. This motion carried and A. Herndon was engaged.

Applications for position of third man on large outfit were then considered. There were three applications, Eddie Steen, E. Lougheed and C. D. Fairbrother. On motion of Reeve Walker, Eddie Steen was engaged.

Dr Caldwell interviewed Council with reference to being appointed as Medical Health Officer On motion by Reeve Walker, Dr. Caldwell was appointed M.H.O. at $500.00 per annum.

The above changes were incorporated in a motion made by Councillor Swabey.

Letter from Treasury Branch, Ryley re transferring of account was tabled indefinitely.

Letter from Holden Health Unit re appointing them M.H.O. As the district now had a M.H.O. the letter was tabled.

Mr. Joe Wenger wrote re condition of the road through his place. This was left to councillor concerned to investigate.

Letter from Royal Alex Hospital re Florence Hirsch. Not known.

Letter from Lamont Public hospital re Kenneth Woyney. Not known

Letter from Credit Adjustment Bureau re account of Lawrence Shanks, Not known.

Letter from C.N.I.B. acknowledging grant forwarded.

Letter from Beulah Home acknowledging grant forwarded.

Relief issues for the month of April were announced.

Letter from A. T. McLean re Stanley Donald, saying that Mr. Donald was at present a responsibility of the Municipality.

Letter from Bureau of Relief re Mrs. Selia Ray. They claimed they were not responsible for any portion of relief given this recipient.

Mrs. Ray made application for relief. On motion by Reeve Walker $10.00 emergency relief was issued. No more relief to be issued unless by councillor concerned.

On motion by Councillor Coombes Councillor Anderson was requested to get report filled out re Mrs. Tillie Winder's application for increased allowance.

On motion by Councillor Anderson Mr. Mickelson was given permission to put a pipe line across the road from his well on one side of the road to the pasture on the other.

Councillor Coombes suggested that another operator be put on the 311 grader patrol, thus running a double shift. There were many miles of road to cover and one man could not do it before the roads hardened after a rain. This was agreed to.

Reeve Walker moved that Councillors Coombes and Swabey be a committee to see to getting the large outfit going Carried.

On motion by Councillor Anderson a number of bills were passed for payment.

Another service will be held on Sunday, May 24 at 3 o'clock in the Council Chamber, with Rev. Peterson presiding.

The Canadian Red Cross must reach its objective of collecting 9 million dollars by the end of the month. The district around Tofield has an objective of $1,000, so it is up to us in this district to see that our share is not lacking. It is very necessary that this money should be raised and everyone should give what they can, even if it is only a small contribution, they all add up to a larger sum and are much appreciated. Jessamy Smith, school teacher, is canvassing this district and would appreciate it if all would co-operate as much as possible.

T. HUTSON MEETS WITH ACCIDENT

Tom Hutson of the Searle Grain elevator had a very narrow escape from serious injury or possible death on Friday last. As it was he was severely shaken up and required a few days rest.

He was oiling some machinery in the annex when a sprocket wheel caught his sweater, which was fastened, drawing him in. There was a beam just above him and he seized this putting all the strength he had into a pull to get loose. He tore the front of his sweater, shirt, and underwear out, and broke loose, but not before he had suffered shock and abrasions on the neck. It was a close call and his friends are pleased to know he is around again.

Red Cross Campaign Committee Working

The local Red Cross Campaign Committee is busy canvassing the town and district, doing its share toward the nation-wide drive for funds now underway.

The Provincial Branch of the Red Cross set Tofield's quota at $1500, but this advice did not reach the local secretary until the drive was well started. The local committee had set a quota of $1000.00.

At present writing about $800.00 has been subscribed and with a few more days to go it was expected the $1000 00 mark would be reached.

In connection with the drive in aid of the Red Cross which is now in progress in this area, the canvassing committee wishes to thank particularly the following school teachers: Mrs. J. W. Swabey, Hastings Lake; Miss Smith, Ministik; Miss Bennett, Weslake.

These ladies have very kindly consented to canvass the more isolated parts of the districts in which their schools are located, and this assistance will enable the regular committee to save considerable time and to cover more territory than would otherwise be possible.

Milk Powder Machine Now Running At Tofield

Climaxing months of anxious waiting the machine to manufacture milk powder from milk is now set up and running. The unavoidable delay was caused by the inability to obtain parts for various fittings due to war priorities, etc. However, that is a period now bridged and on Wednesday the first run was made.

In company with Mayor Swift the editor went out to see the machine working and saw skim milk coming off the rollers just like fine scrim curtains

In order to operate the machine the Creamery had to instal a new boiler to augment the boiler they had. Both boilers are now fired by natural gas. The installation of the new boiler required an addition to the building.

The milk powder machine is a very interesting piece of equipment. It consists of two large hollow cylinders supported in a massive iron frame The cylinders are roughly 6 ft. long and 2 ft. in diameter. They are fitted together quite tightly, but not tight enough so as to make a perfect or leak proof join. Above the V caused by the revolving cylinders there is a perforated pipe from which the milk drops, forming a small pool of milk in the V between the two cylinders, the cylinders being set so that a small portion of the milk passes through. Inside the cylinder there is 50 lbs. of steam which makes the cylinder walls about 230 degrees F. The milk passing through the V between the two turning cylinders adheres to them and rapidly dries forming a thin skin of dried milk which passes under a stationary knife separating the milk from the cylinder, causing it to roll out like a continuous roll of fancy drapery. The dried milk then falls into a mechanical conveyor by which it is taken and elevated to a mill in which it is beaten and forced through a screen, falling down a chute into a bag as powdered milk.

On Wednesday afternoon, besides Manager R Currie and regular staff there were on hand, Mr. S. Haire, branch superintendent and Mr. Gort, chief engineer. The first delivery of milk to Tofield was made by Mr. King that morning, amounting to almost 6000 pounds. This had been pasteurized, separated and the skim milk almost all made into powder. There are many uses for skim milk powder and the installation should prove a benefit both to the company and dairy farmers throughout the Tofield area.

Who Are These Birds Without Wings?

Issued by No. 4 Training Command Headquarters, Royal Canadian Air Force, Calgary, Alberta, Public Relations branch

FORWARD

The "Aircrew" of the Royal Canadian Air Force, that is the Pilot, Observer, Wireless Operator Air [redacted] and straight Air Gunner, are known as the "Glamour Boys" of the Air Force. They undoubtedly earn this title through the thrilling and dangerous nature of their duties. However, little publicity attends the daily deeds of the "ground crews" and yet they are an indispensable unit of the Force.

The pilot trusts the men who service his aircraft. He is well aware that his life, the lives of his crew depend upon the skill and knowledge of the mechanic, the armourer, the electrician, the wireless mechanic, the instrument maker and many others.

This series of articles is intended to [illegible] a general outline of the nature of the work and duties of some of the more specialized trades of the "ground men" of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

ARMOURERS

The Armourer who specializes on bombs finds himself in one of the most interesting trade groups in the Air Force. He has plenty of opportunity to fly in the course of his duties and in a rapidly developing branch of the service his work is never given an opportunity to pall on him.

The Armourer's chief duties, of course, lies in the loading of bombs, checking and installing the bombing gear and the maintenance and care of the bomb sights.

The knowledge necessary to 'know' bombs is considerable as there is a wide variety and type of bomb and bomb fuzes in use today. Bombs range from 4 pound incendiaries to over 4,000 pound high explosive missiles with armour-piercing, semi-armour piercing, anti-submarine and general purpose high explosives being some of the more common.

Different types of aircraft require different types of bomb racks and it is here that the armourer enters the picture. It is his responsibility to check all bombing gear in the craft. Before a flight, he removes the delicate bomb sight from its case and installs it in the aeroplane. This initial installation must be very carefully done as a slight error in doing this would cause a serious bombing error from heights of 10,000 feet or even more, and after this the bomb sight will fit automatically correctly onto this bracket.

He supervises the loading of the bombs, having first tested the bomb release slips and the safety devices. Here again the importance of his work is apparent if a bomb does not release properly and remains "hung up" on the bomb rack, a rare occurrence. Whilst bombs are normally safe until fused "live", a hang-up is an awkward nuisance, and on a raid, of course, is a waste of effort.

At bombing schools the Armourer is also responsible for the Camera Obscura, an instrument used for determining wind speed and drift. Students may also bomb the Camera Obscura, without actually dropping real bombs, and the Armourer by means of a chart and timing device records the exact would-be hit if a bomb were dropped; and the bombing error is recorded.

The Armourer (bombs) seldom has a dull moment on his job and is just as excited as the bomb aimer when "his" craft has made a direct hit because he realizes that his skill and attention to detail have been one of the determining factors.

Armourers (bombs) only deal with 11½ pound Practice Bombs at Training Units in this country and will only deal with operational bombs at operational Units, the East and West coast of Canada, or overseas. If posted overseas the work would naturally be very much more interesting as the Armourer would be loading aircraft for bombing raids over Germany or elsewhere in occupied Europe.

DEPARTMENT OF MUNITIONS AND SUPPLY

Ottawa, May 18— Retreaded and used tires, used tubes, and retreading services, as well as new tires and new tubes, are now under rigid control, according to an announcement by Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply.

Effective May 15, the new order is designed to conserve Canada's rubber supplies for war purposes, to prevent hoarding and to keep essential vehicles, including farm trucks and implements, in operation as long as possible.

The order tightens the previous control over new tires and new tubes. It sets up three classes of eligible vehicles, "A", "B", and "C", on a sliding scale gauged according to the usefulness of the vehicle to a country at war, and it rules out the 1,000,000 or more motorists who are no longer able to buy even a used tube.

When a dealer has two or more orders for a similar tire or tube, and he cannot fill both orders, he must give preference to the owner of a vehicle in a higher class.

Owners of vehicles in Class "A" are permitted to buy new tires, new tubes, retreaded tires, retreaded services, used tires or used tubes. In this class are such vehicles as cars used by physicians, cars belonging to clergymen who serve two or more congregations more than three miles apart, cars used by clergymen in sparsely settled districts, trucks for road repairs, trucks for carrying farm products and foods, fire fighters' vehicles, police vehicles, and farm tractors and harvester combines, other than automobiles and trucks, for the operation of which tires and tubes are essential.

Owners of vehicles in Class "B" are permitted to buy retreaded tires, retreading services, used tires and used tubes. In this class are rural mail carriers, passenger cars or trailers used principally for the transportation of produce and supplies to and from his farm by a person whose principal occupation is farming, and who owns no truck, and others.

Owners of vehicles in Class "C" may purchase only used tires and used tubes. Included in this class are vehicles used principally in the course of their duties by the following: Farm or food products inspectors, dentists or optometrists who serve more than one community, scrap buyers, sheriffs or other law enforcement officer, servicemen who repair farm machinery, rural school teachers, rural undertakers, and newspaper reporters. Also covered in this class are horse-drawn vehicles and farm implements for the operation of which tires are essential.

LINDBROOK

The nasty frost sure put the wheat crop down, in fact broke where many promising looking crops showed up, now we just don't know. There are many conflicting opinions as to the outcome. Some say that it will come up again, others say it won't, so as it now stands, it is a question of wait and see. Many would not be able to reseed anyhow. One thing, it is getting late for wheat, and oats and barley for seed are practically non-existent.

Several car and tractor radiators and even engine blocks, were frozen too, in this debacle.

The Home Nursing Unit (ladies) met at the school here last Thursday evening. Mrs. Earl Wilson took charge, being a graduate nurse. Beyond arranging preliminaries, nothing really was done at this meeting, it being largely an organization meeting.

It was quite a night that night, the V.V.R. drilling outside and the Nursing class inside, and then they say that we don't know that there is a war on!

Miss Lily Morden has returned home after her long sojourn in the East, where she went to nurse her father, recently deceased at the age of 101 years.

From now on the V.V.R. will parade at 8:30 p.m. every Thursday at the school. There is talk of trying to arrange to use the Hall on wet nights, and a committee was asked to interview the Hall Board re same. Also it is likely that the drill night be changed to coincide with the Nursing Detachment's night, to save time, gas and tires. Anyway, possibly something definite re these things will be arranged and orders issued in due course.

A rather funny situation arose the other night when the Nursing Detachment in session in one school and the V.V.R. in the other were both waiting for a sign that their respective meetings were over. Time passed and still no sign until the V.V.R. piled out to see "what's keeping you?" and found their women folk saying the same thing. It has been suggested that a liaison officer from each unit attend the others' meeting so that this will not occur again. Don't fall over each other boys. You'll all get your turn!

V.V.R. NEWS

The Parade held at Lindbrook 8:30 May 14th, was in every way a huge success. Tho' the night was stormy and cold, 36 members were on parade. We welcomed in our ranks, 4 new members from Woodlawn and 10 from Lindbrook. We would like to see same action from Wealake, Ministik, Deville and Tofield districts.

Parade was called off at 9:15 and lectures were given in the school house by the Platoon Commander.

LAKESHORE

The War Workers' club will meet at Mrs. Geo. Abernethy's next Thursday.

At the track meet held in Tofield last Friday, Eugene Phillips won the high jump event and will go to Holden to take part at the track meet there for the entire school division.

Herbert Warner has been doing a stretch of two week's solitary confinement. His crime? Catching chicken pox—a very "rash" act.

Last Friday a class in Home Nursing was started under Mrs. G Francis' instruction at her home. These weekly afternoon meetings promise to be very instructive and well worth attending. Probability of epidemics as a result of war time conditions make the practical information one gets at these classes of even more value than in peace time. Anyone interested get in touch with Mrs. Francis, or come to the class at 3 p.m. Friday.

Volunteer workers for the Red Cross have been canvassing the district for funds, and seem quite encouraged with results so far. If you were away when they called or for some reason they have not contacted you, don't delay sending in your contribution, no matter how small or how large, it is urgently needed.

By the way, in case you have not heard or read this—if you know anyone who was among the unfortunate men who were taken prisoner at Hong Kong, you can now send a parcel to him through the Red Cross, which has arranged with the Japanese government to make a delivery of parcels. No chocolate or cigarettes—but toilet articles, especially soaps and insect powder, knitted sweater and sox, razor, etc., are suggested as most necessary. As this shipment is to go forward very shortly you must send as soon as possible.

John Wood has purchased a '27 Chev sedan recently. Mrs. Wood is planning to attend graduation exercises at Edmonton Normal school on Friday when Lorene will be one of the graduating class.

TRUST

It is a common experience for Y.M.C.A. Supervisors in [redacted] to have men of the armed forces deposit in their keeping sums of money or other valuables which the owner wishes kept in safety. A receipt is always given for the deposit, but the trust in the "Y" is absolute.

This feeling of trust was illustrated recently by a Y.M.C.A. Centre in Scotland when three Egyptian seamen called at the Supervisors office and among them deposited some $2,500 in various currencies.

None of the seamen could speak English. They simply handed over their money and were given a receipt. Unable to read it, they smiled politely, handed it back and walked out, completely unconcerned about the safety of their deposit.

WHO WERE THE BEST PREPARED FOR THESE DAY ?

Suppose you were asked to name that section of the population in private rank which is best prepared mentally and morally for the duties of citizenship in these days of trial what would be your answer? For ourselves, we would single out the Boy Scouts, past and present.

NATIONAL WAR LABOUR BOARD

COST OF LIVING BONUS

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has found that the cost of living index number for April 1, 1942, of 115.9 [adjusted index 115] has not risen by one whole point or more over the index number for October 1, 1941, of 115.5 [adjusted index 114.6]. Accordingly, the National War Labour Board, pursuant to the provisions of Section 12 of Order in Council P. C. 8253, determines and announces, for the period May 15, 1942, to August 15, 1942, subject to the right of employers or employees to apply to a War Labour Board for authorization of payment of such an amount of cost of living bonus as a Board may determine to be "fair and reasonable," under the provisions of the Order, that:

(a) There shall be no change in the amount or percentage of cost of living bonuses presently being paid;

(b) An employer who has not been paying cost of living bonuses may not begin to pay such bonuses.

By Order of the National War Labour Board.

DRASTIC NEW REGULATIONS

restricting sales of new, retreaded, and used tires, new and used tubes, and retreading services

ARE NOW IN EFFECT

Only a limited few, the owners of essential eligible vehicles, may now obtain usable tires or tubes, or retreading services. Apart from sales permitted by the new regulations, no person may buy or sell, borrow or lend, barter, give away, mortgage, burn, cut, destroy or otherwise dispose of any such tire or tube. Eligible vehicle owners are divided into three classes, on this basis:

Class:	Who may buy:	What may be bought:	How purchases may be made:
"A"	Physicians, Visiting nurses, Firefighters, Police, Certain trucks, etc.	New, retreaded, or used tires; new or used tubes; retreading services.	To buy new tire or tube, retreaded tire or retreading service, purchaser must apply for Ration Permit to the nearest office of Wartime Prices and Trade Board: (For used tire or used tube, see Class "C").
"B"	War Technicians War supply inspectors, Taxi owners, etc.	Retreaded or used tires; used tubes; retreading services.	To buy retreaded tire or retreading service, purchaser must apply for Ration Permit to the nearest office of Wartime Prices and Trade Board: (For used tire or used tube see below).
"C"	Food inspectors, Scrap buyers, Travelling repairmen, Rural school teachers, etc.	Used tires, used tubes.	A vehicle owner in this class may buy only used tires or used tubes. He must prove necessity to any [redacted] dealer and fill out with the dealer a Purchase Certificate. Classes "A" and "B" may also buy used tires and tubes under the same conditions.

FULL DETAILS OF THE NEW ORDER ARE OBTAINABLE FROM ANY TIRE DEALER

Very severe penalties will be imposed for any infractions of the new regulations. The tire dealers of Canada are co-operating with the Government in the efficient operation of the order, and in its enforcement. It is their patriotic duty to repair and legally resell all usable tires in their possession, and turn over at once to the nearest salvage agency any scrap rubber they have on hand or receive in the future, including all tires and tubes no longer serviceable.

Every person, whether a dealer or not, must report by May 31 to the Tire Rationing Representative at his nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board office, all tires and tubes in his possession on May 15, which are not scrap, and which are not on the running wheels and one spare rim of each vehicle he owns.

TEN PER CENT OF INCOME—

THERE IS SUCH a thing as not being able to see the forest for the trees. Something along this line appears to have occurred regarding war savings. Despite suggestion and exhortation to buy stamps, certificates and bonds, the general public were left more or less guessing as to what proportion of their income they were expected to invest. However a definite answer to this question has come over the air from United States stations during the past week when various announcers stated that 10 per cent of the nation's income was needed. This, we believe, was a good announcement, not that we are in any position to say whether 10 per cent is the correct percentage or not, but it gives a definite mark at which the average citizen may aim and having hit the mark, feel that he or she has done his or her immediate duty as regards war finance.

Present advices coming from Eastern Canada at the present time are to the effect that greater effort and larger amounts will soon be the key note of war finance. As an indication of this, one can quote George W. Spinney, General Chairman of the National War Finance Committee when he said: "From now on Canadians, in order to meet the requirements of the Government, will need to double the amount of current savings at present being invested in Victory Bonds, War Savings Certificates and War Savings Stamps."

An interesting side light on war finance occurred quite recently in the United States when the pay of the ordinary American soldier was boosted from $21—$30 per month by Congress to $50.00 per month; the Senate's recommendation was $42 per month. This makes the United States soldier the second highest paid in the world, the Australian soldier taking the lead with $62.10 per month. The figures quoted are for privates, higher ranks get more. In startling contrast the Chinese soldier gets 28 cents per month and the Japanese soldier 30 cents per month.

Generally speaking there is a close connection between wages in industry and wages paid to the armed forces in any given country. It is all wound up we suppose, in what is known as standard of living, but this fact stands out clearly, to match the Japanese citizen in financial war effort, the Canadian and American citizen must raise over 130 times as much money as the Japanese citizen does.

This brings us to the advantage of the average citizen putting his financial war effort on a percentage basis. Ten per cent put in war savings would still leave the average Canadian or American worker immeasurably better off than the average Japanese citizen as regards income and standard of living.

Just in case you are interested, the Russian private soldier receives $4.00 a month; German $21.60 a month; Italian $1.51 a month; and British $12.20 a month.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange

SUMMERFALLOW EARLY

Seeding time will soon be over and farmers will be thinking about summerfallowing. Summerfallowing in Western Canada has two objects. One is to reduce the weeds in the fields and the other, which is perhaps the more important, is to store up moisture in the soil to be available for the next crop.

These objects are both better attained by early work on the fields. If summerfallowing can have its first operation of either ploughing or cultivating before the end of May, if possible by the third week of May, more weeds will be killed and more moisture will be stored than by later work, for this early working of the fields destroys uncountable young weeds, and preserves the moisture from those heavy rains which usually come towards the end of May and early in June. ploughing and cultivating invariably comes towards the end of May and Later ploughing and cultivating invariably causes much of the moisture already stored in the soil to evaporate into the air and so to become lost.

If the land is very dry do not plough. Shallow cultivation has been found to be the best operation. If the land is badly infested with wild oats, again do not plough. If the weather permits cultivate whenever the weeds are four or five inches high; they are then easy to kill.

SECTION MEN IMPORTANT FOR RAILWAY UPKEEP

Winnipeg May 11—Section men are important at all times for the proper upkeep of railway lines. Their's is an all-year round task to patrol and inspect every yard of track within their assigned territories. Throughout the Canadian National Railways System, including the Grand Trunk Western and the Central Vermont lines, there are 2,863 separate sections each in charge of a foreman. Each section looks after main line track and sidings, averaging nearly nine miles of rail for each working unit.

PRE-ENLISTMENT CLASSES EXPLAINED

Lack of education is no longer a barrier to keen, medically fit lads who are anxious to fly. If the desire and ambition is already present, the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training School will supply the educational instruction free of charge. Not only is the instruction free but the men are paid an allowance of $7.00 a week for single men living at home; $10.00 for single men living away from home and $15.00 for married men or heads of households.

Young men between the ages of 17 years 9 months and 33 years who have completed one or two years secondary school successfully may attend school for twelve weeks, which will give them academically the equivalent of Grade XI maths and physics. These subjects are essential for those training as Pilots, Observers, or Wireless Operators (Air Gunners).

During the course the students have an opportunity of taking part in sport activities and elementary drill. At regular intervals lectures are given by R.C.A.F. officers on such subjects as Theory of Flight, Navigation, Link Trainer, etc. This gives everyone a chance to ask those questions about which he has been wondering for weeks, months or years.

Immediately upon graduation from the school the student is enlisted as an A.C. 2 in the R.C.A.F. and proceeds directly to the Manning Depot.

On acceptance for educational training at the pre-enlistment school the man may be granted exemption from compulsory military training upon application to the Divisional Registrar.

Canada needs every fighting man now. This is the time to begin training with the fastest moving branch of the active forces.

"Total war and a high standard of living simply can not march together . . . they are simply contradictory terms. That is a very simple fact, yet few individuals seem to have asked themselves what they ought to do about it. It has not yet dawned on them that if we are to organize for total war it is the people who must take on the job."—Donald Gordon, Chairman, Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

AGRICULTURE MARCHES WITH OUR ARMED FORCES

Behind the lines where men and women are risking life to defend home and country, other men and women are toiling to supply the materials of war—ships, planes, tanks, guns. These manufacturers—management and workers alike—are thus fighting shoulder to shoulder with our armed forces.

But what about the farmers? They are doing a work of equal importance. They too are marching to battle, by toiling early and late to persuade nature to increase food and other essential supplies on which the issues of the fight so greatly depend. The farmer marches side by side with the soldier and his armourer.

Farmers who are doing their bit to help Canada's all-out war effort may find it necessary to borrow money at the Bank. You should not hesitate to discuss your requirements with our nearest branch manager. Your business will be regarded as strictly confidential.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Edmonton, May 19— Appointment of Dr. Robert Newton, B.S.A., M.Sc., Ph. D., D. Sc., to the presidency of the University of Alberta was announced this week by Premier Aberhart. The new president has been engaged in an acting capacity since the resignation of Dr. W. A. R. Kerr last August. Dr. Newton is 53, native of Montreal. He was a captain in the Canadian Field Artillery in Great War I, won the Military Cross for gallantry in action. In 1919 he became assistant professor of the field husbandry branch, in 1924 became professor of bio chemistry and head of the field crops department. In 1932 he was appointed director of the biology and agricultural research division of the National Research Council. The new president is noted as a forward thinking educationist whose influence will be manifest in Alberta matters.

Medical and dental students will return to University June 1 to commence work on the new speed-up course designed to produce needed graduates for essential purposes. Twenty students will be permitted to enter first-year medicine. It was again announced that applications for the five months education course may be forwarded immediately by students in this branch of university work. Registration takes place May [illegible]

Calling for double acreage of flax and barley the provincial department of agriculture is urging Alberta farmers to seed these two crops this year. It is said that statistics reveal farmers intend to increase barley by only 40 per cent this year and flax 30 per cent. "Alberta should double, if not treble, its flax production and double the acreage sown to barley," say officials of the field crops branch. "In spite of objections we must recognize that we are at war. There is going to be an urgent demand for Canadian flax. It must be met in spite of any objections. We have raised our live stock production to a point where it is approaching a major source of income. This industry must be provided with adequate and proper feed supplies."

No official announcement has yet been made in regard to the by-election made necessary in Edmonton by the death of Mr. D. M. Duggan. Under provisions of the Electoral Act the government has until November 4 to hold the election. Before it can be held, a new enumeration will be necessary.

Refunding talks will be resumed May 21 in Edmonton, it is announced by Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer. Word received from Courtland Elliott, chairman of the bondholders' section of the refunding committee, makes definite the resumption of negotiations on this date. It was reported last week that United Kingdom bondholders had made certain proposals relative to the bond situation, and from the civic heads of Edmonton a request to be included in any favorable refunding plan, was received by Mr. Low.

Despite tire and gasoline rationing, a total of 80,000 passenger car licenses has been issued by the provincial secretary's department, it was officially announced this week. During all of last year there were 96,000 licenses. Drivers licenses this year number 130,000, compared with 153,000 for all of last year.

Women students at the University of Alberta may be required to take compulsory war service training next summer, it is intimated by Dr. Robert Newton, president. The co-eds have requested such compulsory training. During the past year training has been conducted on the honor system, and most have finished the courses they started in clerical, canteen, commissarial and similar work.

What may be an impasse had been reached in the long-drawn tobacco case in this province. On Tuesday this week Mr. Justice Howson refused permission for the province to appeal against decision of the Alberta appeal court which quashed convictions obtained against members of the tobacco trade on charges of operating a combine. When the firms were convicted after lengthy court proceedings and legal tanglings, fines totalling $221,500 were imposed. Later a stay of proceedings was ordered by another judge, although some defendants paid the fines. It is possible that the province may yet proceed under the Criminal Code, the actions so far having come under the Combines Act.

Farmers please note that under regulations of the Wheat Acreage Reduction Act 1942, all those farmers who did not make a preliminary application in 1941 MUST make one before May 31, 1942.

If your land holdings have changed since 1941 you should file preliminary application before May 31, 1942, even though you filed a preliminary application last year.

If your land holdings have not changed since 1941 it is not compulsory to make out another preliminary application this year but the Department strongly urge that every farmer make out one.

Landlords must also file the same as last year but have until end of June to file their applications.

Please have your figures on paper and correct before you come in.

Information required when filling out the 1942 application includes:

Name of Municipality.

Applicant's [illegible].

Applicant's post office address.

Description of lands, part of section, township, etc.

Whether land is owned or rented.

1940 acreages of wheat, coarse grains, summerfallow, grass acreage at July 1st, rye acreage at July 1st, new breaking, unbroken and waste lands.

1942 Acreages for wheat, coarse grains, summerfallow, grass, rye, unbroken or waste lands.

Total acreage of farm 1940.

Total acreage of farm 1942.

Whether any change has been made in farm holdings since 1940.

Number of acres of what grass, if any, is being seeded with a nurse crop in 1942.

Whether applicant had a permit to market wheat in 1940 and if so at what shipping point.

Whether anyone else has an interest in the crop on any of the above lands. If so names and address of those interested should be given and the share of the crop to which each is entitled.

By writing down the answers to the above and making sure that the figures are correct and balance, considerable time and effort will be saved when application is made out at Municipal office.

EXTREMES DO MEET

License was issued for the marriage of Ebenezer Sweet and Jane Lemon.

The inquiring reporter who got hold of the copy had a rhyming as well as inquiring instinct, and wrote it up:

"Behold how great extremes do meet,
In Jane and Ebenezer;
For Jane's no longer sour but sweet,
And Eb's a lemon squeezer."

CUPBOARD QUISLING!

"Cupboard Quislings"! Is that too hard a name for people who selfishly lay in unnecessary stocks of clothes or food, or other goods for fear of shortages?

No! The name is not too hard, even though it may be earned through thoughtlessness. For in reality they are doing, in a petty, mean way, what the Quisling does in the open.

Anyone who buys more than is necessary for current needs—

- Is breaking his country's law for personal advantage.
- Is betraying his loyal neighbours and those who are not so well off as he.
- Is, in effect, depriving our fighting men of the munitions and supplies they must have to defend us.
- Is hindering our war effort and helping our enemies.

Loyal citizens avoid putting unnecessary and abnormal strains on our factories. In time of war, loyal citizens do not spend one dollar more on civilian goods than is absolutely necessary for current needs.

The law provides for fines up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to two years for hoarding; and hoarding is just another word for unnecessary selfish buying.

In cases where it is advisable for you to buy in advance of your immediate requirements — such as your next season's coal supply — you will be encouraged to do so by direct statement from responsible officials.

On Friday afternoon last a large number of children from the Tofield schools and the schools in districts surrounding Tofield, were guests of the local I.O.D.E. Chapter to a special Victoria Day moving picture program.

There must have been close to 300 children present as the Variety Theatre was filled to the last seat. The development of the Canadian West from virgin prairie to an agricultural area was also shown.

The program was well received by the children who, despite the large number present, were exceptionally well behaved.. The program opened with all singing "Oh Canada," and closed with all singing "God Save The King."

THE GOOD EARTH

"All real and wholesome enjoyments possible to man have been just as possible to him since first he was made of the earth as they are now; and they are possible to him chiefly in peace. To watch corn grow, and the blossoms set, to draw hard breath over the ploughshare or spade; to read, to think, to love, to hope, to pray—these are the things that make man happy. Now and then a wearied king, or a tormented slave, found out where the true kingdoms of the world were, and possessed himself, in a furrow or two of garden ground, of a truly infinite dominion." —John Ruskin

If not, discuss the question of a personal loan for the purpose with our nearest branch manager.

Many patriotic citizens are buying next winter's coal now, following the suggestion of the Coal Administrator, who has urged early ordering of fuel because of the transportation difficulties with which Canada will be faced in the months ahead.

Delayed or reduced deliveries may occur if orders for coal are not placed in good time.

If you are without the ready cash, our personal loan service, available at any of our branches, may be of real help to you, and our local manager will welcome the opportunity of discussing your requirements in confidence.

Who Are These Birds Without Wings?

A feature designed to acquaint the general public with the work and duties of the "Ground Crew" in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

ARMOURERS (GUNS)

Our Armourer is sleepy this morning. Being on "early party" he and other Armourers are charged with the responsibility of having the Gunnery Aircraft "on the [illegible]" completely inspected, guns mounted and ammunition ready so that flying will start on time, which is generally daybreak, weather permitting.

As he arrives at the hangar he notes the number of aircraft that will be required for the days schedule. Each craft is given a careful check, that is those parts which are the responsibility of the Armourers. Gun mountings and safety devices are given a careful going over and, satisfied that all is well, he signs the Aircraft Serviceability form. After ascertaining what type of gun is to be used and mounting it in the craft he reports back to the armament section. The planes are now on the lines and warming up. Just as Old Sol peeks over the horizon the pilots put in their appearance and in a few minutes a mighty roar signifies the craft are away for the [illegible].

During exercises, a gun may break which means returning to the aerdrome and having it replaced. This work is done by the armourer who also takes the broken gun to the section where he locates the reason for the gun refusing to fire. It may be a major breakdown or a minor cause such as a broken firing pin which is replaced and the gun put back into service.

His work, however, does not stop here. He may be detailed to supervise the ground range where perhaps half a dozen machine guns are being fired by students who have not reached the air-firing stage. He may be given a gun to test and forthwith he mounts it in an aircraft and flies off to the range to report back fully on the gun's behaviour.

Power operated turrets must also be looked after by the Armourer and he must be familiar with the entire hydraulic system and may be called on for adjustment, repairs, harmonization of the guns or installation of sights.

Ammunition is part of the Armourer's responsibility. He must see to the loading of ammunition drums and belts and the testing of same. One might have the impression that if weather is unfavourable for flying, the armourer should have an easy time. Such is not the case as a great deal of his work is routine. Guns must be inspected by completely dismantling the entire mechanism and checking each individual part thoroughly after so many rounds have been fired. This, is in addition to the cleaning and inspection after each day's firing. Ammunition must be tested and if it has remained in storage for a certain length of time it must receive a firing test. Gun sights must be checked and harmonized and countless other jobs keep him occupied.

If sent overseas the Armourer finds his work a great deal more interesting. Working on high-speed combat planes, the turrets on huge bombers and feeling the thrill of actually taking a part in the fighting. The ideal Armourer takes a keen interest in his job, and being interested, he is "happy in the service," proud of his skill and knowledge and of his value to the Force.

ONE FOR RIPLEY

Winnipeg, May 18— Oddities very often crop up in the checking of box car performance in a railway car service department of the Canadian National Railways, a group charged with the parental care of some 20,000 cars of C.N.R. and foreign ownership.

At Estlin, Saskatchewan, there are four privately owned grain elevators on the siding and on March 18th, C.N. box car No. 500005 was spotted for loading at the Saskatchewan Pool Elevator. It was loaded with wheat for the Lakehead. On April 6th, only nineteen days later, the same car turned up at the same elevator for another load of wheat for the Lakehead.

An additional feature is the fact the car number reads the same front or backwards. For the same car to turn up at the same elevator in such a short space of time is one of those "one in a million" chances according to the Car Service Department.

PARITY PRICES

There has been a good deal of talk about "parity" price of wheat. Some friends of this "World of Wheat" column [illegible] asked [illegible] "parity" prices of other farm products. First, we must understand that full "parity" price in [illegible] the United States means [illegible]ply the 1913-14 price of the product, multiplied by the increase that has taken place of the things farmers have to buy. This gives the full 1913-14 "parity" price or full purchasing power of the product.

Then if we divide this full "parity" into the present price, we shall have the present purchasing power of any product as compared with its similar purchasing power of 1913-14.

At today's prices wheat is 43 per cent BELOW its 1913-14 purchasing power or "parity" and at the new 90 cent price will be 31 per cent BELOW. Hogs are 14 per cent BELOW, butcher steers 10 per cent BELOW and lambs are 7 per cent ABOVE the similar 1913-14 "parity" price, but the wages paid to industrial labour in munition and other plants are 44 per cent ABOVE the 1913-14 parity.

It will be observed therefore, that [illegible] our livestock producers are better off than the wheat growers, yet all are receiving a much less reward relative to 1913-14 than are workers in industrial plants. Let no one make any mistake about it—our Prairie farmers are making a valuable and patriotic contribution to this war.

SERVICE

One of the most appreciated services rendered by the Y.M.C.A. to the English airmen stationed at Picton, Ont., is arranging trips to New York for the men of the R.A.F., all of whom seem possessed with a burning desire to see New York city before returning to Britain.

For these men the "Y" Supervisor attends to all [illegible] of obtaining passports, arranging for United States currency, and the hundred and one details which [illegible] young men in a strange land so far from their homes.

By getting in touch with Y.M.C.A. representatives in New York, a program is arranged for the R.A.F. men during their visit which has received their enthusiastic approval for its thoroughness in showing them the sights of the great metropolis.

In the past three months approximately 600 R.A.F. men have taken advantage of this service offered by the Y.M.C.A.

SUGAR RATION Now 1/2 LB. PER WEEK PER PERSON

Since sugar rationing was first introduced, the shipping situation has become more serious. The danger to ships and lives has increased. Consequently it has now become necessary to reduce the sugar ration from ¾ lb. to ½ lb. per week per person. Only persons in areas remote from source of supply are permitted to have more than two weeks' supply on hand at any time.

SUGAR FOR PRESERVING

Special provision is made for additional quantities of sugar for home preserving and canning.

In addition to your ration, you may purchase ½ lb. of sugar for every pound of fruit that you preserve or can, and ¾ lb. of sugar for every pound of fruit made into jam or jelly.

Every person who buys sugar for canning or preserving is required to keep an accurate record of the sugar purchased for this purpose. If any sugar remains after canning and preserving, it shall form part of the regular ration of ½ lb. per person per week.

Loyal Canadians will be glad of this new opportunity to do their part to ensure Victory.

UNITY—

APPARENTLY THE repercussions of the recent plebiscite have not entirely subsided. Quebec, traditionally liberal and long anti-conscriptionist, feel that the question embodied in the plebiscite was not one for the rest of Canada to answer anyway; that the no conscription for overseas service pledge was given to Quebec and only Quebec had the right to release the government from it. The argument is specious but not logical. The government of Canada represents all of Canada, and any such pledge as was given must refer to all of Canada, not any particular portion. In the dailies of very recent date there is a report of a meeting of liberal members at which Premier King delivered an impassioned address urging unity, and is reported to have said if unity did not prevail, he would resign office. It is extremely regrettable that a difference of opinion between provinces so deep rooted, should arise at a time when unity of purpose between all Canadians is an imperative necessity, but it is also reasonable to expect that good judgement will prevail and that Quebec parliamentarians through their opportunities for national observation will realize the vital importance at this time of unity, even to the extent of relinquishing long cherished ideals.

In the very early days of the amalgamation of the American States into the United States of America, an English cleric, writing according to his impressions formed by previous history, wrote that it would not be long before America would be divided up into kingdoms and principalities. His prediction did not materialize. Instead, since that time, the United States of America as a composite whole have risen from a very humble position among nations to a position of world importance. A world position of such importance that the welfare and destiny of millions of people all over the world depend upon her fields, factories and mines, together with her human ingenuity, skill and industry. Unity among those of common interests was never more important than it is today.

Perhaps not fraught so much with tragic consequences as disunity between provinces, it is highly desirable that unity and harmony prevail in civic affairs and personal relations, one with the other. There are few Canadians who have not faith in the ultimate success of United Nations arms, but it is equally true that the combination of Axis forces have so far met with a considerable degree of success. Much of this success has been due to superior numbers and armament, but some of it at least, has been due to unity of purpose. This unity of purpose is, without doubt, compulsory, even in Axis civil life, but it does tend to concerted action which is so much desired during times of national stress.

Here in the democracies we are still allowed to criticize the statements and actions of our leading public men, and it would be a profound pity were it otherwise. But the humor of a political wisecrack falls rather flat when one realizes that in widely scattered parts of the world, men, women and children by the thousand are meeting death daily, and hundreds of thousands of others are living by the hour or day. Living in a country which still enjoys political freedom and a measure of economic freedom, seems to place upon the individual a responsibility unknown within Axis circles. Sometimes we feel that if there was less preaching and editorial writing, and a greater individual realization of this, we would all feel better. To compete with Axis enforced unity of purpose among individuals, the United Nations must have voluntary unity of purpose. To different citizens this may mean much or little, from the supreme sacrifice to the lessening consumption of a common commodity. But whatever it does mean to each one of us we should be on the alert to see that the part we represent in the democratic machine and its struggle for existence is a good part. That the burrs of non co-operation and indifference have all been filed off.

THE MAIL CARRIER

Postman, I would your precious freight ransack
And read its sum of pleasure and of pain,
Of love and hate, of losses and of gain.
To souls at peace and souls upon the rack
You deal, blindfolded, fortunes from your pack.
All human passions that to life pertain
You leave for tears or laughter in your train,
Thrown carelessly with bill or almanac.

O, stolid daily messenger of fate,
Your trail of slamming doors along the street,
Which young and old, and rich and poor, await,
Spreads joy and sorrow, triumph and defeat.
Unique in power and powerlessness you stand,
Passing the script of life from hand to hand.

LINDBROOK

Heat, dust storms and wind! Gee, it looked more like the Libyan desert this week than the Alberta farming district. This cannot go on much longer without disastrous results. The sloughs are drying up and so are the pastures and hay lands. Still we cannot do anything about it, and by this time we should be more accustomed to disastrous results than excellent ones.

Mlle. Marie La Rocque of Edmonton N, is here on a visit to her father, Mr. LaRocque sr., and her brother Wilfred, both of whom live here.

The Ladies' Nursing class met at the Hall last Tuesday afternoon. There was not much accomplished, only organization matters. Say! what's up with you ladies? Look at the V.V.R.. Three drills and they begin to look like troops already. We only hope you will have it going before we need it. Maybe next week, it's rifle drill then. It was decided to hold it on Tuesday nights at the Hall to coincide with the V.V.R.'s parade, so roll out you V.A.D.'s and show us how.

We are glad to see that Vic Gill is out and around again. He drilled with the Vets last Thursday.

The V.V.R. parade at the school was well attended, 38 being on parade and several more joined, bringing the total strength up to 43 now, with more coming. Everyone is very keenly interested in our little Home Guard and are taking to the drills like ducks to water. Already quite a change is noticeable. The first part of the evening was devoted to squad drill under Section Leaders, and then afterwards, platoon drill under Sergt. [illegible] It was decided to have a try at arms drill next parade and all are turning out with whatever firearms they possess. All we need now is a [illegible], a bugle and some more drill, oh, and by the way, some more men, so don't be shy, come and smarten up with the rest of us.

The dance in aid of the Hall funds last Friday night was well attended. The music supplied by the Tofield Orchestra was good and everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

One of our people has a cat that persists in following him like a dog. Rather embarassing too, he gets called Dick Whittington, etc., but it's very unlikely that he will ever be Lord Mayor of London or any other place, for that matter.

Another thing, if you run across some guy going through weird staccato movements, don't think he is nuts, he is probably a V.V.R. tuning up for the next parade.

Mrs. W. Fish was here on a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. Bracegirdle. Mr. Fish is away down east somewhere with the R.C.A.F.

[illegible] Allan and Bellamy were out here this week canvassing the district for the Canadian Red Cross Drive for funds to carry on its work. We hope that their efforts were successful.

A religious service was held at the school last Sunday afternoon. The service was conducted by the Rev. Reuben Rogers and was fairly well attended as church services go in these parts. These services are entirely undenominational, just a simple service, hymns, prayers and a sermon. Everyone is welcome and they are held every Sunday afternoon at the school, Lindbrook.

We are glad to hear that Mr. Arthur Gill is off the sick list now and hope he stays so.

Miss Louise Gould, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gould, is quite ill again, suffering a relapse from her recent illness. We hope soon to report her O.K. again.

V.V.R. NEWS
(Heard on the Parade Grounds)

Blank, Blank, Blank, Youse guys, do you think you are guerillas or gorillas.

Hey you, with the long ears and four feet. Just use two feet to march with.

You may be your mother's darling, but you look like a guerilla to me.

Look, you chaps, you may have broke your mother's heart, but you're not going to break mine.

This drilling makes me 20 years younger.

What are you bobbing up and down for, so and so? Sorry, I've one foot in a gopher hole.

DEVILLE

Dance will be held in North Cooking Lake Hall, Friday, June 5, at 8:30 p.m. Fleming's orchestra. Prizes for lucky ticket holders. Come and have a good time.

Grace Forsythe visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas during the week end.

We send our sincere sympathy to the Stewart family in their recent bereavement.

MINISTIK

Mr. A. Carr is the resident student pastor for Ministik, Hastings Lake, Looma Vista and maybe Deville. We had a nice service at the Hall on Sunday, 24th May. This is Mr. Carr's last year in the mission field. His father will ordain him next September. His father has a church in Lacombe. Next Sunday, May 31st, services will be at Ministik at 8:30; at Looma Vista, 11:00 o'clock and Hastings Lake at 3 o'clock.

The Home Nursing class was held at the Hall last Wednesday. The next meeting will be on May 27th.

Mr. F. Baker, M.L.A. will be at the Hall on Saturday night, June 6th. His talk will be on Salvage. Come out and let us have a good meeting.

Our teacher, Miss Smith, spent the week end with her parents.

A misprint appeared in last week's issue, that of Mr. H. Carter, which should have been H. Curtis.

Mrs. F. Williams is at present visiting an Edmonton hospital. When she comes home she will bring back a big bouncing baby girl. Congratulations "Papa Francis".

Sid Whitford has received his call for the Army for some time in June.

We were pleased to see Marion Smith took two ribbons at the Tofield track meet. The winners went to Bruce to compete there on Saturday but Marian failed to bring home the bacon.

It is time we had a picnic in this district. Then we will have rain. So the sooner we have a picnic the better.

Quite a number of our young folk went to Lindbrook for the dance on Friday night and report having a good time.

Mr. L. Coles of South Cooking Lake was a week end visitor at Mrs. A. J. Leach's.

School will close for the summer on June 30th, (Tuesday.) They will open for business on Tuesday, Sept. 1st.

Mrs. E. Stevens is visiting an Edmonton hospital and when she comes home she will bring back a big bouncing baby girl.

Mrs. S George has gone North to visit where Stanley is working. Somewhere between here and the North Pole.

Mrs. Hull is out at her cottage at White Sand Beach for the summer.

Monday night and it is raining and looks as though it might continue. We hope so, for we sure need showers of blessings and lots of them.

We saw E. Stevens on the bus this morning. I guess he was going back to camp.

"Hitler's not going to teach my children!"

"I've read how Hitler starts training his killers when they're toddlers. So I reckon it's up to me and every other Canadian mother to train our children to realize that they've got to pay for their freedom!"

"That's why I see to it that all my children buy War Savings Stamps every week. I tell them what freedom means—what the grown-ups are fighting for—that it's for them! So they've got to give up something too—and the money—$5.00 back for every $4.00 saved now—will come in mighty handy—when they start out on their own!"

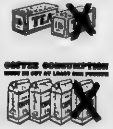
TEA AND COFFEE ARE RATIONED

Ships and lives must be conserved

To [illegible] Ceylon and [illegible] coffee from South America, ships must cross oceans infested with submarines. Today these ships and their naval escorts are required for more essential services. Every ship, every foot of cargo space, is needed to carry war materials, and to bring essential goods to Canada.

So Canadians must now reduce their consumption of tea and coffee. You must reduce your normal consumption of tea by at least a half. You must reduce your normal consumption of coffee by at least one fourth. These reductions are absolutely necessary.

TEA CONSUMPTION
MUST BE CUT AT LEAST IN HALF



COFFEE CONSUMPTION
MUST BE CUT AT LEAST ONE FOURTH

THIS IS THE LAW

You must not buy more than 2 weeks' supply of tea or coffee for yourself and household in any one week.

You must not make further purchases of tea or coffee at any time when you have two weeks' supply on hand at the reduced ration. (Exception, those in areas remote from supply.)

Retailers have the right to limit or refuse customers' orders if they suspect the law is not being kept. Retailers must not have on hand more than one month's supply of tea and coffee, whether packaged or bulk.

There are heavy penalties for violations of this law.

THE WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

REDUCTION OF SUGAR CAN BE PAINLESS

Sugar rationing won't hurt anyone. According to nutritionists, sugar does nothing more than supply quick energy and create an appetite for more sugar.

Here are "painless" ways to cut down on sugar:

Gradually reduce amounts in tea, coffee and on cereals.

Make icings thinner or eliminate entirely.

Serve fruits in season in their natural state instead of cakes, pies and puddings.

When stewing fruit, add sugar towards the end of the cooking period when it takes less to sweeten. A pinch of salt added will bring out the flavour. Avoid using soda as this destroys vitamins.

Substitute honey, corn syrup, maple products or molasses when available. Remember if you have to buy these substitutes that they cost more than sugar. Save this money to serve more of the protective foods, fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs, cheese, meat, butter and bread made from Canada Approved flour. When the family becomes accustomed to the natural food flavour, they will in all likelihood prefer it.

If dried fruits are used in muffins or cookies the amount of sugar called for in the recipe may be cut down.

MINISTIK JR. U.F.A. MEETING

Since the measles were having their rounds in the district, the May meeting of the Ministik Jr. U.F.A. was held at the Hall on Wednesday, May 6th. Attendance was good with 10 members and 2 visitors present. President Ronald Swabey conducted the meeting and after the usual business, Jean Oliver was chosen as the Junior's delegate to Farm Young People's Week held at the University early in June. The roll call was answered with the "Name of a make of a radio." The meeting was brought to a close with a list of interesting quiz questions and a contest. The next meeting will be at Williams' on June 3.

Secretary Treasurer was asked to interview Mrs. Sinclair concerning taxes and report at next meeting.

Meeting adjourned.

BAPTIST CHURCH NEWS

The service in the Tofield Town Hall Council Chamber last Sunday, May 24th, was well attended. The topic taken by Rev. Palmer O. Peterson, pastor of the Kingman Baptist Church, was "Faith as the Paramount Virtue" or the one thing recognized by Christ. Romans 10:13-17, explains that faith is not believing a thing without evidence. On the contrary, faith rests upon the best evidence, namely, the Word of God. An act of faith denotes a manifestation of intelligence.

Then why not accept the Word of God rather than man, for there are four striking features which reveal the super-natural character of the Bible and supply conclusive evidence of its inspiration:

1. The Bible's peculiar unity and harmony.
2. It's singular longevity and pertinacity.
3. It's marvelous literary style and diction.
4. It's magnificent experimental effect on all those who read and believe and accept its truths.

Another service will be held on Sunday, June 14th at 3 o'clock in the Council Chamber, Tofield Town Hall.

A "Faith Bible Camp" will be held at the beach of the Third Miquelon Lake on the dates of July 4th to 13. No charge is made to register at this camp. Everyone is requested to bring donations of eatables and anything in order to make camping comfortable and enjoyable. D.V.B.S. sessions will be held for all the children from Monday through Friday, and Saturday is the chief picnic day. Anyone having any free will gifts to make, please give the information to Rev. Palmer O. Peterson, Kingman, because this is entirely a Faith Project.

We trust that many will come and enjoy the benefits of this week at camp.

COSMOPOLITE

A sailor wearing a Norwegian cap-band dropped into a Y.M.C.A. in England for a cup of tea. The supervisor seeing the cap-band came up to him and said:

"We've some Norwegian newspapers in the reading room if you'd care to see them."

The sailor grinned.

"Thanks," he said. "Afraid they wouldn't be much use to me though. This is a Norwegian cap-band all right, but I just borrowed the hat. I really belong to the Polish navy. And besides that I'm a born Yank from Brooklyn. Now if you've got a copy of the New York Times—"

The "Y" supervisor staggered. But he did manage to produce a two week old copy of the paper asked for.

Music Recital In United Church

The United Church was packed to capacity and beyond, to hear the musicians of tomorrow perform on Monday evening. The youngest and the oldest pupils certainly gave a splendid performance. There was variety, color and technique in all the items. The program was well balanced. There were piano, violin and singing selections. The large audience again and again showed their hearty appreciation of the effort put forth.

Mr. Horace McHeffey gave a delightful display of his artistic talent. His crayon sketches, with his running comment, were appreciated and received prolonged applause.

Prof. Prathin climaxed a profitable and enjoyable evening with three violin selections. They were classical pieces performed by a master hand. Seldom have we heard a better violinist.

Mrs. Stinson with her untiring zeal for things musical, deserves the thanks and highest praise for staging such a galaxy of talent.

The Junior Choir gave splendid assistance in their singing of the folk-lore songs of all the provinces. And we take this opportunity to thank them and Prof. Prathin and Mr. Horace McHeffey for their kindly co-operation.

The proceeds of the Recital goes to the Milk for Britain fund. This will provide for the kiddies of Britain, 300 quarts of milk.

Tofield To Field Senior Baseball Team

(Contributed)

Tofield again will have a senior baseball team. Last Sunday, after a brief practice a meeting was held and the following were elected: Manager, Frank Johnsrud, Secretary-Treasurer, Orton McGuire; Coach, Father Schmeltzer.

After the meeting the boys journeyed to Dodds for a friendly game. Dodds won the game 5-1. Despite the loss the boys showed up well. There is some fine material amongst the young fellows and if a few of the old veterans would come out to help, the town and district could field a fairly good team. Baseball seems to have declined here during the past few years, mainly due to the better fellows going into the different services and also to the lack of stern competition that was common in the hey-day of such local stars as Glen Wood, Scotty Lee and Frank Ball and many others we might recall, and when a tournament was worth plenty of money.

You people who have not sufficient gas in your cars to go to a lake on Sundays might like to wander out to the town park and cheer the boys on. This would help the brand of baseball and the boys would appreciate it greatly if you would come. The war is now our main concern but a little sport will help to maintain a balanced perspective.

U.F.W.A. NOTES

In place of the regular meeting of the Tofield U.F.W.A., a social afternoon will be had at the home of Mrs. Davison on Thursday, June 11. This is the annual birthday celebration of the local, and all members are cordially invited to attend and to supply an item towards the afternoon's entertainment.

LAKESHORE

The Ladies' Aid Strawberry Social has been an annual event of many year's standing—and with the coming of June many a person "set his mouth" for strawberries and ice cream and angel cake as dished up by the Lakeshore ladies. But the world shaking events of the past two years are making themselves felt even in our secure little corner, and the present sugar and berry situation has changed the old order. This year it will be hot dogs and strawberry short cake you will sink your teeth into when the annual social is held this month. Watch for posters.

The rain last week caused a postponement of the War Worker's meeting, but most of the garments have been completed and handed in and the work committee will try to get materials distributed so that more work can be done and turned in at the June meeting. The war goes on rain or shine, and our work must be kept up, it is so urgently needed.

It looked like a very patriotic crowd gathered at Mrs. Francis' last Friday to attend home nursing class. Nary a car in the yard. Instead of parking space, Mr. Francis thought he ought to have a hitching rack and a stand for rubbers. 'Twould have done oil controller Cottrelle's heart good to have seen the ladies arriving.

The children are getting a real dose of education with two teachers in charge these days. Lorene Wood is putting in a couple of week's practice teaching under the helpful and capable supervision of Miss Craig.

John Warner jr., of the R.C.A.F. spent a week end leave at home. John is taking his pilot's training at the university now.

The last two Saturdays have seen far more cattle than in other years on their way to pasture in the reserve. A number of horses too have been taken in. Short pastures evidently are making it necessary for stock owners to seek new fields. Some of the horses and cattle have been brought great distances—from Camrose, Ryley, Strome and other points.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zuk and Raymond had dinner with Mr. R. C. Phillips on Tuesday.

Mrs. Bethel, Mrs. Abernethy, Mrs. Bill Seale and Mrs. Baptist accompanied Mrs. John Wood to Edmonton to the graduation exercises at the Normal School a week ago. Mrs. Bethel, who has not been feeling quite up to par lately, took the opportunity to consult Dr. Law while in the city. We are glad to hear he thought nothing more serious than eyestrain was causing her indisposition.

Aeroplane Down In Beaver Lake

While presumably on a routine flight, an aeroplane from Edmonton was forced down at the north end of Beaver Lake. The plane was forced to land in the water but fortunately the water was not deep enough to submerge either plane or crew. The forced landing occurred Sunday or Monday and during the week the plane has been partly dismantled prior to being taken back to Edmonton. As far as we can learn, no injury resulted to the crew.

HE SPOKE TO THE JURY

A man who had never seen the inside of a courthouse until he was introduced as a witness in one of the District Courts of Louisiana, took a position with his back to the jury and began telling his story to the judge. The judge in a courteous manner said: "Address yourself to the jury, sir." The man made a short pause, but, not comprehending what was said to him, continued his narrative. His honor became more explicit, and said: "Speak to the jury, sir—the men sitting behind you on the benches." The witness then turned around, and making an awkward bow, said, with great gravity of manner: "Good-morning, gentlemen."

KETCHAMOOT

Mr. Harold Schultz was a passenger to Edmonton on Friday.

Miss Mary Fleming, a former Woodlawn teacher, spent the week end at the Appleby home.

Little Elva Smith of Mountainhouse is staying with her grandmother, Mrs. Geo. Lawson, while her mother is in the hospital.

Miss Margaret Kelly was a Sunday guest of Mrs. G. W. Sears.

Mr. and Mrs. L. McGinitie, daughters Dora and Nola, Mrs. Emily Carlisle, Mrs. John Brown and Miss Ethel Brown were Edmonton visitors Saturday.

A farewell party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Campbell Saturday evening previous to their moving to Edmonton where they expect to make their home. A large crowd of friends and neighbors were present to wish them every success in their new home. Music and social conversation soon passed the time away. Lunch was served after which Mrs. G. W. Sears, on behalf of those present, presented Mrs. Campbell with a nice framed picture for all the family. All joined hands and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Mrs. Roy Lee visited her sister, Mrs. Harold Smith at an Edmonton hospital. Mrs. Smith underwent a serious operation one day last week. Her many friends wish for her a complete recovery after several years of ill health.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears and Gary attended a family dinner at the home of Mrs. Sears' uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. McClennon at Fee on [illegible].

LAC Albert Sears has been transferred to Rivers, Man. While travelling, he met LAC Jim Bruce at Montreal.

A barn dance to be held at Dodds' barn, near Tofield, is announced for Friday, June 19th. The use of the barn is being given free and the members of the orchestra are giving their services free. Mr. Dodds' barn is well known, quite a number of dances having been held there previously. There is a good floor and plenty of space. The Red Cross should profit considerably by this [illegible].

HONEY AS A FOOD

(Experimental Farms News)

Honey is the only sweet which appears on the breakfast table, unchanged, as it comes from Nature. Honey is primarily a sweet, a carbohydrate belonging to the alkaline group of foods. This means that honey's chief role is in providing the body with a source of energy, states W. A. Stephen, Assistant (Apiary Products) Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The carbohydrates in honey, unlike those in most other foods, are in the form of simple sugars which can be used immediately by the body whereas practically all other carbohydrates must remain in the body some time and be acted upon by secretions from the pancreas before being made available for body energy.

So much for the major part of honey, the sugars. Minor constituents include the minerals, iron, copper, magnesium, calcium and potassium and several other trace elements. There are also a dozen acids, colouring materials, volatile oils, enzymes and undetermined matter which give to honey its flavour, aroma and health giving properties.

Honey finds its best place on the table of the average household, but is used extensively in cooking. As dessert with fresh biscuits, on cereals, pancakes and fresh fruits, in tea, coffee and fruit drinks, honey is unexcelled.

In Canada nearly all honey can be divided into two categories, light and dark. The darker the honey, the stronger its flavor, but also the higher its food value. These two honeys are available all year round, and each has its place according to whether it is used in mild or strongly flavoured combinations.

Recipes for using honey in various ways have been produced in booklet form by the Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The title is "Honey and Some of the Ways It May be Used", and it may be obtained by writing to the Division of Extension and Publicity, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

A TIMELY WARNING

Truck drivers who take happy parties on pleasant summer jaunts, run the risk of having their gasoline rationing books lifted, warns the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. It doesn't matter if the truck driver carries them free.

Gas rationing is intended to preserve all the gasoline possible for the use of the armed forces. A special clause in the regulations prohibits commercial vehicles from carrying passengers. It reads:

"No person shall hereafter use or operate or cause to be used or operated, whether for or without compensation, any vehicle for the transportation of persons other than the driver and any assistant or assistants necessary to load or unload goods on or from such vehicle".

MORE, AND STILL MORE BARLEY

Recent estimates published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics of the acreage of crops Alberta Farmers intended to seed in 1942, reveal that barley may be increased by only 40 per cent over 1941, and flax about 80 per cent. This increase is much below the objective set to meet war requirements and the increased live stock demands for the Province of Alberta.

Alberta should double, if not treble, its flax production and having regard for its increased live stock population, should double the acreage sown to barley. Therefore, 80 per cent and 40 per cent increases in flax and barley respectively is not good enough to meet war requirements. It is true that flax tends to disseminate weeds and it is difficult in some seasons to harvest. It is also true that barley is not always convenient to handle, it volunteers, and its presence is objectionable on wheat farms.

In spite of limitations and objections, we must recognize that we are at war. There is going to be an urgent demand for Canadian flax and its products in Canada and the United States, which must be met in spite of any objections that may be raised.

We have increased our live stock population to a point where it is approaching a major source of income. This industry must be provided with adequate and proper feed supplies.

On Monday, June 8th, there will be a ratepayer's meeting at the Hall to decide about closing our school for a year. What do you think of it, folks?

Don't forget the Ladies' garden party and tea at the Hall grounds on June 13th. There will be games during the evening. The proceeds will be donated to charity funds. Admission 15c. Come all and let us have a nice social evening.

The Cheery Chums had their usual meeting on Monday night at the home of Mrs. D.R. and F. Swabey.

Miss E. McGee of Edmonton is a guest at Mrs. F. Swabey's home.

One more of our girls in this district has gone and done it. Miss Vivian Barnes is now Mrs. Clark of Edmonton.

I had only to mention picnic last week and it rained. We need some more now. So, how about a picnic? I wonder if it will work this time?

NO RIDES ON TRUCKS

Attention of all truck owners and drivers is called by Mr. W. S. Campbell of Wartime Prices and Trade Board to the new regulations, forbidding truck drivers to carry passengers, unless in possession of a permit to do so. This applies even to employees of the truck owner, members of his family, or persons carried free.

Exception only is made when livestock is being carried, when owners of the livestock may be carried in the cab.

Persons requiring permits must apply to the Regional Director of Transport, Williamson Building, Edmonton, giving the name of owner, make, model, type, serial number and license number of the truck and full particulars of what the permit is required to cover.

The permit system is part of the plan to conserve gasoline and rubber for military needs by limiting non-essential motor travel.

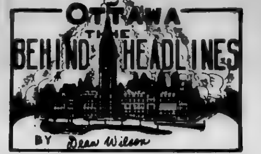
CANADIAN NATIONAL



It is a salient fact in well-informed circles along Parliament Hill that ever since the people of Canada and their representatives have spoken overwhelmingly in favour of releasing the Federal Government from any obligations arising out of past commitments restricting the means of raising men for overseas service, it has served to stimulate some political activities in the nation's capital rather than to settle the ingenuity of political designers at a most inopportune time.

News of such activities may tend to develop the idea in the mind of the man-in-the-street throughout Canada that the wagon of our war effort is hitched to several horses, each pulling in a different direction, where perhaps even the drivers do not know which road to take, but this impartial observer must report that this is not true in face of the latest political developments, and backstage on Parliament Hill a contrary view seems to prevail, with a greater degree of basic unity existing than may appear on the surface.

The people of Canada have spoken and the responsible leaders realize and recognize what the great majority of the masses want them to do. The total vote cast in the plebiscite left no doubt whatsoever on this point. Ontario voted 84 per cent in favour of all-out action; Prince Edward Island came next with 83 per cent; Manitoba had 81 per cent; British Columbia did it with 80 per cent; Nova Scotia had 79 per cent; Saskatchewan and Alberta were bracketed together with 73 per cent; New Brunswick gave approval with 71 per cent; Yukon had 68 per cent. The only exception was the Province of Quebec with only 28 per cent.

As a result, some startling developments have taken place and more may come soon. Nevertheless, the important thing to bear in mind for the man-in-the-street throughout this country is that much misunderstanding or distortion of the truth about the actions or attitudes of responsible French-Canadian leaders have followed this reaction in Quebec, particularly because this may mislead or may strike a wrong note in the harmony of their fellow-citizens in the other provinces at a time when wisdom and commonsense are most essential.

Markedly free from any trace of party politics or partisan appeals every French Canadian Minister in the Federal Government tried to carefully reason and to logically present the case for the removal of restrictions of the Government's past commitments on overseas military service in tune with the wishes of the great majority of the Canadian people. They were really guided by the principles contained in the words of their late leader, Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, who made an historic statement in Ottawa only a short time before his sudden death. "Above all, let us co-operate, get together, keep together, remain united, trust one another, preserve our fine union," he said. "When his country calls for it," continued the late Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, "a good citizen must assume his responsibilities even at the cost of discarding personal views." Even French-Canadian leaders in the purely provincial field came forth enthusiastically with similar pleas. Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec issued a strong warning to his compatriots. "Let the people of Quebec think well before they refuse Premier Mackenzie King's request," stated Premier Godbout. Indeed, every responsible French-Canadian leader directed the same pleas.

While every effort has been made to minimize the great disappointment over this attitude in the Province of Quebec, yet many French-Canadian leaders along Parliament Hill have not made a good job in concealing their own grave concern over this turn of events because these leaders sought desperately to clarify the present war situation to their compatriots, to stress the danger and to remove the deeply imbedded old beliefs, prejudices, or misunderstandings. Still these responsible leaders of French-Canada failed to accomplish their objective, and instead local agitators, particularly in rural districts, managed to sway a large percentage of the masses and to lead them astray by using mainly appeals to old prejudices or by reviving old misunderstandings.

The pleas of the responsible leaders were without effect on our fellow French-Canadian citizens. Why? Is there any explanation why the French Canadians refused to follow their responsible leaders whereas in the past they had always shown a definite and clear tendency to do so?

This impartial observer must state that behind the scenes on Parliament Hill it is held in well informed circles that there are two reasons. First, the sudden death of their most trusted, most influential and most beloved leader, the late Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, without anyone being able to replace him in the favour of the great masses, was a definite and strong contributing factor. Secondly, the educational campaign on this war issue was started far too late because it is absolutely impossible to uproot and to change deeply embedded beliefs and misunderstandings in such a short campaign. In fact, whereas only four weeks before the plebiscite statistics showed less than a 20 per cent affirmative vote in the Province of Quebec, yet the final results brought forth a more than 28 per cent affirmative vote, with some 45,000 more votes for the plebiscite. In other words a stronger [illegible] [illegible] and a longer educational campaign would easily and certainly have [illegible] [illegible] the actual [illegible] results in that old province.

Therefore, some Canadians, who are careless to spread at this time stories of disunion, political passions, or prejudices about responsible French-Canadian leaders must understand the conditions under which these French-Canadian leaders have to work in Ottawa. They must understand that these are actual conditions, not theories. They must understand that the complete merging of millions of people of two races speaking two different languages into one people of common sentiment and aspirations, common purposes and loyalty, and common confidence and interest in a united war effort, can be accomplished only by great patience, great diplomacy, and great tact of the highest possible order. They must understand that, under our democratic government and under a system of representation by population, French-Canadians do not represent a small and decreasing fraction of the people, but, due to the fecundity of the race and the constantly growing population, they are of sufficient numbers to earn a rising claim to recognition in public affairs, with the remark that whereas about fifty years ago only 54 out of 215 members of Parliament were French-Canadian, yet today this number is much larger in proportion out of the 245 members. Moreover while in the last fifty years French-Canadians had gained 12 seats, yet even with this increase they only had a 26 per cent representation in Parliament at a time when they were 30 per cent of the population, bearing in mind that this country is governed on the basis of representation by population.

Under these circumstances, the man-in-the-street throughout Canada cannot afford to ignore these facts about the situation of the responsible French-Canadian leaders along Parliament Hill.

THEY HAVE NOW!

One day while Marshall Field was still a small merchant he received from a little town in Iowa an order for 200 pairs of overalls, signed "P. H. Browne."

Grateful for this handsome piece of business, Mr. Field sent a pair of his finest overalls to the customer, with a note reading: "Wear these yourself with my personal compliments. Marshall Field."

A few days later he received a reply: "Gift received and appreciated. I cannot wear them, however, until styles change. Respectfully, Patricia Helen Browne."

PICNICS AND RAIN—

REALLY WE BELIEVE our Ministik correspondent had something when he recommended holding a picnic to bring on rain. No doubt like many others he can remember more than one picnic the joys of which hung in the balance. Pulled down by wet grass, dripping leaves and chilly atmosphere, and held up by thoughts of the good the moisture would do to the growing crops. To rural dwellers a drowned out picnic is rarely a total loss, but even so, a fine day is desired.

It would appear from casual observation that up to the present we have had a drier spring and early summer than usual. This is not borne out by the records. Last year up to June 3rd we had only received just over one half inch of rain. This year at the same date we have received 2.53 inches of rain. What made it appear drier than usual was a smaller reserve moisture in the soil from last fall, a relatively light winter's snowfall and its fairly early disappearance in the spring. The long time average from April 1st to June 3rd is 3.37 inches, so it would appear even if we are ahead of last year, we are behind as regards long time average. But with picnic time right here now, who can tell whether it will be wet or dry.

GAS STATIONS OPEN UNTIL NINE SATURDAYS—

THE RECENT RULING which permit gasoline stations in rural areas to stay open until nine o'clock one night each week will be received with much satisfaction. During the past two decades a very large majority of Canadian farmers have become accustomed to travel to and from their trading centre by automobile. It has also become commonplace in a great many small towns for the surrounding farmers to visit town Saturday night after the usual chores were finished. To many this meant after seven o'clock, the hour at which formerly gasoline stations ceased selling gasoline, and in order to purchase gasoline they were compelled to leave home one or two hours earlier than they otherwise would. Now with gasoline on sale in rural areas until nine o'clock one night each week, which in most cases will be Saturday, this night will continue to hold its popularity as a trip to town night for many rural dwellers.

THE FIXING OF PRICES

The Wartime and Prices and Trade Board in order to stop inflation in Canada are attempting to "set" the prices of all goods, commodities and products. This has been tried many times in the past, but it has never been successful because prices have always been "set" too rigidly and so in the end the plans broke down. The "set" prices usually broke down because the relationship between supply and demand changed and no longer warranted the prices that had been "set". In other words too much pressure accumulated behind the dam and either the price dam burst, or the prices ran over the top!

Mr. Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Prices and Trade Board, is evidently profiting by past experience for he has stated that he realizes that in order to increase the production of any scarce product such as flax, which is now badly needed, that a HIGHER price must be offered to increase supply.

This policy of arranging fluctuating prices will give the Government policy of price control a far better chance to succeed than past plans of a similar nature.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Gordon evidently realizes that while a price can be set and controlled that it must be changed from time to time to accord with the changing factors of supply and demand, otherwise essential war products may not be forthcoming.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

A Kentucky country editor, quoted in The Louisville Times, champions crisp-crusted strawberry shortcake and denounces "the soggy mixture of poundcake" so often offered instead. The genuine, bona fide strawberry shortcake, according to the Kentucky editor, "should be a sandwich, as it were, of ripe berries hiding their blushing beauty between layers of crisp pie crust." He adds: "The restaurateurs who dish up some dark and sad looking berries on a square of wet and sad tasting cake, should meet the fate of folk who sweeten cornbread. They should be banished 'north of the river' and be forced to eat cold bread and never see a hot biscuit." —Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

CANNING REGULATIONS UNCHANGED BY ORDER

New Sugar Rationing Cut Will Not Affect Preserving or Jam Making

Made necessary owing to transportation difficulties, the new sugar rationing order of May 26 cuts down the amount of sugar permitted each person from three-quarters of a pound to half a pound each week. This order does not affect the one issued earlier in regard to extra sugar for canning fruit. It is permissible to use one-half pound of sugar for each pound of fruit in canning or preserving, and three-quarters of a pound of sugar per pound of fruit for making jams and jellies.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, June 1— Buy your winter coal now and save needless suffering later. This is the gist of a message issued by Premier Aberhart this week after he had received a communication from the Federal Coal Administrator. Heavy demands on labor and transportation next fall and winter will make hazardous the mining and [illegible] of coal, Mr. Aberhart said, and it is imperative that miners be kept working now so as to avert a threatened famine. Declaring that rationing may be necessary, the Premier said that it was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of credit advances to [illegible] was [illegible] considered by Ottawa authorities.

V V V

Declaring that although "many of our splendid miners have joined the fighting forces or entered war industries" there were others still awaiting the re-opening of Alberta mines, Mr. Aberhart said. "If householders will buy their coal now for next winter many of the mines will open up, production will proceed at full capacity and when winter comes they will be better prepared to meet the heavier demands—particularly from outside markets."

V V V

Outside markets are tending to increase production of Alberta coal. Recent figures issued by the Department of Trade and Industry show that in the first two months of this year the output was 1,476,922 tons, valued at $4,211,279. This was 25 per cent higher than that of the same two months in 1941. Oil production also increased during the period, with 1,886,825 barrels valued at $2,604,165 showing a 36 per cent increase.

Appointment of O. S. Longman, B.S.A., to the position of Deputy Minister of Agriculture was announced by Hon. D. B. MacMillan last week. Mr. Longman, formerly Field Crops Commissioner, succeeds J. R. Sweeney who resigned his position at the minister's request. The new deputy has a long agricultural service with the province, and is recognized as an agricultural authority.

V V V

While Mr. Hanson, federal Conservative leader, was asking in the Commons that the Finance Minister do something to help Alberta pay her contractual obligations, final details of the imminent meeting of bondholders and government representatives here were being worked out. The total sum involved in the negotiations for refunding is $121,-000,000 approximately, of which $17,-[illegible],544 is held in Britain, payable in sterling.

The recent call for women trainees who will be fitted for work in war factories has brought a good response, according to J. I. Ross, Alberta supervisor of the youth training plan. A class of 100 is desired and about 20 women are applying weekly at Edmonton and Calgary, he said. Another phase of the youth training program receiving support is the Home Training Service, which offers free tuition in household economics and management to applicants, and assists in finding positions for graduates.

V V V

Welcome rains brought respite from the fire hazard and gave fighters a chance to control a forest fire in the Whitecourt area, it was stated by T. F. Blefgen, provincial director of forestries. A crew of 60 fought the fire to a finish, and were engaged in mopping up.

Appointment of Alfred Speakman, M.L.A., and leader of the Independent group in the Legislature to the House Committee investigating conditions under The Workmen's Compensation Act is announced. Mr. Speakman succeeds the late D. M. Duggan, M.L.A. Under the chairmanship of Dr. J. L. Robinson, the Committee also included J. W. Beaudry, K.C., M.L.A. and Frank Laut, M.L.A. A call for submissions has been made.

V V V

Alberta's speed-up program of teacher training is already under way, and 28 potential high school teachers are busily engaged in studies which will permit them to go to small high schools of the province by October of this year. Twenty of the students have already graduated as Batchelors of Arts, and they are eligible for senior high school certificates. The remainder are undergraduates who may take junior certificates. First normal students will shortly begin their specialized training when outstanding candidates are selected for the initial training period which will permit their going to rural schools for a short session when they open in September.

COMMUNICATION

[To The Editor]

In the last copy of the Mercury, the writer of the Lindbrook news states:

Re the Ladies' Nursing Class, "not much accomplished"—"only organization matters". This party was ill-informed and we hope our instructress, Mrs. D. E. Wilson, does not feel hurt.

A large attendance was present and Lesson No. 1 was fully dealt with. The enrolled members learned to take Thermometer readings, Pulse and Respiration, How to keep a chart for the patient and various other interesting information regarding diptheria, etc. Altogether it was a very successful afternoon.

It probably should be explained it was difficult to come to an agreement over time of meeting, some ladies saying they were just too busy for the afternoon meeting.

Mr. Broomgirdle offered to change the V.V.R. night to assist them and thus both the ladies and the men's meeting will be held on Tuesday evenings at 8:30 p.m., weekly at the Lindbrook Community Hall. A meeting on Gas, Tires and Time.

"A Lindbrook Lady."

LINDBROOK

It is not unusual to hear of humans kicking, they are usually so equipped this way, but in the last week it seems that the horses have taken on this job too, quite literally. Two of our men here have been kicked rather severely this last week. One is Mr. [illegible], and the other Mr. Wilfred LaRocque. Mr. Law[illegible] [illegible] we believe is carrying on as best he can even with the leg being in a cast. Mr. LaRocque went up to the Misericordia hospital, Edmonton for observation. [illegible] Mr. Law is back home [illegible] on duty.

The rain was a veritable blessing and has altered the complexion of things considerably. So we won't kick, but leave it to the horses to do.

L/Cpl. [illegible] Barry [illegible] Highlanders was here on leave for a few days. He was accompanied by his wife, nee Miss Chessie R[illegible].

The Free Show at the Hall last Friday was very well attended and was of the usual high order. Messrs. Richardson, Hechen and Morden spoke in the intervals. Mr. Richardson outlining in detail the Salvage Drive, Mr. Hechen on the same subject, also stating that old or used gramaphone records (not the cylindrical ones) were badly needed to convert into ear and mouth pieces for aviators when up in the below zero air to be found at great heights. He stated that he was prepared to buy same, so if you have any, bring them to the elevator or get in touch with him. Mr. Morden also spoke on the Salvage Drive and we see that quite a pile of old rubber tires, etc., is beginning to show up outside the store. The next show is Friday, June 26th and will probably be the last for awhile. So, see you then.

Mrs. Pete Strand and two children of Heath, Alta., is visiting her father, Mr. LaRocque Sr., at his home here. Also staying with him is his grandson, Robert Bow[illegible] of Edmonton.

The Nursing class held their weekly meeting in the Hall on Tuesday evening and quite a large number of ladies were present.

The V.V.R. had their weekly parade on Tuesday night, and this time it was held just outside the Hall. The turn-out was as large, if not larger than ever, and as keen as ever. Several new members joined, and the latest group was issued with hats and arm bands. This parade was the first held with arms: i.e., rifles, 22 rifles, shotguns, brooms, and poles, and it was the introduction to practically all, bar the 4 vets to the "Manual of Arms" and it was wonderful how quickly the boys picked it up. They're getting better every time and if they keep on at this rate, we shall not be afraid to parade with any of them. We understand that the Fultonvale VVR [illegible] for a softball game with our unit. The following are the orders for next Tuesday, June 9th, 8 p.m. Unit will parade at the Hall. First part of evening, instruction by Section Leaders. Second part of evening, Platoon drill under Platoon Sergt. Dress: Mufti with arm bands and caps. Equipment: Rifles, shotguns or equivalents. (no ammunition).

CHILDREN'S SCRAP BOOK

Bright and early one Saturday morning a cameraman dropped in on "The Children's Scrapbook" in CBC's Toronto studios, [illegible] to see what Peggy and her friends really look like. Bulbs flashing, cameras clicked, and here are the results!

Upper row, left to right: Mr. Wister, the man who always makes things seem (really Doug Masters); Bing (Byng Whittaker) and Austin (Willie) laugh at a funny bit in the script. Music-maker Paul (Isidor Scherman) and Percy—he calls it Percy, but his real name's Bud Knapp—gaze in wonder and admiration at the erudite Miss Bookworm, who's known to her friends and intimates as [illegible] Ralston; Peggy (Peggy Loder), Mary Grannan, supervisor of children's Broadcasts for the CBC and producer Sydney S. Brown hold a script conference before the rehearsal.

"The Children's Scrapbook", now in its third season is heard on the national network of the CBC and in the United States over stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System, every Saturday at 11:30 a.m. CDT (10:30 a.m. MDT).

Who Are These Birds Without Wings?

A feature designed to acquaint the general public with the work and duties of the "Ground Crew" in the Royal Canadian Air Force

The Aero Engine Mechanic may be a "Bird Without Wings" but it is a certainty that the Birds With Wings would be helpless to fly without his particular skill and knowledge.

The A.E.M. as he is known, is responsible for the upkeep of the aircraft engine and all its components. Every pilot is aware of the trust and confidence he must place in his mechanic to be successful in his exploits. That the A.E.M. must have an extensive knowledge to carry out his duties successfully, is a known fact. But further to that, the rapid advancement made in the field of Aero Engine design makes him a constant student of his work.

He must be ready at any time to accept new developments as if he had dealt with them all his life. Then too, dealing as he is with ignition, carburation, supercharging, lubrication and the multitude of other details which are necessary to the operation of the modern power plant, he becomes a veritable walking encyclopedia on aero engines.

His work takes him from "radial" air cooled engines to "in-line" liquid cooled engines, sometimes in the space of minutes. It may be the power plant of a tiny Moth, the Merlin engine of a Hurricane Fighter or the four motors of a huge Sunderland Flying Boat, but whatever the engine or type, the A.E.M. must be capable of completely servicing, overhauling, repairing or adjusting it.

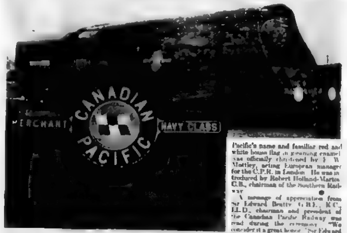
Closely allied with the Aero Engine Mechanic is the Air Frame Mechanic. The A.F.M. has the responsibility for the upkeep of the airframe and its numerous components. For him this entails a knowledge of aircraft construction, hydraulics, fabrics, paints, dopes, metals, theory of flight, and other details too numerous to mention.

Rapid improvements in aircraft construction and design add to the difficulties of the A.F.M. and like the A.E.M. he must keep right up to date at all times.

The serviceability state of an aircraft is also attended to by the A.F.M. before it is permitted to take-off. It is here his judgement must be unerring and his inspection most meticulous so that not the slightest flaw or damage is passed unnoticed.

The Aero Engine and Air Frame mechanics also form a part of the ground crew when flying is taking place. They are required for refuelling, warming up the engines, assisting the aircrew any way that may be necessary, see to it that parked aircraft do not hinder operations and last but not least, see that the aircraft are placed under cover when no longer required for operations.

General H. H. Arnold has paid the following tribute to the mechanics: "Examine the roll of the flying dead and you'll find as many mechanics as pilots. Yet their names are forgotten. Others get the adulation, the praise, the medals, the commendations. You can't name the mechanic whose work make possible the prominent flights, although the pilot's names are household words. If I didn't have full confidence in my mechanic I'd be a foot soldier. If they weren't reliable it would be too dangerous to fly. So I say to you little mechs: My helmet's off to you. You may be ragged little grease monkeys to some, but you're the guardian angel of this flying business. You're the real air heroes!"



Engine Bears Canadian Name On Britain's Southern Railway

THIS newest and smartest of British locomotives, the fifth in the new "Merchant Navy" series built and operated by the Southern Railway, was appropriately named "Canadian Pacific" at a ceremony recently in Victoria Station, London, in the presence of a guard of honor and officials of both the Canadian Pacific and the Southern Railways. The latter company, one of Britain's great railways, conceived the happy idea of naming each of these engines after one of the steamship companies serving the port of Southampton, peacetime berth of the Canadian Pacific's great white Empresses which in war-time camouflage are now acquitting themselves with notable gallantry.

The powerful new locomotive whose streamlined sides bear the Canadian Pacific's name and familiar red and white house flag in gleaming enamel was officially christened by J. W. Mottley, acting European manager for the C.P.R. in London. He was introduced by Robert Holland-Martin, C.B., chairman of the Southern Railway.

A message of appreciation from Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., K.C., LL.D., chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway was read during the ceremony. "We consider it a great honor," Sir Edward said, "to have a Southern Railway locomotive designated 'Canadian Pacific' and look upon it as a tribute to the men of our own fleet who have lost their lives at sea or are still serving heroically."

A glimpse of the "Canadian Pacific" appears above, while inset is shown the engine's glittering nameplate with the chequered house flag of the company's steamships. Designed for both passenger and freight service the new engine will be clad in "battledress" for the duration after which it will appear in the glamorous green that characterises the Southern Railway's engines in peacetime.

Former Tofield Girls To Operate Hotel In North Country

Big business in the barren lands is beckoning Pauline and Annie Audienko, two Canadian girls who are going to Aklavik, a tiny settlement on the edge of the Arctic Circle to operate a hotel.

There they will sell baked goods to Eskimos and fur traders. They estimate that each day they will make and sell 100 pies (at a dollar each), 100 loaves of bread (at 25c a loaf) and 1000 doughnuts (at 50c a dozen).

This is their second trip to Aklavik. They went there in 1937 to work in a hotel and liked it so well that they stayed nearly three years. For the last six months the girls have been working in Calgary, Alberta—Pauline in a department store and Annie at a hotel to— get enough money to finance their trip.

They figure that the journey will take a month. They are undecided how long they will stay, but have bought enough clothing to last two years. Their shopping was complicated by the fact that while the Calgary stores were displaying summer clothes they were looking for ski suits, sweaters and heavy shoes.

"Life in the far North is far from monotonous," says Annie. "There's always someone dropping in, even if it's only an Eskimo looking for a good meal. During our last stay at Aklavik we met Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir, Sir Hubert Wilkins and several other important people.
—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Many Tofielders will remember Annie and Pauline Audienko who spent a good part of their school days here, living with their parents who operated the livery stable for some time. The best wishes of all their friends in Tofield go with them in their new venture in the north country.

KETCHAMOOT

Mrs. Harold Smith returned from the hospital Tuesday and is now recuperating at the home of her mother, Mrs. Geo. Lawson.

Mr. Jerry Gallegar of the Peace River district spent several days at the home of his aunt, Mrs. O. McMullen, and cousins, the Coombe's. This was his first trip down to our district in 27 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lawson and family were Sunday guests of Mrs. Lawson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Brown sr.

We see Gladys Coombes riding the old gray mare to Bardo school these days, a distance of 4 or 5 miles night and morning.

Mrs. L. Carlisle entertained the Ladies' Aid at her home in town Thursday afternoon of last week. A splendid turn out of members and visitors was present.

Ketchamoot folks seen at the McKenzie picnic on Wednesday of last week were Mr. John McGinitie, Conrad Lee, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears and Gary.

Mrs. A. J. Harrison visited her mother who is very ill at the Lamont hospital, a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Jack and Dawn of Edmonton spent a few days at the Schultz home last week.

Miss Margaret Mitchell of Edmonton spent Sunday at the parental home. She accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Morrison down from the city who visited friends at Tofield.

Mr. Alvin Schultz visited his wife and son at Leduc over the week end.

There was quite keen competition between the school children the past week when they staged a rubber salvage drive. A huge pile of old rubber was collected. We believe Ella Brown got the most points and Billie Mitchell 2nd. But all are to be congratulated on their good work, especially the teacher, Miss Kelly.

At the Ladies' Aid meeting, after some discussion, it was decided to hold the Ketchamoot picnic this year. It will be held on Wednesday, July 8th, with everything the same as former years. Chicken dinner and supper will be held, refreshments at the stand with the exception of ice cream. Committees are: Sport, Harold Schultz, Stanley and Charley Sears and Jimmie Ingram. Grounds: Martin Lawson, Roy Williams, Donald Carlisle and Donnely McGinitie and all their helpers be on hand. Members please provide the same as former years, other donations thankfully received from the other ladies. Stand committee, John Brown, Roy Lee and Lonnie McGinitie. TENNIS NOTES

Did you know that the tennis court is a very popular place to spend those long hot evenings that we are having just now? How about getting your racket and joining the crowd.

The beef trust, (and that doesn't mean Bert) are thinking seriously of charging admission when they play their scheduled game this week. We don't know, but we think it would be worth an admission charge just to hear the puffs and groans. P.S. We didn't know how to spell groan so looked it up in the dictionary and found that it means "to breathe deeply from pain or sorrow" so, when the above mentioned groans are heard it will probably be from sorrow more than pain, at not having gotten that one over the net.

* * *

Quite a memorable game was held at the courts last week when Mr. McDonnell and Lloyd Gauthier played Doctor Caldwell and Miss Ann Klernik. You remember in the good old days when those chess games used to last on for a week or more? Well, these players tried to put tennis in the same category. They played 25 games but hadn't decided who was the winner of the set.

* * *

We left Bert and Art playing a game of singles Sunday night but tempers must have stayed on an even plane in spite of the hard looks, as we did not see any smoke rising from the courts later on.

* * *

For those who are having any difficulty with their gardens growing, we recommend planting dandelions. They will come up in any kind of weather and in any kind of soil. If you don't believe it ask the man that looks after the courts.

VICTIM?

A young matron of our acquaintance, taking first-aid training, has reached the resuscitation stage. One evening recently, returning from a Red Cross meeting, she observed a man, on a darkened side street, sprawled face downward.

"Aha," thought the matron, "Providence has sent me hither to minister to this poor unfortunate." Parking her car nearby, she rushed over and began giving the treatment for resuscitation.

Presently the man stirred, looked up, and spoke with great difficulty: "Lady," he said, "I don't know what you're up to, but I wish you'd quit tickling me. I'm holding a lantern for a guy workin' down in this manhole."

Good Sports Day Meeting Held Friday

On Friday last, at the Town Hall an interested group met to decide upon and arrange for the Annual July 1st sports program.

W. Worton was in the chair and requested an expression of opinion as to whether a 1942 sports day should be held. It was the unanimous decision of those present that a July 1st celebration be held and organization be proceeded with. This was formally embodied in a motion sponsored by Rev. Allan and A. E. Allan. It was pointed out that while we are living under trying circumstances some recreation is necessary to maintain a balance. Moreover, [illegible] organizations profit by the event.

Organization was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:

President, E. Kallal jr.; Vice-Pres., W. Bellamy; Sec.-Treas., J. E. Stinson.

Baseball Committee: Father Schmeltzer, Frank Johnsrud

Softball Committee: Cons. R. James, with power to add.

Bicycle Races: J. Merton, with power to add.

Hot Dog Stand: W. Bellamy, Bert Everitt.

Horseshoes: W. C. Billman, F. McHeffey.

Grounds: T. Wallington.

Dance Committee: W. M. McDonnell, A. E. Allan, Orten McGuire.

Advertising: J. E. Stinson, W. Worton.

The amount of prize money apportioned to the different events is as follows: Baseball $35.00; Softball $35.00; bicycle races $30.00; Foot races, $10.00; Horseshoes $5.

It was decided to get a public address system if possible, $12.50 being allowed for this service.

Some discussion centred around the gate admission figures, and it was decided to continue with the same admission prices as have prevailed for the past few years, namely, all under 16 free, over 16 admission at the gate 25c. Cars free. Admission to dance, which it is expected, will be held in the Variety Theatre will be Gents 75c, Ladies 35c.

The booth on the grounds will be operated by the Red Cross Association and total net proceeds of the day from all sources will be turned over to that organization.

Given fine weather a good day should result. The attendance has been gradually increasing for some years and July 1st, 1942, at Tofield promises to be just as enjoyable or more so than previous years.

TOFIELD BASEBALL TEAM WINS AGAINST McKENZIE

Last Sunday the Tofield baseball team beat McKenzie 12-8 at the Tofield diamond. It was a free scoring fixture with many errors committed by both sides. Tofield ran up a 9 run lead in the first inning which they never lost. Despite the errors some fine plays were made at third base by both Conrad Lee of the locals and Jack Jones of McKenzie. The batteries were: Tofield, Johnsrud and Berild; McKenzie, R. Donald and Jess Jones. McKenzie had previously beaten Tofield 5-2 at the McKenzie sports last Wednesday.

This Sunday Dodds comes to Tofield for a return game. The game will start at about 2:30 p.m. and a good turnout is expected. Come out anyway, whether you want to cheer or not.

The Week In Edmonton

Among the speakers addressing the 38th annual convention of the Union of Alberta Municipalities in Calgary June 25 and 26 will be Premier Aberhart, Hon. Lucien Maynard, Minister of Municipal Affairs, Dr. Robert Newton, President of the University of Alberta. While the Government members are expected to speak on governmental topics, Dr. Newton has announced he will speak on reconstruction.

Civil servants not eligible for holidays with pay because they have been in the service less than one year, will suffer no financial loss through attendance at military camp as members of the Reserve Army. An order-in-council passed this week provides for the government making up the difference between army pay and salary lost through attendance at camp. A similar order was passed last year. Shuffling of holiday dates to permit other employees to attend camp is a feature of the order's provisions

Passenger car licenses issued this year now total 87,000 according to government figures. During the fiscal year ended March 31, the total was 96,000. Drivers' licenses this year to date total 120,000, compared with the record total of 155,000 in the last fiscal year

More than 100 Alberta farm young people are attending the annual Farm Week at the University under sponsorship of the Department of Extension. Boys are studying agriculture and girls domestic science and nursing. Their activities include tours of inspection in the city. Two scholarships will be awarded during the week.

The provincial government is applying for the acreage reduction bonus under the federal Wheat Acreage Reduction Act of 1942, it is shown by an order-in-council passed this week. The order appoints a staff member to make formal application on behalf of the province. The lands and mines department has a large number of leases and permits, and in cases where a leaseholder has reduced acreage, the federal act provides that the landlord may receive not more than one-third of the bonus.

The provincial department of public works is planning to clear a 20 mile stretch of road west of Grande Prairie to enable drilling equipment to be moved to oil projects close to the B.C. border. At Peace River, Hon. W. A. Fallow announced that work will also be carried out on the Grimshaw-Fairview section, Grande Prairie to Beaverlodge, and Spirit River to Dunvegan. The minister flew to the north country.

Warning that a butter shortage may be expected this fall was voiced by D. H. McCallum, provincial dairy commissioner. Shortage of farm labor, gasoline restrictions, feed and pasture scarcity were given as reasons for the shortage expected. Declaring that Canada is behind in her commitments, the commissioner urged greater production of quality dairy produce for the British market.

WAR TIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

[illegible]

Under a new plan of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to ensure adequate supplies of beef at home, while giving beef producers the equivalent of the export price for their cattle, Canada is now divided into fifteen zones. In each zone, wholesale prices will be set by a Food Corporation, headed by the Food Administrator, Hon. Gordon Taggart. These prices will be adjusted from time to time with seasonal variations. Retail prices will be based on the laid-down prices, plus the mark-up established by the retailer for similar cuts and quality during the basic period

All of Alberta south of the 55th parallel, excluding stations on the C.N.R. west of Edson and Lovett, and on the C.P.R. west of Bankhead, are placed in Zone 12. The above-exempted stations are placed in Zone 13 which includes all the interior towns in British Columbia.

SAVING ON WIRE FENCES

Because a single-strand electrically-charged wire on light stakes around a square mile of pasture gives a saving of 84,480 feet of barbed wire, weighing 3,200 pounds, over an ordinary five-strand barbed wire fence, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has arranged a priority for manufacturers of electric controllers, for use on such fences

To give a sharp, harmless shock to any animal that touches the wire, each enclosure must have a controller—a mechanical device that operates a condenser coil from a six-volt dry battery

Over 25,000 electric fences were built in Canada last year, and with the heavy demand for cattle and hogs, more will be needed this year The saving in barbed wire in fencing a square mile of pasture gives enough to snare many a German or a Jap, or provides steel enough to make 100 Bren guns. There is a saving too on the number and strength of the posts required.

CATCHING A THIEF

Mr. Walter S. Campbell, Regional Representative in Alberta for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board points out that the ration regulations make it compulsory that ration books must be produced before gasoline is given out. Service station operators must satisfy themselves that the vehicle for which gasoline is requested is the one described on the ration book.

There are penalties for non-observance of the regulations and there are advantages in observing them. A stolen automobile was identified by a sharp-eyed woman attendant in Alberta two weeks ago, when the thief tried to get gasoline for it without producing the coupon-book.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

PRAIRIE SPINNING & WEAVING

I have just returned from observing the farm home weaving classes and circles now being sponsored by the Searle Grain Company. I found that our prairie women of all races are most keenly interested in learning the art of weaving. Here and there I heard of a few women who already are spinning and weaving. I visited several of these—one fine weaver was 86 years of age—in company with one of the world's most experienced teachers of weaving. The teacher was greatly impressed with the high quality of the spinning and weaving work being done by our prairie women. She suggested it would be a nice thing if some one could compile the names and addresses of all the farm women who are now spinning and weaving so that they might be encouraged in the good work they are doing with this useful and beautiful art.

If my friends, therefore, who read this column know of any such farm women and girls in their vicinity who are spinning, or who are weaving on their own looms, I should be grateful if they would let me have the names and addresses of such persons, and I will see that they are given some encouragement in their worthwhile work.

MAY REVOLUTIONIZE CANADIAN FARMING

A mission to Canada to be undertaken shortly by a Scots professor of rural economy may have the most far-reaching consequences for the Dominion's agricultural industry after the war.

The professor of rural economy is Dr. J. A. Watson, son of a Scots tenant farmer, who has just been appointed agricultural adviser to the High commissioner for the United Kingdom in Canada, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, the first appointment of the kind ever made. His mission, as he told me in an interview, is to do what he can in North America to bring producers together so that no longer shall there be a food shortage and malnutrition in some countries while good food the farmer produces has to be destroyed in others.

"We have been on the job of producing food for human consumption for the past 7,000 years," he said. "We have made such technical progress all that time that today we have reached a point where we can literally supply the needs of everyone in the world.

"We have improved machinery. We have bred better cattle. We have brought new plants into existence and developed the food value of others. So that today we can abolish if we wish not only want and malnutrition, which is widespread, but provide for everyone.

"We have got to this stage only within the last 30 years. And now we who study agriculture and its possibilities are suffering from a sense of frustration because while there is that poverty and malnutrition we are told the food we can produce is not wanted.

"We can achieve what the Atlantic Charter calls for, but if we are to do so we must get world producers together and remove present divergencies and misunderstandings.

SALE OF WAR SAVINGS STAMPS TO BE PRESSED

Ottawa, June 6— More than 90,000 retail dealers across Canada are soon to be asked to pledge themselves to press the sale of War Savings Stamps for the duration of the war as representatives of the National War Finance Committee, it was announced here by George W. Spinney, chairman.

Pledgees will receive official window signs confirming them in their appointment as representatives of the Committee which is charged with selling the idea of thrift to Canadians through the regular purchase of war savings stamps and certificates.

Mr. Spinney explained that if the sale of War Savings stamps had not been what might be called a "total war" scale thus far, one of the adverse factors was that in many cases people had to go some distance to get them. To overcome this, the aid of the responsible merchants of Canada was being enlisted and their obvious pre-campaign interest was of good augury, according to Mr. Spinney.

Having due regard to the increased incomes of many wage and salary earners in the Dominion, it was pointed out by Mr. Spinney that it was the duty of the National War Finance Committee to see that no means should be overlooked to remind Canadians of the twofold investment in every purchase of war savings stamps or certificates,—thrift and a stake in victory.

SYNTHETIC RUBBER—

FROM THE MOMENT the Japanese obtained control of the natural rubber growing areas in the East Indies it was apparent that a great transformation as regards transportation on the American continent would take place. One did not need to be equipped with facts and figures as regards crude rubber imports, it was sufficient to know that the supply, to all practical purposes the total supply, had been cut off at the source. The natural consequence was the freezing of indiscriminate tire sales, thus conserving what rubber there was available for the most essential uses.

The next step was a quick search for sources of synthetic rubber, but while the loss of natural rubber areas occurred six months ago, so far, at least so far as is publicly known, no appreciable tonnage of synthetic rubber has been rolling out of plants or mills. On the contrary, discussions are still taking place and differences of opinion being expressed in the United States as to the best method of making synthetic rubber. Here in Canada, we seem to be watching the United States for a lead.

Making synthetic rubber from alcohol distilled from grain has been mentioned quite frequently of late, in fact we seem to remember recently publishing an article to the effect that the cost of rubber produced this way, was prohibitive. A layman cannot be expected to pass judgment on technical questions but there does seem to be a clash of interests somewhere in the synthetic rubber problm. Speaking in Chicago on June 5th, Alf M. Landon, Kansas oil operator and 1936 Republican presidential nominee, said:

> "the government could solve the rubber shortage and the farm problem at the same time by making rubber not from petroleum, but from alcohol produced from grain. I do not think I am taking any shingles off my own roof, because in the long run the oil industry would benefit by the greatest prosperity the farmers ever knew."

The continent of North America is peopled by a travel minded population. The present generation has been raised to the auto and while perhaps a curtailment of purely pleasure riding is desirable, the fact remains that almost the whole population of a continent will have to partially change its mode of life unless the rubber problem is solved. But this is not the important feature, most important of all, the armed forces and the factories that supply them must be kept supplied with rubber. Canada still has a wheat surplus, but contrary to the liability we once thought it was, it is becoming more and more an asset. In a world that seems bent upon destruction, a large surplus of anything is desirable and a surplus of a valuable foodstuff more desirable still.

Alf M. Landon urges the rapid production of synthetic rubber from grain alcohol and the construction of plants close to fields of supply. Surely Canada fills the bill here. With wide sweeps of prairie coupled with a wheat growing and wheat handling technique second to none in the world, the industry awaits just such an opportunity for expansion. It is a big problem and it is a delicate problem. In the installation of plants there are bound to be mistakes, corrections and changes before maximum efficiency is reached. And it is quite possible that even when expensive buildings and plants have made synthetic rubber production possible, with the coming of peace, the natural product would undersell the synthetic variety, thus rendering the plants obsolete.

To us it appears to be a government problem. First to make sure the process is feasible and practical, bearing in mind all possible factors and then get busy on construction. The problem is an immediate supply of rubber.

MINISTIK

News for week ending Sat., June 6

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clark of Edmonton were visiting Mrs. Clark's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Barnes last week end.

There was a good turn out at church on Sunday, about 60 people being present. We have just bought 20 new hymn books but I guess we shall have to get some more. Our preacher, Mr. A. Carr was very well pleased and he hopes it will continue the rest of the summer. Mr. Carr took a service at South Cooking Lake at 3 o'clock and will do so every other Sunday.

The well digger, Mr. Eaton, was at A. Kleinschroth's place last week. They got a good well at 70 feet with 25 feet of water.

Mr. J. Heintz has the outfit at his place now. He says the lake has gone out so far now that he had to have a well.

The next meeting of the Cheery Chum Girl's club will be held at the home of Mrs. D.R. and F. Swabey next Monday night.

The young people are having a get together on Tuesday evening at Barnes' Beach. There will be a weiner roast and a sing song. Of course the older folks are welcome too.

The ratepayers' meeting held at the school on Monday night was well attended. It was decided to close our school for a year and send the children by bus to Fultonvale, where the Dept. is building a new school this summer. Some of the old timers were sure sorry to have their school closed.

Miss Smith, our teacher, forwarded $32.25 as this district's donation to the Red Cross Drive. She was well pleased with the response of the people of this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Hennessy paid a visit to Leduc last week and to see their daughter Jean who is at school there.

LINDBROOK

The heat and dry winds of late have been very trying to everything, humans, plant life and live stock, and if no rain appears soon it looks as if the hay crop will be short this year. Picnics have been spoke of here, but the "oracle" doesn't seem to work here as it does in Ministik. Lucky place! They did get rain. No, it looks as if someone has got to take out a mower and cut a lot of clover or alfalfa. That might turn the trick.

We understand that the attendance at the picture show "The Royal Visit" and other films, given at the school last week in aid of the children's annual picnic fund barely met expenses, if it did that. The attendance was small. This is just too bad for it seems that no money is granted for these affairs from the larger school unit, as was the case in former years when a small grant was given by the local boards, so as things look, it doesn't look any too bright for the picnic. But we guess that ways and means will be found and all will turn out O.K.

The school grounds and sports equipment have been undergoing a re-juvenation at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson and their pupils recently.

The school has new curtains at windows; new pictures and new paint inside; whilst window boxes filled with plants adorn the outside of the windows. The games equipment has been painted and a new bicycle rack built, and trees and plants beautify what up to now has been a bare, desolate looking place. And to let all know what school it is, the name is on stones white-washed, on the bank in front of the school ground. Also a lawn has been sown.

The V.V.R. turned out in strength last Tuesday evening, 41 being on parade, with 10 juveniles being taught the rudiments of drill by Gnr. Norman of the R.C.A. active army who is on leave and kindly offered his services. Arms drill under section leader occupied the first part of the evening and the boys are making real progress too. The second part was platoon drill under both platoon leader and Sergt., and a little route march on the highway with both march discipline and at ease enlivened the proceedings. So all in all, it was a pleasant and profitable evening. Two new recruits were signed on and as before mentioned 10 juveniles are anxious to join the unit. The next parade is next Tuesday, 8:30 p.m. at the Hall. Arms will be brought as usual, and if you have extra guns, bring them to loan to those not having any.

British Airman Bids Goodbye To The South

[Christian Science Monitor]

Part of the RAF is training in the United States—mainly in small towns in the south. One of the British boys who trained at the flying school near Montezuma, Ga., wrote the following letter to the Montezuma Citizen & Georgian when he left, addressed "To the People of Montezuma." It reveals the depth of his feeling about what the little Southern town and its people had meant to him.

It is not easy to say good by. It is like a cold wind that has crept into the room, driving away the warmth that was there a moment before.

By the time that you read this I shall have left the United States of America But I did not want to go without saying a few words to you about what it has meant to me to have been here and to have lived among you, and in that way to express my thanks for all that you have done for us here. For Montezuma has been for me, as I know it has for others, something more than a name, something more than rather a beautiful place where one finds watermelon and fried chicken. Montezuma has come to mean something very like home.

And so as I leave here it is not only of the big cities and the lights and the cars and all the other indications of an advanced civilization that I am thinking; but it is of a small town with green trees and pleasant houses and the kindest people on earth, a town which in many ways is like an English village, which has opened its arms to us all, and where I have been happy these past few weeks. Far from the noise and din and the incessant, insistent bustle of a large city, you go upon your ways with peace and with ease among yourselves; and in the midst of a world that is torn by strife and conflicting ideologies, in a world racked by intolerance and greed, in a world that has been turned upside down by the indescribable, maniacal cruelty . . in a world of chaos and bombs and war from which we have come, the peace and the contentment and the calm that we have found here has come to have a very special meaning.

Here, for all too short a time, I felt as if I had stumbled again out of the darkness upon all those things that make life worth living. One tended perhaps, when surrounded by war and rumours of wars, to lose sight of that art of living which you have so rightly cultivated Perhaps, too, you will never quite know how we felt when we experienced those moments of peace and quiet away from it all which showed us more than ever before the true things for which we are fighting; how the kindness with which we have been met here, and the hospitality of your people will remain with us forever.

You have, I think, in Montezuma, an ideal worth fighting for, worth dying for. And as I was driven about your town, and made friendships which have meant such a lot to me, as I went to your Sunday School and your church, saw the impressive opening of your school, and lived among you, I felt completely at home and I thought that I would like to have a house here for my own and live my life upon your model. That is the highest compliment that I can say to you. And it was not given idly. In fact, so well have you done your job of making us feel almost a part of your own families that I left Montezuma with an undeniable lump in my throat and an unquenchable tear in my eye, and an aching pain deep in my heart.

I shall remember sitting on the porch of a house, rocking myself in one of those quaint chairs that you have. A kitten lay asleep upon my lap. There was no sound save the talk of the crickets that came to me through the darkness. The stars nodded silently in the sky. They knew. From their seats on high they can see all over the world. And as they see the bloodshed and the brutality that are going on elsewhere, they must look kindly upon you. And so I caught a glimpse of peace again, peace from war, so that I could sit again like this in the darkness, alone, and have no fear. Perhaps you will see now why Montezuma has meant so much.

And if I might, without impertinence, venture one word further about you, it is to say that I hope you will never cease to tend the very pleasant garden that you have made here for yourselves. The sun is shining on Montezuma now. May the cloak of darkness and of tyranny be ever from it so that when on some future and very happy day I come again to Montezuma I shall leave it then as I leave it now, forever in my heart. Good night. JOHN [illegible]

THE WIRELESS ELECTRICAL MECHANIC

Seldom talked or written of is the Wireless Electrical Mechanic, and yet, the successful operation and safe return of aircraft is no less dependent upon him than upon the airframe or aero engine mechanic.

Being responsible for the wireless equipment both in an aircraft and on the ground, he must have an extensive knowledge of wireless theory. Numerous types of equipment are in use today and he must be familiar with their construction in order to locate and remedy any trouble that may develop.

The Wireless Mechanic, prior to the flight of an aircraft, tests fully all electrical equipment in connection with the radio apparatus. Should an electrician not be available, he is then responsible for all remaining electrical equipment in the aircraft, including navigation lights, landing lights, warning horns, magnetors, electric motors and generators and a portion of the bombing gear. He must also check remote control gun firing apparatus and electrical circuits in Reflector Sights.

The average aircraft contains a great many electrical circuits which must function properly before the aeroplane is in flight as repairs by the pilot or a member of the crew would be practically impossible in the air. The electrical circuits being normally built into the craft, are not readily accessible while in flight and for this reason the importance of a thorough check-up on the ground by the wireless mechanic will be readily understood.

In addition to his knowledge of theory and construction of wireless apparatus, the W.E.M. must be able to take his place at the key and tap out a message in morse, use the signal lamps and the semaphore flags. He must be thoroughly conversant with the Direction Finding loop by which navigators chart their position by radio when visibility renders other methods useless.

Ground stations must also be serviced by the W.E.M. and his knowledge must be extensive enough to set up and operate a sending and receiving station any place that operations may require its use.

All in all the Wireless Mechanic has a most important role in the Air Force today and as radio and its varied uses is still in its infancy, the enterprising mechanic is constantly experimenting for improvements. His experiments are of a most interesting nature and a discovery to him is like a direct hit to the observer or a Messerschmidt to the [illegible]

He hurried to the revenue office and paid up, but couldn't help commenting on the fact he had received no first notice. "We ran out of first notices," the tax man explained. "Anyway, the second notices work better."

COMMUNICATION

HEALTH DISTRICT NOTE

Dear Householder.

The disgraceful condition of the lanes and much of the vacant property in the Town of Tofield is a continual source of annoyance to the immediate neighbors, and of constant complaints to the Health Department.

This letter is therefore written in an endeavour to stop the nuisance.

ATTENTION IS CALLED TO THE FOLLOWING

1. Depositing of refuse of any kind on lanes and vacant lots is contrary to law.

2. Garden refuse, while not actually insanitary, is unsightly, and provides an excellent harbourage and breeding place for mice and rats.

No garbage should be dumped on any private or public property, but should be placed in a water-proof and fly-proof garbage cans, and removed to the nuisance grounds as often as necessary.

4. Your maid or other employee may be dumping refuse unknown to you. You will be held responsible at law for such action by your employee.

5. When the responsible party cannot be found, the unfortunate owner of the property is obliged to clean up the whole mess. This is unjust.

6. Privy pits should be dug. The toilet should be fly-proof and maintained in a sanitary condition. Wooden boxes are very unsanitary, and their use should be discontinued at once.

7. No manure should be allowed to accumulate in or near any barn.

Please bear in mind that the fly is a public enemy, and every step possible should be taken to eliminate breeding places.

Do you realize the value to your district of clean vacant property for your children to play on, to keep them off the streets?

Your assistance is sought in this matter. Please realize that in helping the health department you will be helping yourselves and your neighbors.

Yours very truly,
CLIFF MALLETT,
Sanitary Inspector.

SULTRY SONGSTRESS

Gwen Bradshaw was a member of a carefree party at a high school dance in Winnipeg when she made her debut on a dare. She sang a number with the band playing the latest popular hits for the youngsters. She wasn't nervous then, and she isn't nervous now, but she is just as excited about singing on the air as when she first started professionally in Geoffrey Waddington's "Swinging Strings". That was away back in 1939 A.D. Now she is the singing star of "Tunes for Today", heard Wednesdays at 9.45 p.m. CDT (8:45 p.m. MDT) with Albert Pratz conducting, Sam McKeown arranging. That's not enough singing for Gwen. Every spare hour finds her doing concerts for the men in the Canadian forces. She's brunette, she's sultry, she's National.

MILITARY DINING CAR OF LARGER CAPACITY

Montreal, June 8—The 'long table' diner is a new contribution by the Canadian National Railways to the comfort of travelling troops where the group movement does not exceed 200 individuals. Usually, standard dining cars accommodate 30 patrons at one sitting, but the military type will comfortably handle at one time 54 members of the Canadian Forces. Individual tables, dispensed with on the suggestion of C. H. Worby, Superintendent, Sleeping and Dining Car Department, Winnipeg, have been replaced by two full length tables, one seating men at both sides, the other being placed against the side of the dining car compartment with seats at one side only. This arrangement leaves ample room for waiters and speeds the service. When special troop trains are operated commissary kitchen cars are used.

McKENZIE DISTRICT HAS GOOD PICNIC

On Wednesday of last week McKenzie district held their annual picnic. With good weather in their favor a large number of people turned out to enjoy the first organized picnic of the year.

The usual run of picnic sports were enjoyed including three games of baseball, some softball, races, etc.

McKenzie and Tofield teams met in the first game, McKenzie winning. In the second game Dodds and Ross Creek met, Ross Creek winning. In the third and final game Ross Creek McKenzie clashed, Ross Creek winning the game and the three game tournament. In the Men's softball game Silver Lake won, playing, we believe, McKenzie.

The hungry and thirsty were well taken care of at the booth and the day ended with a very enjoyable dance at the McKenzie Hall.

He who lives by the sword shall perish by the same, and in Louisville, His Honor the Mayor went to sleep listening to a recording of his own speech.

M.D. Cornhill Held June Mtg.

Road gang problems, land deal problems and many other matters occupied the attention of Municipal District of Cornhill Council at their regular June meeting held at the District office on Friday, June 12th.

There were present, Reeve Walker, (in the chair); Councillors Anderson, Blake, Broen, Coombes and Swabey.

The minutes of the previous mtg. were read and on motion by Councillor Anderson adopted.

Mr. Johnson who had been engaged as foreman of the elevating grader road gang interviewed Council regarding general conditions. He said he had had considerable experience on road work and felt competent to give the Council satisfaction. On taking over he found the machinery needing considerable attention. On going out on the road cooperation between himself and the third man was found to be impossible. This resulted in his being compelled to fire the third man while later he himself was demoted to third position and another man put in charge. He left it to the Council to do what they wished in the matter.

Mr. Allan Herndon, caterpillar man was also present and corroborated Mr. Johnson's statements.

Reeve Walker said a day or so after the outfit had been on the road he received complaints that the work was not progressing as well as it should. He did not go out immediately as he thought time should be given for new men to become accustomed to the workings of the machinery. However he eventually did go out which resulted in the re-arrangement Mr. Johnson complains of. There was considerable money tied up in the equipment and good work must be got out of it.

The matter was left for further discussion later in the day.

Mr. Gray interviewed Council re cement culverts.

Adjournment for lunch.

Application by A. H. Martens to purchase N.W. 10-50-20 W4. He offered $400.00 spread over three years. It was announced Mr. Ham was leasing the quarter and under terms of present arrangement had first opportunity to purchase. Council put a price of $450.00 on terms for the quarter and in the event of Mr. Ham not wanting the property, Mr. Martens will have first opportunity at this figure.

Mr. Bert Everitt desired to purchase four acres of land west of town for slaughterhouse property. He offered $20.00 per acre for all or part. Arthur Francis in whose farm the four acres are situated also desired to purchase the four acres and offered $50.00 for the piece. In discussion it was brought out that if the land was sold to Mr. Everitt, the district would have to provide Mr. Everitt with a road to the property as there was no surveyed road whatsoever. Mr. Francis was asked to raise his bid which he did to $60 for the piece. On motion of Reeve Walker the land was sold to him at that figure.

Letter from Adams Machinery Co. re priority rating regarding machinery parts. Secretary had already procured this.

Letter from Treasury Branch re payment of road grant in trade claims. It outlined the method of procedure. The letter was filed.

Fifty cents per day, plus oil and gas was allowed for use of private car in connection with the elevating grader unit.

Letter from Mr. H. C. Lechelt re leasing some land including a road allowance. This was left for further consideration.

Mr. Frank Grummett interviewed council. He was asked if he could handle large outfit and replied that he could only work until end of August as he had a crop to take off. After some discussion he promised to try and work all summer if possible so as to save council the trouble of engaging a new man late in the summer.

Moved by Councillor Blake that Frank Grummett be engaged as elevator man and foreman at 70c per hour. The road committee to arrange for the hiring of the third man. Carried.

On motion of Councillor Broen Allan Herndon was given $61.25 advance in wages.

A Municipal Refresher course is being held at the Alberta University, June 17, 18, 19. The course is open to secretary-treasurers and other officials of Municipal districts and school districts. On motion of Reeve Walker the secretary was given permission to attend and that he be allowed $20.00 for expenses for the

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMIC GIRLS PRESENT FASHION SHOW

Dame Fashion stepped out in Tofield on Monday afternoon last when the Intermediate and High School girls modelled garments made during the past year at their Household Ec classes. The girls, who are instructed by Miss Isabel Robinson did very well as mannequins, and are to be congratulated on the quantity and quality of the garments made. Among those modelled were aprons, dresses, sweaters, skirts, blouses and a suit.

After the display, fruit punch and cookies were served by the girls to all present.

The Red Cross was made richer by $12.20 as a result of the Fashion Show, for which thanks are extended to Miss Robinson and her class.

TOFIELD 11—McKENZIE 3

The local baseball squad travelled to McKenzie last Friday for a return game with that district's team. The result was another victory for Tofield, this time by a 11-3 score. Chas McAllister pitched superbly for Tofield and kept the hits well scattered. The score would have been much closer if it were not for the numerous mistakes made by the McKenzie men. Tofield had the services of John Moore of the R.C.A.F. who had a week end leave. The batteries for Tofield: D. McAllister and Berlid; for McKenzie, Phillips and Olson, Jens Jones.

DODDS 7—TOFIELD 4

On Sunday a very fine turnout of fans came out to the Tofield diamond to see Dodds beat the locals 7-4. Dodds played a careful game and were justified in their win. Tofield did not perform badly either, but they made a few errors and their hitting was untimely. Batteries for Dodds: Steen, Huseby, Bruce and H. Hjelter; for Tofield, Johnsrud, D. McAllister and Berlid.

It was also pleasing to see some of the older veterans come out. They didn't do too badly and would be mighty handy to have around if the kinks could be gotten out of the legs, arms, backs, etc. The whole team appreciated the presence of so many onlookers. It still seems that baseball has a strange attraction, no matter where or how it is played.

STUDENT'S DISPLAY SHOPWORK

The workshop class at Tofield under the instructorship of Mr. Cannon, staged an end of season display at the workshop on Monday. There were quite a number of articles on display, all of which testified to the zeal and care the students had put into their work. A bowl of Tennessee maple excited much admiration, as also did a smaller one. A lamp wall fixture was also very well made and effective. A coffee table, exceptionally well made and with real finish also caused favorable comment. There were also to be seen candlesticks, (turned), dressers, letter holders, medicine cabinets, rolling pins, library tables, end tables, yacht sails, book ends, dog house with little porch and a number of other things.

This was the first year in which girls as well as boys did this work and it was surprising how good a showing the girls made.

Both instructor and students are to be congratulated upon the excellence of the display.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Edmonton, June 15— The long awaited conferences between representatives of Alberta bondholders and members of the provincial government commenced this week, and extensive study was given to the problem in hand. A statement issued Tuesday said "various questions relating to the fiscal position and prospects of the province were discussed. The committee is engaged in investigating the possibilities of of reaching a basis for refunding Alberta public debt." Meetings continued until Friday, when Hon. Solon E. Low announced the bondholders' representative had broken off negotiations.

Another important conference held during the week was that at which government and farmer representatives met to discuss proposals to be submitted to the Western Conference of government and farmer bodies from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, for the purpose of easing the private debt situation in agriculture. Attending the Edmonton meeting were Robert Gardiner, President, U.F.A.; J. E. Brownlee, K.C., counsel for the U.G.G.; George Bennett, Manville, representing the Alberta Wheat Pool; E. W. Brunsden, Calgary, secretary of the Alberta Federation of Agriculture; William Hawreliak, Wasel, representing the Alberta Farmers' Union; and H. J. Wilson, K.C., of the Attorney General's department. The conference was under the chairmanship of Hon. Lucien Maynard, K.C., minister of municipal affairs.

Leading farm experts of Canada will gather at Olds agricultural school June 17 to 19 when meetings of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists are held. Among the guest speakers is Prof. James A. Scott, agricultural adviser to the British High Commissioner in Canada. Also holding meetings during the Olds convention will be the Canadian Society of Agricultural Economists, the Canadian Society of Animal Production, western section, and the Western Society of Agronomy.

Young farmers of Alberta attending the annual Farm Young Peoples' Week at the University elected Eugene O'Neil of Woodhouse as president of the Junior U.F.A. Keith Rosenberger and Edna Hern were elected vice presidents. A number of resolutions dealing with farm matters were endorsed by those attending.

Further information on the roads programme in the Peace River country was given by Hon. W. A. Fallow when he returned to Edmonton from that area last week. About $100,000 will be spent this year, he said, mainly for construction and gravelling of main highways. Work on the short stretch near the B.C. boundary was completed to allow oil drillers to move equipment. Four extensive gravel beds had been located. Major projects include gravelling from Grimshaw to Fairview, 40 miles, Grande Prairie to Beaverlodge, 25 miles; Spirit River to Main highway at Rycroft, six miles. Work will also be done on the Grimshaw-Hay River winter road.

Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, conferred with oil operators in Calgary recently to the end of seeking co-operation to complete test wells in the north part of Turner Valley. It was reported that several operations were suspended after Ace Royalties No. 2 was abandoned after striking unfavorable prospects.

Although there is official talk of a feared butter shortage this coming fall, prices have declined for butter and butterfat. Information released by W. D. King, minister of trade and industry, disclosed that in the opinion of the trade, price fixing and a reduction in purchases of storage butter have been responsible for a current market decline, with resulting lower prices.

V V V

Cream shipping cans are exceedingly scarce and farmers should endeavor to protect and conserve the present supplies. This warning, issued long ago by the provincial department of agriculture, was repeated this week when D. H. McCallum, dairy commissioner, stated that only one Canadian factory manufactures them. A quantity of priority steel plate has been received, but no tin is available for coating.

V V V

Farmers who normally require seasonal help will show more than passing interest in the announcement by officials of the Edmonton branch, Unemployment Insurance Commission, that within two months every employable man in Edmonton and Calgary will be put to work. "The labor market will be swept clean", it was stated. "Three large projects" in Alberta and British Columbia will drain the market of all unemployed, it was added. Nature of the projects was not made public.

V V V

Marked improvement in Alberta crop conditions was reported by Hon. D. B. MacMillan in the third summary of the season. In most crop districts surface moisture is reported good, but rains are needed elsewhere. Frost damage was said to be slight, lambs have increased, foals have decreased, and pig farrowing rose 30 per cent. Northern bees are colonizing well with good dandelion flow.

DELEGATES OF 50 ORGANIZATIONS TO MEET AT RED DEER

Calgary, June 15— Delegates representing 50 affiliated organizations of the Alberta Federation of Agriculture will meet in annual meeting at Red Deer, Thursday and Friday, July 2 and 3, it was announced today by Lew Hutchinson, Duhamel, chairman of the Board of Directors.

All of the Federation's sessions will be open to the farming public.

WOODLAWN

On Thursday evening, June 11th, a farewell party was held in the Woodlawn school in honor of Pte. James Bruce who has been home on sick leave and furlough for the past month. Despite the fact that the roads were muddy, there was a good crowd, the surrounding districts being well represented. Dancing was the order of the evening and the pick-up music was very good indeed. We wish to take this opportunity to thank the following for donating their musical talents; Messrs Leslie McGinitie, John Kozak, L. Kozak, and the Misses Doris McGinitie, Muriel Ray, Julia Kozak and Ellen Morrow. A very delicious lunch was served by the ladies of the district after which Mr. Richard Lougheed made a very fitting speech and presented Pte. Bruce with a shaving set, in leather case from the community. Pte. Bruce responded very well, thanking his many friends for their thoughtfulness. All joined hands and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Dancing was then resumed for a while longer, then a silver collection was taken and presented to Pte. Bruce, followed by "Auld Lang Syne," then "Home Sweet Home." A good time was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

A farewell dinner and gathering was held in honor of Pte. James Bruce at the home of his sister, Mrs. Geo. Lee, on Sunday, June 14th. Those present for dinner were Mr. and Mrs. R. Bruce, Doris, Winnie, Jean and Lillian, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Lee and children, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lee and children, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Gee, Mr. Hugh Bruce, Pte. James Bruce, Misses Margaret and Nola Cookson. Others who called during the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. A. Weder and children, Messrs Fred Williams, Bob Stirrett and Harry Lee. Several rolls of films were taken, among these were several family group pictures. A very enjoyable afternoon was spent visiting. The men played a few games of horseshoe and the ladies chatted. Supper was served Buffet style, after which all departed for their homes.

Pte. James Bruce leaves for barracks on Tuesday evening.

● ● ● ● ● ● ● ● ●

The all night rain enjoyed by us all has been of inestimable value and everyone feels that we will have plenty of everything this year, bar tea, coffee, sugar, tires and gas.

The horses are still kicking. Mr. Stanley Cowden is the latest recipient. But we hear that the damage handed to him was not serious, but painful at the time.

Miss Lily Morden left for Ontario this week. We understand that she is getting married down there, so we all join with best wishes for her health and happiness. Miss Morden, who has lived here for the last 20 or 23 years with her brother Charles, will be missed for she took an active part in the ladies' club affairs and the Social Credit group meetings, and the Community affairs in general. So again we wish her the best of luck in her new home, or rather we should say "old home" for it is her old home land that she is going to reside, to be precise, Manitoulin Island, Georgian Bay.

We do not know what the plans are for the Annual school picnic, but one thing we do know and that is that the funds for same are practically nil, so how about a whip round. A small sum from each would relieve this obstacle. The next thing is the fact that ice cream and pop, etc., are nearly unobtainable, unless ordered away in advance. In fact we notice that the N.A.D.P. have cancelled all their picnics for the duration on this account. Still there's always candies, nuts, oranges, etc. and also the prize money to be raised. So to what you can folks, and give the kids their treat, Hitler or no Hitler.

Don't forget the "Free Movie Show at the Hall on Friday evening, 26th June. It is the last one to be given this summer, so its your last chance to see these shows until probably next winter.

V.V.R. PARADE GROUND

"Who's that distinguished looking old bird coming down the road?"

"Oh! that's old so and so."

"No! is it? can't be him."

"Well, it is anyway."

"How come, he's altogether different."

"Oh, he's in the V.V.R. now, and he both knows it and shows it, and by gosh, now I look at you, it would be a good thing if you could get that way too. Why not try it?"

Like the old song, "Oh Tommy Tommy Atkins". "We teach him how to walk and where to put his feet, oh" and some of us would look 50 per cent better if we smartened up a bit. So try it!

WHO ARE THESE BIRDS WITHOUT WINGS?

A feature designed to acquaint the general public with the work and duties of the "Ground Crew" in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

THE PARACHUTE RIGGER

A parachute to an airman is like a life boat to the sailor. At any time he may be called upon to trust his life to that little pack of silk which accompanies him on all flights. The Parachute Rigger is entrusted with the prime responsibility of keeping all "chutes" in serviceable operating order at all times.

During the war 1914-1918, it became evident that a dependable parachute was needed but the war ended before a really reliable type of parachute was developed. In all countries after this war a great deal of experimental work was carried out and many excellent and reliable parachutes were developed.

The Royal Canadian Air Force Service Parachute is the result of several years research and testing covering every known type of parachute.

The Service Seat Pack which is used by pilots and other persons not moving about in the aircraft, has a canopy of 24 feet in diameter and weighs 18 pounds. The Service Chest pack has the same weight and dimensions as the Seat Pack, but the pack is stored away in the aircraft ready for use while the harness is worn by the airman at all times while in the air. In the event of an emergency, the pack can be quickly connected to the harness by means of two quick connector snaps located on the chest straps. Either of these hooks is capable of taking the entire load alone if necessary.

As parachutes are used to save life in an emergency the utmost care is taken of them at all times. Neglect on the part of the rigger may cause expensive repair, or worse, may cost someone his life. The chutes must be [illegible] dry and away from oil or gasoline, a few drops of which will deteriorate the silk. The Rigger inspects all parachutes at least once a month at which time they are repacked. A careful check on this important phase of his work is kept by means of a Parachute Log Book which must be entered by the Rigger giving the serviceability state and date of re-packing.

Parachute Riggers are given an extended training course and must be highly proficient in their trade. Attention to detail is of a necessity important and the Rigger [illegible] by with sloppy or indifferent work. That he is an important cog in the machinery of the air force comes home to an airman as he plummets to earth and pulling the rip cord breathes a fervent prayer that his Rigger has been on the job.

THE ANCHOR OF YEARS

A yielded fortress here and there,
A few far outposts holding well,
Some towers crushed beyond repair,
Some turrets sink through oceans' swell;
Yet stout and brave our bulwarks stand
And clearer grows the star we hold,
And loyal is each friendly land,
Whose standards with our flag unfold.

The foeman's rage, the furious thrust
May not obscure serener skies—
Still lives the faith, the purpose just,
The crowning heights before our eyes.
Intrepid isle and Royal seat!
Thy shield is firm through struggles long,
And strangers in thy councils meet,
And thou has favor with the strong.

JULY 1st NOT FAR AWAY—

CHRISTMAS AND JULY 1st seem to come round with unfailing regularity and while no doubt other holidays have their charm, these two can be classed as the summer and winter apex of the holiday mood. As we write this, few in this district have suffered from the heat, though it has been dry, dusty, windy, wet and squally by turns. But with July 1st coming up real fine weather should be in the offing. As has been the custom for some years past Tofield will again stage its annual celebration. There will be baseball and softball talent and the usual run of other attractions. We are hoping for a still further increase in attendance, the admission price to grounds being kept at the unusually low price of two bits to encourage just such an increase.

TEACHERS' SALARIES—

QUITE RECENTLY both in the daily and weekly press there have been numerous references to teachers' salaries. On more than one occasion deadlocks have been reached where teachers have refused to continue work unless salary increases were forthcoming. How far teachers are justified in taking this course it is difficult to say, for teaching is an important profession. But because it is an important profession should be ample reason why adequate salaries should be paid.

Beyond a certain minimum, salaries received by anyone for anything are relative. That is, so much money is required for the bare necessities of life and over and above this amount is what constitutes standard of living or standard of saving as the case may be. Compared with many other trades and professions, teachers in Canada are not overly paid. If we remember aright teachers' salaries in England on the average were higher than the average tradesman's, while here, they are lower. There are exceptions of course, and the illustration refers to quite a number of years ago. It should be remembered that it is the brightest of our boys and girls who enter the teaching profession and a strenuous normal course is required before certificates are granted. The responsibilities of the teaching profession are great and probably in no other line of endeavor is it so necessary that just the right kind of person be engaged.

There is however, the ratepayer's side of the question. The drain upon income and financial resources is increasing constantly and the days of free and easy finance are passed. The cost of education has been steadily rising as the responsibilities of educating the young increased. We feel that salary discussions between teachers and boards should be based on good will and mutual respect, with a thorough understanding of each other's problems. With this spirit prevailing, satisfactory results should accrue. Certainly teachers should not be underpaid as compared with other forms of [illegible].

GENUINELY SUCCESSFUL—

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT in collaboration with the Canadian Red Cross Association, quite recently inaugurated nursing classes for women. Throughout Alberta, these classes were started in almost every hamlet, village, town and city. In fact in some instances, as in our own district, classes have been started and successfully conducted in farm homes. Rarely has any single movement been quite as successful as these nursing classes. The supply of instruction books quickly ran out and even now, weeks after they were ordered, the Tofield group has been unable to procure additional copies. The idea struck a very responsive chord in the hearts of the womanfolk of the province which is ample evidence that given the right lead they stand ready to do their share and their best in any emergency.

While such widespread activity in elementary nursing is no doubt born of war conditions, the knowledge thus gained is equally valuable in time of peace. Thousands of women throughout this province are better equipped to face sickness in the home today than they were several months ago. The success of these nursing classes was due to the unselfish service of many registered nurses who acted as instructors and to the spontaneous interest and enthusiasm on the part of so many women willing and anxious to be of service.

LOOKING AHEAD—

(Contributed)

CANADIAN PEOPLE may be divided roughly into two groups at the present time. One group is spending money as fast as it comes in. The others are piling up War Savings Certificates and Bonds as high as possible through rigid supression of the temptation to spend as others are doing.

There is one certain prediction which may be made now. When peace comes, the men and women who will be able to buy new furniture for the house, new cars, washing machines, radios and the like, or who will be taking holiday trips to famous Canadian and United States resorts, will not be those who are now spending their quarters and their dollar bills with reckless abandon. The spending spree after the war will be conducted largely by the people who are now investing heavily in Government war securities.

It is much easier to buy more and more War Savings Certificates now when one visualizes them in terms of spending money—after Hitler is beaten.

DO YOU KNOW?

That pilots at Flying Schools pay [illegible] getting lost. 25c; sloppy parking, 10 cents.

That the "Chock" is a block of wood or other material placed in front of a plane to prevent its moving when the engine is starting.

That the "Link Trainer" teaches students on the ground to climb, bank, dive, "fly" a course, land, etc.

That three "V" shaped stripes worn on the arm above the elbow designates a "Sergeant", with a crown above the stripes, a "Flight Sergeant".

That "Tarmac" is the expanse of hard surface in front of the hangars where air-craft are lined up prior to taxying onto the runways to "take off".

That "Tarmac Duty" is the training given potential Air-Crew immediately following a period at the Manning Pool, students get acquainted with the planes, assist in servicing and starting air-craft on the tarmac.

That if you are staying at home wondering "What are we fighting for?" just think a minute—"If Hitler wins—you'll soon find out."

That the vision standards for Air Crew (Pilots only) have been lowered. Applicants with eyesight standard of 20-40 (previous regulations called for 20-40) and who are correctible to 20-20 with glasses may now be accepted.

That "Taxying" is the term applied to a plane moving on the ground under its own power. The engine is so controlled, that at no time does the plane get up sufficient speed to leave the ground.

That "Flight Lieutenant" (R.C.A.F.) is equivalent rank to "Captain" (Army) and "Lieutenant" (Navy).

That the insistent little inner voice that has been worrying you all the time with "Are you doing your full part in this war", disappears after you enlist and you feel like a real man again.

SUGAR FOR PRESERVING

Despite reduction of the sugar ration from three-quarters of a pound of sugar per week per person, to half a pound, Walter S. Campbell, Prices and Supply Representative in Alberta for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, says that housewives putting up preserves may still obtain extra sugar for that purpose.

For canning fruit, one-half pound of sugar can be obtained for each pound of fruit. The housewife must acquaint her retailer with the use for which the extra sugar is required, and sign a statement to that effect. Farmers who have to supply meals to threshing crews and silo fillers, may also obtain extra sugar within the ration requirements, on explaining the purpose to his retailer.

Several prosecutions for sugar hoarding were made last week. A man in Montreal was fined $200 and a Japanese near Kelowna, B.C. was fined $100 and the excess sugar confiscated, for having sugar in excess of the ration requirements.

THE NORWICH SCOUTS AND THE BLITZ

Nearly 400 Boy Scouts were on duty during and following the ferocious Nazi "reprisal" raids on Norwich. Their fearless carrying-on in spite of dive-bombing and fires won unstinted admiration. They ran messages, fought incendiaries, rendered first aid and assisted in countless other ways. After the blitz they distributed special notices to the population, guided people to rest centres, reunited families, for inquiring sailors and soldiers secured information of families in wrecked areas. They salvaged and moved furniture by vans and Scout trekcarts, helped at emergency food centres, and prepared meals over fires in open spaces. They assisted with feeding arrangements for police, firemen and rescue workers from outside points, and guided these helpers to desired points. In addition they looked after hundreds of injured dogs and cats. Incidentally several of the Scout troops lost their meeting places and all their scouting equipment. One troop lost its out-of-town headquarters, a building of concrete and wood built entirely by the boys over several years. Facing the heap of rubble one of the boys inquired cheerily of his district commissioner, "When do we start rebuilding, Skipper;;?"

BUYS WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATE WITH SILVER WEDDING GIFT

Ottawa, June 6— Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley picked the following letter from Gordon Hammond, Kessler, Alta., out of his voluminous mail bag here today as the one he would remember when the task of financing Canada's war effort appeared temporarily as too much of a burden.

"The wife and I were so pleased to get your letter of appreciation for the money sent. Being a Veteran of the last war and too old, and I lost my right eye 12 years ago, I yet felt I wanted to do something to help. I was so sorry I could not buy a $50 bond sometime back, but I did not thresh one bushel of grain last year on account of being dried out—so you can understand what a kick we got towards the end of March when we were given a surprise Silver Wedding Anniversary party and a $30 silver collection was handed to us. So we came to the conclusion this was much the best way to make use of this nice present."

Hammond bought War Savings Certificates with his wedding anniversary gift.

Application cards will be distributed to all householders through the post offices on or before Tuesday, June 23rd. Additional cards will also be delivered for every person resident in the household who bears a different last name from the head of the household. If needed, extra cards may be secured from local post offices.

[illegible] application cards should be filled out [illegible] and dropped in the nearest mail box or post [illegible]. A pamphlet giving complete instructions will be delivered with each card. REDUCE FEE ON AIRGRAPHS SENT TO ARMED FORCES

On June 15 postage on Airgraph Messages from Canada to our Forces in the United Kingdom or the Middle East will be reduced to just six cents per message from the present rate of Ten cents, the Honourable William P. Mulock, K.C., M.P., Postmaster General, announces. As a further concession to facilitate correspondence between people in Canada and the United Kingdom Airgraph Service will be extended to Civilians on the above date.

The reduction of the Airgraph fee to our Forces should do much to increase the use of this time-and-space-saving facility by which messages written on special forms obtainable at all Post Offices, are processed on a reel of microfilm and carried by plane to the United Kingdom, where a photographic enlargement is made of each message which is placed in an envelope and forwarded for delivery. In the case of Airgraphs from Canada to the Middle East, the original forms are flown to the United Kingdom for processing.

The new extension of Airgraph Service to Civilians it is hoped will draw closer the ties between persons in Canada and their friends in the United Kingdom.

The rate on Airgraph Messages sent by Civilians to Civilian addressees in the United Kingdom will be 15c a message.

TO ALBERTA HATCHING EGG SHIPPERS AND TURKEY BREEDERS

The Annual Farm and Home Week is to be held at the Olds School of Agriculture commencing Monday, June 22nd, 1942. This year the members of the Poultry Branch staff will all be in attendance and we feel that the poultry programme will be of interest and benefit to all flock owners. The holding of the annual meetings of the Alberta Hatching Egg Producers' Association and the Alberta Turkey Breeders' Association will prove of interest not only to the members of these Associations but to farmers in general and they extend a hearty invitation to all interested persons to attend.

"No," I say, "we can't afford a bigger house—not while our boys need bigger tanks!"

"MY HUSBAND and the children say that now there's so much money coming in, I should have all the things I've always wanted."

"But I say no thank you! My Freddie gave up his job willingly and lives in a tent. The least each of us at home can do is to go without this and that and buy War Savings Stamps every week so the boys over there will have everything they need for victory."

Buy War Savings Stamps from banks, post offices, telephone offices, department stores, druggists, grocers, tobacconists, book stores and other retail stores.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Joseph's church Sunday, June 14th, when Rev. Rude united in marriage Velma Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lars Grue and Arthur Fred, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Henkleman. The church was decorated with blue, pink and white streamers and fresh flowers. Mrs. Theodore Grue of Edmonton, aunt of the bride, supplied the music. The ushers, Norman Grue, R.C.A.F., brother of the bride and Henry Schlender, cousin of the groom, opened the flower decked altar gates for the bridal procession. Attending the groom was Alvin Harke, best man. The bridesmaid was Amy Grue, sister of the bride. She looked very pretty in a tea length dress of blue sheer with matching turban. Her flowers were rose colored snapdragons. The lovely bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She wore a floor length gown of white satin with full skirt, slight train and a sweetheart neckline. Her matching veil was held back by orange blossoms and she carried pink and white peonies. During the signing of the register, Clarice Sharet, cousin of the bride, sang "Oh Perfect Love." Following the ceremony a luncheon was served at the bride's home for over a hundred guests. The bride's table was centered by a four-tiered wedding cake. Waitresses were Gladys and Isabelle Grue, Evelyn Webster, Leila Jarnhin, Renota Wenell, Alma Gering, Thelma Sharet, and Geneva and Louise Grue of Edmonton. The happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Banff and Jasper. For travelling, the bride chose a navy blue tailored suit with dusty rose accessories. TENNIS NOTES

We intimated in last week's column that the Tennis Court was a popular place to spend an evening. The other night several stray horses took our advice and seemed to have spent quite a portion of the evening there. We do not know whether they played tennis or not but they certainly played on the courts, not to mention the fence, and they also broke the rules by not wearing tennis shoes. I won't tell you what most of the members said when they saw the result of their midnight frolic, it wouldn't look nice in print. However, everything is ship-shape again and we are not inviting the horses back.

ooooo

Kimmitt and Chandler had a good work out the other night and if we could decide wether that last ball went through the hole in the net or over the top we could tell you who won. (Confidentially I think it was Kimmitt.)

oooooo

We saw George and a friend having a real workout the other night. It looks like some of us will have to get in some practice if we want to hold our own in the next tournament.

Bert says there are still some weeds to get rid of if you have a spare hoe handy.

oooooo

We are all enjoying this rain but it is a heck of a job to try and write tennis notes in the middle of it, so cheerio for now, will see you next week.

Red Cross Should Profit July 1st

With a new president (Ed. Kallal Jr.) and a nearly new secretary, (J. E. Stinson), the Tofield Sports Day Committee is clicking right along, making arrangements for the annual sports day on July 1st.

The baseball committee, headed by Father Schmeltzer, have arranged for a good display of America's premier summer sport, baseball.

Cons. James also is ready to present softball played in a skillful manner to the hundreds of fans present on that day. Four teams will compete and there are some pretty classy players among them.

John Morton is busy working up interest in cycle racing and promises to have some interesting race events for that day.

Messrs. MacDonnell and Chandler are looking up the rope and tape measure so as to do honor to the fleet of foot.

Reg. McCarthy and his gang are thinking up ways to be generous to the public. You win every time with these fellows—well nearly every time—well anyway, once in a while. Games of skill and guess work please old and young.

The large refreshment booth, the hot dog stand and all the old favorites will be there. We have had our rain, just pray for fine weather and head for Tofield on July 1st.

The evening dance will be held in the Variety Theatre and Messrs. A. E. Allan, MacDonnell and McGuire promise good music and a good time.

Enlisted Men

For some long time we have had the idea of compiling a list of all those men serving with the armed forces whose home is in the Tofield area and Municipal District of Cornhill. Up to the present we have not done so, chiefly because we realized that to get a really accurate list was a formidable task and such a list should be reasonably complete.

In connection with Army Week, June 29-July 5, we have been requested to publish such a list and through the courtesy of Mrs. Barden of the I.O.D.E., we are making the attempt. The list is not intended to be complete in relation to the territory which the Mercury covers. We would be pleased to compile such a list for publication at some future date if relatives would send the names into us. The names of men from the Tofield area, and M.D. of Cornhill are required.

THE ARMY MUST FINISH THE JOB!

Army Week June 29 to July 5

(By Lieut. Bruce M. Pearce)

Deserved tribute will be paid to Canada's soldier sons during Army Week, June 29th to July 5th, an event that will be suitably marked in every city, town and village from coast to coast.

Judging by the enthusiasm already evinced by citizens throughout the Dominion, Army week will mark a new high in the outpouring of patriotic feeling among Canadians. It is a week set aside in response to widespread public demand for the purpose of honouring the men in khaki who have offered to give their lives if necessary to defeat the aggressors and to preserve our freedom.

The lads of Canada's Army have sacrificed all the comforts of civilian life and the association with their loved ones in order to serve their country. During Army week the Canadian people will have an opportunity to show their appreciation of this sacrifice. For weeks now Citizens' Committees have engaged in mapping out programs for entertaining and honouring the troops. Every community, large and small, across Canada will have a part in this spontaneous demonstration. Churches, civic groups, industries, retail stores, service clubs and women's organizations will do their bit to achieve the maximum success.

Public and private buildings will fly flags throughout the week. The public will have a chance to attend 'Open House' at military training centres and schools, to hear the inspiring music of military bands and to watch the stirring parades of Canadian soldiers. They will have the chance to entertain men of the Army in their homes and at dances and concerts. Service emblems will be displayed in homes, churches and business houses, while Honour Rolls will be prominently exhibited.

Newspapers will publish special Army editions, the radio will carry programs on the Army Week theme, and theatres will present Army films. Hotels and restaurants will serve meals based on Army rations and householders are asked to do likewise on one day of the week. Members of the Reserve Army will take part in parades and will wear their uniform one day in the week. Sports programs, church parades and drumhead services will have their part on the agenda. Tribute will be paid to the next-of-kin of lads on active service. The overseas lads will not be forgotten and citizens are asked to make a point of writing to them and of sending parcels during Army week.

Dominion Day, July 1st, falls in this week and as it marks the 75th anniversary of Confederation, it is fitting that the majority of towns and villages in Canada are planning a suitable celebration for that day. It will give added impetus to Army Week and to the deep-seated desire to honour the boys in khaki.

This is a citizens' show and every community in the country will want to have a part in it. Not only will it prove to the soldiers that they have not been forgotten by the public, but it will go far towards enlightening Canadians more intimately concerning the role of Canada's Army and the manner in which the troops are cared for and trained. Until the present time the Army has been somewhat overshadowed by the sterling performance of Canada's Air Force and Navy, which have seen action on many fronts while the Army has remained inactive so far as actual combat is concerned. It cannot be forgotten that in the end it will require an invasion of the European continent to ensure the defeat of Hitlerism. Then the Army will be called upon to play its part.

Meanwhile Canadian troops both in England and in the Dominion are training tirelessly to fit themselves for the supreme struggle that lies ahead. In training centres, schools and camps from one end of Canada to the other, they are undergoing physical training and instruction in modern methods and weapons of war so that they may not be found wanting when the zero hour comes.

Canada has an army of which to be proud and Canadians will have the chance during Army Week to demonstrate their true appreciation of the men who are making the greatest sacrifice in the battle to preserve our liberty. The days from June 29th to July 5th should culminate in the most memorable exhibition of patriotic fervour in Canada's history.

TENNIS NOTES

Last week we spoke of the difficulty in writing Tennis Notes in this kind of weather. Well, the condition hasn't changed. Inasmuch as we couldn't garner any news at the Tennis courts because it has been too wet to go there, we got the roving reporter to don his rain coat and interview a few of the enthusiasts. After returning with dripping hat, wet feet and a very woe-begone expression, we give you the low down on his findings.

oooooo

Looking out the window with the rain pouring down, Winnie says that she does not think that she will play her game tonight.

oooooo

After rolling the court Sunday, Geo. says that he might have had a work out in the afternoon if Chandler hadn't gone to sleep.

Bert says that he is silent on the matter of tennis right now and that we can quote him as saying so.

A high school student says, "Oh, well, we can stay home and study for our exams without the lure of the courts bothering us."

oooooo

Mary Burnett says "Why bother about tennis, better make it waterball."

Aileen says, "No news is tennis news this week."

oooooo

Its clearing up, we hope, so will see you at the courts next week.

COUPONS FOR SUGAR ONLY

Coupon rationing is being applied only to sugar it is emphatically stated by the wartime prices and Trade Board, which has made no decision to ration any other commodities by the use of coupons or rationing tickets.

The ration card for sugar will be issued on July 1, and after that no one may purchase sugar without surrendering a coupon. Each coupon will entitle the purchaser to two weeks' supply of sugar.

WHO ARE THESE BIRDS WITHOUT WINGS?

A feature designed to acquaint the general public with the work and duties of the "Ground Crew" in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

CLERKS

The clerk in the Royal Canadian Air Force is another "Bird Without Wings". Everyone knows there must be clerks in an organization of such magnitude but little thought is given to the multitude of duties they must perform and the great responsibility they have due to the nature of their work.

Of all trades in the R.C.A.F., that of "clerk" is perhaps the least glamorous of all. Practically all other trades have at least a "ground contact" with the "birds of the air" but it is not uncommon when a clerk sees a 'plane on the ground for the first time in a month. This is partly due to the fact that the clerk works in the Administration Building which is invariably far removed from the operational area of any R.C.A.F. training or operational establishment. So, with the exception of the musical notes of "reveille" drill and pay parades and the occasional growl from the Sergeant Major, life to the clerk in the R.C.A.F. is very much the same as that of a civilian.

At the outbreak of the present series of hostilities, the R.C.A.F. was not very well known even in Canada. It's organization at the time is not questioned here, but, due to other nations of the world casting their lot with Canada in the formation of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and selecting Canada as the Training Grounds, the organization we have now is and must be greater and more efficient than it was then.

"Organization", "Administration" and "Clerk" are synonymous. When more and better organization was required in the R.C.A.F. (due to expansion), it naturally followed that more and better clerks were required—and not only that—the qualifying phrase "type of clerk" must be added. In lieu of the one trade of "clerk" in "peace time" days, we now find that the following types of clerks are necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the Air Force: Clerk, (Accounting), Clerk (Accounting, Works and Buildings), Clerk (Administrative), Clerk, (Supervisory, Medical), Clerk, (Stenographer) Clerk, (educational), Clerk (Operations Room), Clerk (General), Clerk, (General, Medical), Clerk, Stenographer, Medical). The fact that these different types of clerks were created would indicate that they were required and that each has its own specialized work to perform.

Clerks are required to be "in the groove" and accurate at all times. A typographical error might easily be equivalent to the loss of much valuable time, money and even loss of life.

Clerks (Accounting) must have pay-lists up-to-date in time for pay parade (so essential for the welfare of the men). Should the pay-lists not be ready through their (the clerks) inefficiency, indolence or what have you, the result with the airmen is despair and dissatisfaction, low morale and low operating efficiency. Nominal rolls, pass rolls, daily, weekly, monthly, quarterly—are his lot to compile for the C.O., Command and N.D.H.Q. — and they must be accurate (if you don't think so, ask Headquarters!) This will indicate in a small way how, indirectly, the clerk is indispensable and invaluable to the R.C.A.F. He is required to know as a matter of course, volumes of rules, regulations, instructions, bulletins and orders and "keep up" with daily and monthly amendments thereto.

The clerks are the men behind the scenes. They are the unsung heroes who work quietly and patiently under a continuous and relentless bombardment of paper and files.

PROMINENT U.S. VISITOR

Prominent U.S. visitor at the Parliament buildings during the week was Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt and head of a U.S. natural resources body, who made calls on the premier, the minister of public works and the Lieutenant-governor. He was accompanied by U.S. engineers and members of the Alaska Highway commission. Mr. Delano, a veteran railroad pioneer and army engineer, has for many years held important posts under various administrations. He is now in this country en route to Alaska to study various highway routes and other strategic factors at the personal request of the president. He expressed great confidence in the destiny of Alberta, and believed Edmonton would double in population in a decade or so.

ANGLICAN DEANERY WOMEN'S AUXILIARY MEET AT TOFIELD

The Anglican Deanery Women's Auxiliary was well attended at Tofield in spite of the stormy weather and bad roads. Delegates attended from Edgerton, Irma, Battle Heights, Wainwright, Viking and Edmonton. Holy Communion was celebrated at 10:30 a.m., the celebrant, Rev. Court of Edgerton was assisted by Rev. Jones of Tofield. After lunch at the hotel, business was attended to in the parish hall. The reports of the secretaries from the various branches were very interesting. The Deanery W.A. was presided over by the Deanery President, Mrs. Adams of Wainwright, assisted by the Secretary, Mrs. Batchelor of Battle Heights. The Diocesan President, Mrs. Tuckaberry, gave an interesting address. Other Diocesan officers reporting included the Junior Secretary, Mrs. Coghill, the Extra Cent a Day Secretary, Mrs. Coghill, the Thankoffering Secretary, Mrs. J. W. Robinson and Mrs. Elliott, Educational Secretary.

After interesting discussions the local W.A. served lunch to those present in the Parish Hall, the members returning to their individual parishes by car and bus.

By eating fresh fruits and vegetables when they are in season, canned, dried or preserved products can be saved for when fresh foods are scarce.

'LUXURY' VICTIM OF U-BOAT PROVES SEA STORY IS FACT

New York, May 29— They thought there was something fishy about Harley Archie Olsen's story when he was rescued—bronzed, sleek, and healthy—after 19 days alone at sea on a raft.

So, when the rescue vessel arrived at Key West, Fla., with the radio operator whose ship was torpedoed April 13, the Federal Bureau of Investigation detained him while checking his tale.

But they found that his story—one of the most amazing to come out of the Battle of the Atlantic—was true, and Mr. Olsen, stopping in New York on the way home to Portland, Ore., told about it:

"I didn't lose any weight, I was never afraid of sharks, I had plenty to eat and drink, I enjoyed sun bathing by day and slept comfortably at night.

"I had more trouble explaining why I wasn't half-starved or half-mad from thirst or something than I did while waiting on the raft to be picked up.

"They thought I was a 'plant.' They thought I was placed on the raft by a German submarine. I was held in Miami until my fingerprints were checked in Washington and until they learned I was an American citizen employed by the steamship line."

After the torpedoing, Mr. Olsen leaped overboard, sighted a liferaft, and clambered on it. Soon he spied another, then some wreckage, then part of another raft. Pooling the best of his findings, he chose the most seaworthy raft and loaded it with food, water, canvas for covering and sails, and an old settee.

By day he lounged on the settee, fishing with a net made from bandages in a first-aid kit, or just drowsing. By night he covered himself with canvas and curled up on the settee.

"Gentle waves rocked me to sleep" he said. "I guess I was pretty lucky, all right."

VOUCHERS FOR PRESERVING

Rationing of sugar will stand at one-half pound per person per week, and the housewife allowed no more than two weeks' supply of sugar at any one time. For preserving the allowance is one-half pound per pound weight of fruit, and three-quarter's pound per pound weight of fruit, when jams and jellies are on the program. So when sugar is bought for canning or preserving the housewife will be enabled to sign a special voucher in the presence of the retailer. These vouchers are necessary to enable the retailer to replenish his stock.

OVERSEAS PARCELS SHOULD BE VARIED

Men and Women in the Canadian Services overseas welcome parcels from home not because their rations aren't adequate, but like other mail, for their morale value.

"Keep them small, but keep them coming," is the theme of many letters arriving from the United Kingdom.

What to send? Home-made sweets are fine, but you'll have to take the necessary sugar from your ration. (Canadian troops overseas are allowed a sugar ration of 14 oz. a week). Hard cookies, short breads, hermits and fruit breads and cakes are favorites.

If you send home-made candy, pour it directly into a cardboard or tin container lined with waxed paper. Don't cut in pieces. It travels better whole.

Send notepaper, pencils, packs of cards, tooth paste, razor blades, cigarettes, tobacco, handkerchiefs, socks, chocolate bars, toffee, fudge, butterscotch, lifesavers and chewing gum. The last two items make good chink fillers between packages as do handkerchief tissues.

Wrap foods carefully. In packing cookies, line the box with waxed paper and put a thin cardboard between each layer. Place less perishable kinds at the bottom.

Use sturdy lightweight container and stout wrapping paper and wrap or tie all parcels securely. Remember the 11-lb. maximum. A lot of goodness and variety can be packed into a 6-lb. parcel.

5,000-MILE TRAIN-PLANE DASH TO SEE SICK CHILD

From Stratford, Eng., comes the dash from an air station in the Canadian prairies by LAC Jim Challis of Stratford to visit his little daughter, very seriously ill with diphtheria, who cried and fretted so much for her father it was felt by physicians her life could not be saved unless Challis came to see her. He was 5,000 miles away but authorization for the trip was obtained. He was allowed to take home a quantity of oranges for three-year-old June. Challis, telling of the rush trip, said he fell asleep on the giant Liberator bomber and on waking discovered he had been resting his head on the shoulder of an air vice-marshall. He has been posted to a British air station in order that he may see his little daughter frequently. Physicians are agreed the meeting between father and child has done the little girl "a world of good" and that she will probably recover.

MUNICIPAL DISTRICT BEAVER LAKE NO. 486

All members of Council attended the regular meeting of Council of M.D. of Beaver Lake No. 486, held at Ryley on Saturday, June 13, 1942.

Complaints against current assessments were heard and assessment roll was finally accepted as the revised assessment for 1942.

A number of delegations of ratepayers and other interested persons waited on Council in connection with road construction proposed to be undertaken. Delegations were headed by the following persons: Mr. O'Brien of Mundare, Mr. Sam Prasnowski, Mundare, Mr. Blake, Holden, Major F. W. W. Fane, Mundare, Councillors Seniuk, and Borysiuk, M.D. of the Pines and Mr. J. Baraniuk of Poe. Most of the day was spent in listening to the representations of the various delegations and when the shouting and tumult died away, Council confirmed the original plan, which was to construct a graded road from the N.W. Sec. 11 North two miles to the N.W. Sec. 23, T. 51, R. 17, thence easterly three miles to the S.E. of Sec. 30, T. 51, R. 16, thence northerly two miles to the N.E. Sec. 31, T. 51, R. 16, W. 4th M. The Government is being asked for an additional grant which would make it possible to complete this road North to the Northerly boundary of the Municipal District.

Councillor Houston was authorized to arrange for a right of way to the J. Baraniuk farm.

Relief was approved for Mrs. E. M. Heinig at $10.00 monthly.

Secretary was instructed to apply for a priorities rating in the matter of machinery repairs, etc.

Reeve Kubin reported on the meeting of municipal councillors held at Vegreville recently when a resolution was passed asking the Government to postpone plans for large municipal units during the present emergency.

The application of Mr. D. Zuk for general store license was approved.

The provisions of the Acts relating to minimum municipal and school taxes were interpreted as excluding sons and daughters of resident taxpayers and other farm labourers earning not more than $20.00 per month, from the operation of minimum taxes.

Secretary will attend Municipal Refresher Course to be held in Edmonton, June 17, 18, and 19th, during which time the office will be closed.

Reports indicate the collection of salvage materials is well advanced in the District. Each councillor was instructed to lend every assistance to the campaign, by way of supervisory or in any other capacity as conditions warrant.

Next meeting will be held Saturday, July 11th, 1942, commencing at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

DO YOU KNOW?

That a "Mae West" is a lifebelt worn by aircrew.

That a "sortie" is an operation carried out by the Air Force against the enemy.

That the rank of "Squadron Leader" (R.C.A.F.) is equivalent rank to "Major" (Army) "Lieutenant Commander" (Navy).

That the R.C.A.F. needs young men (Grade X) for immediate enlistment as Wireless Operator-Air Gunners.

That Pilots don't talk of flying aerial combat planes but of clambering into a "crate" to go "upstairs" for a "look see".

That potential aircrew graduate from Initial Training School (I.T.S.) as Leading Aircraftsmen (LAC) they receive $1.50 per day plus 75 cents a day flying pay.

That a Wireless Operator-Air Gunner is the "ears" of the plane, he is the man who tells the ground staff what's what and in turn learn what's what from them.

That the average air craft has 15,000 parts not counting nuts and bolts. To the average engine there are another 5,000 parts.

That the R.C.A.F. needs young men (Grade XII) as potential Radio Technicians for immediate enlistment.

That the R.C.A.F. has already had to supply 60,000 greatcoats, 150,000 uniforms, 112,000 pairs of boots, 400,000 blankets.

That a "Belly Landing" is when a pilot lands a "plane" without dropping the landing wheels. It is only resorted to in an emergency as it generally damages the plane.

That an aeroplane is said to "pancake" when it is brought down in a glide, levelled off above the ground and slowed down until it loses all flying speed and drops. Resorted to only when making a forced landing on rough ground, in a forest or muskeg.

Behind The Headlines

Notwithstanding the headlines which are concurrently reporting the vigorous performances by the outstanding stars of all parties in the great game of politics in Parliament, yet an experienced observer must inform the man-in-the-street that these results of the session so far are merely spectacular exploits and from the standpoint of national interest, nothing more.

To mention that any political issue alone, even on conscription, as the dominant issue in this nation at war is commonplace. To contend that any political issue will finally determine the fate and future of this nation at war is to exaggerate.

No political issue alone is of major importance now because it is recognized in well-informed circles behind the scenes on Parliament Hill that in any real national emergency during this war close team play can be expected to be the very essence of matters wholly political. It cannot be otherwise before the rising tide of public interest and enthusiasm in this war. In other words, public opinion is a much stronger influence amongst the people in this war than these proverbial dramatic interludes in the theatre of politics and this influence will shape the course of this country's more rigid and more militant actions in this war.

As a rule, an observer cannot foretell or even guess at public opinion in wartime with any degree of absolute certainty but now the situation is exceptional because there is an overwhelmingly powerful reaction in favour of nothing short of all-out help in every respect for Great Britain above everything else with the implication that the coming weeks will unfold this fact in the vital news from the nation's capital.

Before the outbreak of this war and since that time, extreme partisans and professional as well as amateur propagandists have tried desperately to stimulate situations where public opinion in this country would be disorganized and where the people would be quarrelling amongst themselves in regard to helping Great Britain in wartime. But it is now clear that the efforts of these internal enemies have failed badly. Today, as a result, public opinion in this country is more thoroughly and more absolutely inclined towards the influence of Great Britain than ever before in the history of Canada.

What are these powerful influences?

While this country has been entitled to complete legal autonomy since the Statute of Westminster, yet the influences in every direction of Great Britain in the everyday life of this nation have continued to be quite marked and these influences have brought numerous advantages in recent years just as they have for centuries.

First, one powerful influence has been the fact that the practical form of our democracy, the parliamentary system of government, has followed the British system so closely that it has stood up just as well here as in Great Britain through various political storms of war, scandal, economic crisis, and internal dissension. Any or all of these events have brought disaster to democratic parliaments in other countries, such as Germany, France, Italy, etc., where prior to this war numerous political parties and frequent changes of government actually caused the democratic parliaments in these lands to be no longer respected by the people and to be paralyzed. This did not happen in Great Britain and it will not happen here. In fact, it is more likely that strong team work in political life during any real emergency would result in Canada just as it happened in Great Britain where National Government came into existence under the stress of war emergencies.

Second, another strong influence has been the fact of the stable economic, industrial, and financial relationships between Canada and Great Britain and these have grown spontaneously ever since the arrival on these shores of the first immigrants from the British Isles who founded these enterprises here or who started the flow in this direction of capital.

Third, a great influence has been the fact that the people of Canada and Great Britain have been travelling on the same cultural road for centuries. Indeed, every cultural development in the Motherland has been characterized by a somewhat similar reaction in this country and evidence of this fact can be found in many places, with this influence being especially emphatic in the institutions of learning.

Fourth, a tremendous influence has been the fact that almost every progressive social movement in Great Britain has found its counterpart in Canada, and on the other hand, disciples of the progressive movements of other countries, such as Russia, Germany and others, have not been successful in spreading their doctrines in this country because the masses looked upon them as "foreign influences". Thus, it is no secret that British labor movements have been imitated in Canada and when these British labor movements or interests turned their attention to the political as well as economic field, a similar reaction followed in Canada.

In digest, in face of all internal controversies which are now overcasting the political heavens, yet these aforementioned influences on public opinion in this country are much stronger and far more lasting than any of these temporary disturbances. These aforementioned influences are not merely imbibed in the national sentiment. They have always been and still are of a practical nature. In the crisis of the American Revolution which started in 1775, these influences in favour of Great Britain disclosed themselves in Canada. In the crisis of the war of 1812 when even the capital in Washington was burned, these influences in favour of Great Britain disclosed themselves. In the crisis of many heated border disputes these influences in favour of Great Britain disclosed themselves in Canada. In the crisis of the Civil War, these influences in favour of Great Britain disclosed themselves. In the crisis of the last World War, these influences in favour of Great Britain disclosed themselves. Today, in the crisis of the present World War, these same influences in favour of Great Britain are not only dominant factors but they are stronger in themselves in Canada than ever before in their power to affect, modify, or to sway public opinion in this war.

In the face of the headlines reporting the vigorous performances so far in this session of the stars of all parties in the great game of politics in Parliament, yet no political issue, even on conscription or anything else, can be master of public opinion since public opinion is predominant. And there is no doubt now what influences will affect public opinion in this war involving Canada as much as Great Britain and the other allies. These influences on public opinion overshadow all other reports from Parliament Hill.

WEDDING

TIEDEMAN—MORRISON

A quiet but pretty wedding was performed on Monday, June 15th, at the home of Mr. John Morrison, when Helen Margaret, his eldest daughter was united in marriage to Henry Joseph Tiedeman of Hardisty. Rev. I. N. Hughson, pastor of St. Paul's United Church was the officiating minister.

The bride was given away by her father. Ralph White of Hardisty and Mrs. James Morrison were witnesses to the ceremony.

The bride looked very charming, attired in a beautiful gown of blue, with hat and accessories to match, and wore a corsage of American Beauty Roses.

As the Register was being signed, Miss Roberta Scott sang "Because" and was accompanied by Miss Laura Wager.

The wedding dinner table centred by a lovely Bridal Cake, was attended by only a few of the Bride's relatives and special friends, who happily partook of the excellent repast.

The many beautiful and useful gifts were an eloquent expression of the high esteem and popularity in which the bride, who has lived here all her life, and has taken an active part in Sunday School, the Choir and Young Peoples Activities.

Hearty Congratulations from a wide circle of friends are extended to the happy couple, who after their brief honeymoon, will take up residence in Hardisty, where both will resume their tonsorial art.

Ideal Weather Favors Tofield Sports Day

Brilliant sunshine and glorious weather featured Tofield's Red Cross Sports day on the first, and from one o'clock onwards a steady stream of visitors trekked through the two gates to enjoy once again Tofield's premier summer event.

The outstanding features of the day was Tofield's outstanding baseball scores; the see saw battle between Tofield and Ryley girls' softball teams and the way the attendants at the hot dog and refreshment stand were kept on the run. From one p.m. to six p.m. the booth did a land office business.

The first baseball game of the day was between Tofield and McKenzie. The Tofield boys, sparked by the brilliant performance of the kid battery mates—Ches McAllister and Johnny Berild, plus Charley Sears' nice work on third base, went to win a 11-0 shut out. Ptes. Bailey and Stauffer were on hand to help out with some real effective stick work. You people all know these two boys from the last few years and their presence has always been damage to any opposition.

The batteries for Tofield: D. McAllister and Berild. For McKenzie, Phillips, J. Erickson and Olson, Jess Jones.

The second game featured a hard fought contest between Holden and Dodds. Dodds finally edged out a 7-6 win behind some steady pitching by Ironman Steen, who also played havoc with the bat. Holden had a few players from all along the line, as most of their players are in the armed services and could not be present.

The batteries for Holden were Ted Appleby and Schultz. For Dodds, Steen and Bruce.

The final game between Tofield and Dodds is something everyone is still talking about. Manager Frank Johnsrud is probably one of the happiest fellows walking around today. Being rated under dogs in the final contest, the locals unleased a terrific bombardment and shelled four Dodds hurlers from the mound to win a 17-3 upset. The game was scheduled for nine innings, but was called at the end of the sixth. The locals just could not do anything wrong and everyone was hitting the ball. Stauffer with his stylish curve ball held the ever dangerous Dodds men to very few hits behind some very fine support. The batteries were: Dodds, Bruce, W. Chappell, E. Chappell, Olson and H. Hjalter; and for Tofield, Stauffer and Berild.

The first softball game was between Holden and Tofield. Both teams put up a good showing before a fairly large crowd of spectators. Tofield won the game by the score of 12-6.

Ryley and Silver Lake then met. This was a good game but the Ryley girls were a little too good for the Silver Lake team and won the game by the score 9-4.

The final softball game which was played on the large diamond was the tid-bit of the day. Tofield and Ryley battled it out nip and tuck all the way. The game was shifted over to the small diamond for the last two or three innings which was a pity, as regardless of what the score would otherwise have been, the large crowd was getting a genuine thrill out of the play. The final score was 15-13 in favor of Ryley.

The bicycle races, while not numerous were popular. First race, 1st, K. Imler; 2nd, Billie Lee; 3rd, Earl Rose. 2nd race, 1st Joe Davenport; 2, E. Wilson; 3, Bernie Chandler. Girls' race: 1st, Betty Stinson; 2nd, J. Wiltmen; 3, ———— Lee.

The foot races were as popular as ever and much loose silver was handed out.

The horseshoe tournament clicked right along and some excellent horseshoe pitching was seen. Dodds and partner won first place, and Phillips and partner, second place.

Jack Whyte, assisted by others, kept the crowd informed regarding the different events by use of the public address system.

As in previous years the dance held in the Variety Theatre was crowded, those present being in a happy and jovial mood.

SPECTACULAR ATTRACTIONS COMING EDMONTON EXHIBITION

Spectacular grandstand attractions, a two-ring circus and other Midway attractions, six days of horse racing, with seven races each day, a marvellous display by a squadron of the R.C.A.F. No. 3 Depot (M) and No. 4 I.T.S. Edmonton, are but a few of the items that have been assembled for this year's Edmonton Exhibition to be held July 13 to 18 inclusive.

The grandstand show is possibly the best that has ever visited Western Canada, and includes well-known stars of the stage, screen and radio. Many new acts are included in the cast, including several British acts. Magnificent stage effects and brilliant lighting combine to make this show a perfect treat.

Heading a galaxy of stars in the All-Canadian Frolicland, 1942, is the star from the Big-Top, 35 year old Terrell M. Jacobs, wild animal trainer and exhibitor whose animal [illegible] will be one of the main attractions on the Midway.

The menagerie coming to the summer fair includes, in addition to lions, tigers, clever elephants, South American Llamas, horses and dogs.

In addition to the animal show Frolicland is showing an original South Sea Island production, The Swim Cade, the Oriental Follies, thrilling and new rides, and many other novel side shows.

Reduced railway fares will be available from all points in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, with the exception of Vancouver Island and the B.C. Coast service.

Advance sale of Admission tickets went into effect this week and are on sale at the usual depots in all towns, and villages in Northern Alberta.

KETCHAMOOT

News has been few and far between the past two weeks, owing to so much rain, but we are not complaining. They were real showers of blessings, and now that it has cleared and turned warm, just watch things grow.

Miss Edith Davison of the W.A.C. of Calgary spent the week end at the home of her mother, Mrs. Davison. On Sunday evening, Mrs. Davison, Miss Edith and William, Mrs. H. McCall and Harold Coombes motored to the city where Edith caught the bus for Calgary.

All aboard for the Ketchamoot picnic which will be held next Wednesday, July 8, on the Sears farm. Dinner at one o'clock and in the evening, consisting of chicken, baked beans, potato salad, pie, cake, hot dogs, etc., not to mention being waited on by a swell bunch of ladies. The boys have a full day of sports rounded up. Admission free, everybody welcome and please do not come and just sit around in cars, but get around and visit with your friends and neighbors.

One day last week when splitting wood, Harold Coombes had the misfortune to have the ax slip and cut his hand. Eight stitches had to be taken by Dr. Caldwell.

Mrs. Henderson is lending a helping hand at the Schultz home.

Mrs. Annie Lee is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Thomas in Edmonton.

ARMED FORCES AIR LETTER FORMS

To expedite delivery of letters to Fighting Services Abroad

On June 15th, Armed Forces Air Letter forms were introduced by the Canadian Post Office Department to provide the mailing public with an additional economical and speedy method of communicating with members of our Armed Forces abroad.

Taking advantage of Canada's Air Mail network and air connections, this new method of communication being introduced by the Hon. W. P. Mulock, K.C., M.P., Postmaster General, will cut to a minimum the time taken by letters under wartime conditions to reach the Boys Overseas.

The new forms will be available at any Post Office and the postage rate will be only 10c a letter—no matter to what part of the World the Air letter is addressed. For this 10c fee the Post Office Department will have the letter transmitted to its destination by the most expeditious method of transit. The low 10c rate applies, Postal authorities emphasize, only on letters written on the special Air Letter forms provided and addressed to members of the Canadian, British or Allied Armed Forces Overseas.

The new Armed Forces Air Letter form is of light-weight paper, blue in colour, measures about ten and a half inches by seven and a quarter, and is provided with a gummed flap by which the letter is sealed. The dimensions of the form permit a message of ample length to be written. The form folds (with message inside) into a letter about four and three-quarters by three and three-quarters. On the address side is printed "Armed Forces Air Letter" "By Air Mail", with a space reserved for a 10c postage stamp. As a guide to the sender a correct sequence of Military addressing is printed, enabling the sender to fill in the blanks with particulars of address. No enclosures are to accompany an armed forces Air Letter—the sender is cautioned that if anything is enclosed the letter will be sent by ordinary mail. A space is reserved on the reverse side of the form for the sender's full name and address.

It is anticipated that this unique economical time saving system will be widely adopted as it provides a ready means for people in Canada to communicate with members of their family or friends in the Armed Forces Overseas in whatever part of the World they may be serving.

National War Finance Committee

The Week in Edmonton

Commenting on the new federal budget provisions, Premier Aberhart said Wednesday: "It has always been my contention that if the dominion government is able to issue bonds to meet the cost of the war, it is also able to issue bills for the same purpose. The bills have this advantage – they have no interest charges and no debt is created." He added that "The existing situation as far as the national economy is concerned presents an anomaly. On the one hand the government has set a price ceiling on the cost of goods to the consumer; on the other, the huge increase in taxation will have a tendency to force an increase in prices. But there is nothing we can do about it under the present system of financing the country's needs. This budget should do more to bring home to the people the dire consequences of the financial system."

Announcing incorporation of a number of new co-operatives in the province, F. J. Fitzgerald, acting supervisor for the trade and industry department, said growing interest is being shown in the implement supply type of co-operative association. Among the new groups of this type are those at Lethbridge and Bow River. New cheese factory associations have been formed at Allinghan and Raymond, while store business associations have been chartered at Mundare, Donnelly, Stettler, Hairy Hill, Goodwin, Spirit River and Girouxville. At the end of May there were in the province 176 active co-operatives, of which 60 were general stores, 25 farm supply, 25 live stock marketing, 15 live stock feeding, 16 dairy and poultry and 35 sundry associations.

First of its kind in Canada, a credit union has been formed by wives and mothers of men on active service, and was presented with charter by Hon. E. C. Manning in Edmonton this week. Members are those relatives of service men who also are members of the various auxiliary services. Judging by the enthusiasm of these pioneers, it is expected that other credit unions will be formed by women connected with specific auxiliary organizations.

V V V

A new vocational type credit union has been formed by employees of the province at the Ponoka Mental Hospital, and charter was registered June 18 with the department of trade and industry. Signatories to the memorandum of association include men and one woman representing a wide variety of occupations. Presentation of the charter will be made at an early date.

WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

When citizens in rural districts receive applications for their sugar ration cards, they should promptly fill them in, printing their names in block letters and return them to the mail carrier. If they are accustomed to receiving their mail from a post office, then the post office will see that the card goes to the proper office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, after the applicant has printed his name and address in the right place.

In cities and towns where there are postal walks a volunteer representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board will collect the applications on the momentous day, June 25.

Now the women come on duty. Throughout Canada the task of recording sugar ration cards will be done in 106 centres, each centre under a supervisor representing the Women's Advisory Committee of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Four of these centres are in Alberta. Recording for the entire province will take place in Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. This work will be done on June 26, 27, 29 and 30.

Mrs. Frank J. Conroy of Edmonton, as provincial regional chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee, is working with regional supervisors, Mrs. R. L. Nicholson of Calgary, Mrs. A. S. Pumerton of Lethbridge and Miss M. Fowler of Medicine Hat. Each supervisor convenes an effective working committee.

Enlarge the picture of the provincial set-up to take in all of Canada. You see 20,000 women at work to issue 12,000,000 sugar ration cards, providing the means of fair division of a scarce commodity. It is the biggest job yet asked of Canadian women. In their task, everyone is a volunteer, everyone a patriot.

Humorous Man (in street car) — Has anyone dropped a wad of notes with an elastic band round them?

Chorus of voices—Yes; I have!

Well, I've just picked up the elastic band."

Edmonton's first full-scale air raid alert, under the watchful eye of provincial, municipal and military heads, found the city's A.R.P. organization swinging into action with a speed that promises successful action if the real thing ever comes. Nearly 3,000 workers went to their allotted posts, handled 2,500 "incidents" ranging from splinter wounds to lotting and H.E. Bomb damage, and showed what enthusiasm and organization can do to knit together a closely integrated civil defense body. Bottlenecks were revealed, as is natural, but the test pointed the way to improvement of services.

JOHN BURKE-GAFFNEY

A young man who has deliberately set out to equip himself as a trained and experienced general practitioner of radio is John Burke-Gaffney, sound effects operator at CBC'S Winnipeg studios.

John, as you might suspect, is of Irish origin, the son of parents who came from Dublin to Winnipeg nearly thirty years ago. He has all the brains, dramatic sense and quick wit of his Irish ancestors, and the pioneering West has endowed him with a capacity for hard work. At twenty he has already been labouring for more than two years at his chosen profession of radio, which he sees as an art and a science requiring dramatic ability, knowledge of music, and above all, technical training.

John first entered radio as an actor, on CBC casts under Producer Charles P. Wright. Sound effects interested him then, and so did the whole technique of radio broadcasting, with the result that presently he put acting aside and retired to St. Boniface Industrial School for a heavy course in radio physics. Completing this, he joined the staff of a Winnipeg station as a straight operator—good experience, which, however, did not satisfy him. Summer relief as an announcer on another station followed, after which he joined the CBC Sound Effects Unit, a development of the Corporation's Engineering Department, and the last word in radio technique. The programmes John works on in the Winnipeg studios can be heard over Station CBK, Watrous (540 kcs.)

LINDBROOK

The countryside looks grand after the rain, although some report that there was a bit too much of it for some things. Cucumber plants seem to have rotted and the cold wet weather hasn't favored the barley crop.

Coyotes have been busy too, of late, several sheep raisers having lost lambs by their depredations. One farmer we hear having lost very heavily. Seems as if all our trappers must be in the Army now, after a different species of coyote, a rather lower grade, in fact.

Miss Marian Smith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith of Lindbrook, left on a trip to the coast. We hope she thoroughly enjoys her holiday there.

A party of old friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Glenn last Sunday afternoon, to celebrate the silver wedding anniversary of their old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Weatherill of Tofield. A dainty lunch was served, and during same, Mr. and Mrs. Weatherill were presented with some silver, the gift of the assembled friends, to honor the occasion.

Mr. Gerhardt Schmidt underwent a successful operation in an Edmonton hospital and expects to be home soon.

The last of the Free Shows for this season was held last Friday evening at the Hall and despite the weather quite a sizable crowd turned out to enjoy same. The show was very good, and at its close, Mr. Richardson proposed a vote of thanks to the operator for his efforts and he in turn thanked the Hall board for the use of the Hall and courtesies extended to him on his visits. He said that the shows would probably reopen about September, but in the interim that he might put on a commercial show, and to watch out for advertising re same. Mr. R. Heichen also spoke on the buying of scrap metal by the Govt. The Government has authorized all elevators to buy same and pay will be by Government voucher payable anywhere. The price is $7 a ton f.o.b. elevator, but if you have any at all, it will be weighed and checked at elevator and payment made according to weight. Thus, if you have 100 pounds you'll get 35c; 1000 pounds, $3.50; 1500 pounds $5.25; and so on. It is all listed from 5 pounds at 1c to 2000 pounds at $7.00, payable by voucher at elevator. So haul your stuff there and see if Lindbrook can't ship at least one car, that is, 30,000 pounds. This metal is badly needed for munitions, etc., but about tin, automobile bodies and fenders, stove pipes, wooden attachments are not wanted, and will not be accepted as scrap. So load your junk up, clear up your yard and put Lindbrook on the map and help put the Axis off it.

The V.V.R. parade was very well attended and looked quite a military outfit, what with the caps, rifles, and arm bands, and believe me, they look and act like trained troops, at least that was the compliment paid them by Mr. A. B. Clutterham of Tofield, Cpl. Boyle of the R.A.F., and C. Herbert, who is on leave here for 12 days, so we feel quite pleased with ourselves. Mr. Clutterham gave the boys a little talk on army subjects and also took the salute on the march past. Cpl. Boyle of the R.A.F. is in the medical section of that force, and also gave a talk to the ladies attending the nursing class which was in session in the Hall the same evening. Three new recruits signed up, bringing the total strength up to 54. The "4th Division" consisting of 10 juniors also drilled under Ptn. Cdr. Bracegirdle and Sergt. Morden are coming on fine too. It was decided to join the Fultonvale unit at the Social Credit picnic on Saturday. Caps, armbands and medal ribbons to be worn. And by the way, orders from headquarters in Edmonton state that those having medals shall wear ribbons for same on all parades from now on. Also it was decided that should Tuesday evening be wet, that parade be held on Thursday evening of the same week.

The School picnic at Lakeview went off very well. Lovely weather and the children were taken by car to the grounds where from all accounts, they thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Here is a suggestion in answer to the perennial question, "How are we to raise money for the club?" How about showing a film, instead of having a tea?

The National Film Board at Ottawa has films which can be obtained free of charge for the use of women's clubs. Most the pictures were taken in England and have to do with civil defense and women in war work. They can be obtained by writing to Miss Anne Macdonnell, National Film Board, Ottawa.

ARMY WEEK—

THE PUBLISHER OF this paper is probably one of the least belligerent individuals in the district. And whatever an individual's belief may be, we feel that when a person commences to write or speak concerning things military, he should have more than mere imagination back of him as a guide. Believing this, it is with a degree of reluctance that we mention the subject of Army Week, yet we feel that it is a subject of sufficient importance that to neglect to mention it would be a still worse offence.

This week throughout Canada is being celebrated as Army Week. As announced in last week's Mercury, in the cities and army centres, special programs have been arranged and where possible, the public have been invited to visit army centres and encampments to obtain first hand information regarding the kind of lives Canadian soldiers live. Special menus in hotels, on trains and elsewhere, direct attention to the present day excellence of army fare. And without becoming tiresome by listing the numerous things that are being done, it can be said that the intention is to do honor to the army, inform the public and to make the nation army conscious.

If Canadians will cast their minds back over the past twenty years, they will remember that, while all honor was accorded those who fought in the 1914-18 conflict, public opinion and temper was such that most things, one could almost say all things, pertaining to military trappings was frowned upon. War with all its misery, it was hoped could for us, be forgotten. But while we were deliberately turning the faces of our rising generation away from war and all it implied, other nations, nations that had been defeated in the 1914-18 conflict were doing the exact opposite. These nations were teaching their rising generation to look upon war as their natural heritage. They were constantly emphasizing the glories of war, the possible gains of war and the necessity of war. While Canada, Great Britain and the United States were following a peace ideology, Germany, Italy and Japan were following a warlike one.

The result of this teaching is being seen to-day and there is little doubt that the blue of the air force has a greater attraction for many of our young folk than the khaki of the army. It is partly to offset this that Army week is being held. It has now come to the time when our attention and interest must be directed to army matters whether we like it or not, and having become interested in the army, feel a degree of pride in it.

We have mentioned before that the interests of the Dominion of Canada and the United States of America are almost identical. Canadian and American soldiers are fighting side by side, they speak the same language, follow many of the same enjoyments, and were it not for their uniforms it would not be easy to tell them apart. There is one difference, however, the American soldier receives $50.00 per month and the Canadian $40.00. It may not be the highest form of patriotism to consider money matters in relation to service to one's country, but an extra $10.00 a month to the private soldier would be quite a satisfaction to many both in and out of the service.

KEEP SUMMER HEALTH STANDARD—

SUMMER IS GENERALLY looked upon as a restorative season—a time when we can laugh and play and generally relax in our glorious sunshine and so generally build up our resistance for the more demanding winter months.

Summer too, though, brings its health hazards which whilst well known to all, are unfortunately neglected by thousands. Contaminated water and milk, unsafe food supplies, over familiarity with "Old Sol" or poison ivy, to say nothing of the possible tragedy of drowning, may mar the holiday you had planned to restore your health.

The Health League of Canada offers the following rules for safe and happy holidays:

1. Take sunbaths in easy doses.
2. Learn what poison ivy looks like and teach your children too—then avoid it.
3. Be sure your water-supply is pure.
4. Make certain the milk you buy is pasteurized—if not, pasteurize it yourself.
5. Don't take too much exercise at once.
6. Don't swim on a full stomach.
7. Learn how to paddle or row.
8. Learn how to do artificial respiration—you may save somebody's life.

MAY GOATS HAVE SUGAR RATIONS?

The question was a highlight in the Vancouver sugar ration office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. One owner, among several who phoned, asked to have her goat's name printed on the application. No sugar was allowed Nanny or Billy however, although use of molasses having just been taken off their diet they had been enjoying Demerara sugar.

"The goats would probably eat the ration card anyway," commented one official, while the local tire rationing officer sighed with relief, "I thought goats lived on rubber, this is a break for me."

NAPOLEON ONCE SAID — "Do you know what is harder to bear than reverses of fortune? It is the baseness, the hideous ingratitude of man." How truly he spoke. Let us not allow anyone in service, or out of it, feel that we have exhibited ingratitude in any form. A deeper appreciation of the tremendous sacrifice being made by all who don the uniform is sorely needed. Let us make Army Week an occasion for renewing and developing our appreciation of the priceless sacrifice these boys are making for us who are still at home.

FARM DEBTS TO BE DISCUSSED

Edmonton, June 22— Farm debts of the west will be discussed by representatives of all three prairie provinces at a conference in Saskatoon, June 29 and 30, it was announced by Hon. Lucien Maynard, minister of municipal affairs, this week. The minister, who sponsored provincial debt legislation in the House, made the announcement following meetings of the program committee representing Alberta farm bodies, which was set up following an initial conference in Edmonton. Premier of both Saskatchewan and Manitoba have signified willingness to have their provinces represented, and Premier Patterson said he had requested the provincial wheat pool, united farmers of Canada and rural municipalities association to send representatives. A proposal drawn up by the Alberta committee will be submitted to representatives of Alberta farm organizations Wednesday, June 24 in Calgary.

POLICE KEEP CHECK ON CAR SPEEDSTERS

Police officers are maintaining a sharp check on drivers who exceed the speed limit, set by order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, of 40 miles per hour in all parts of Canada, according to reports received by the Alberta Motor Association.

In some parts of the province, stiff fines have been imposed on those found guilty of breaking the law.

With the amount of motor travel expected to increase during the holiday season, there will be greater need of drivers exercising care on the highways.

Not only should they make certain that their rate of speed is in accordance with regulations, but they should make sure that there are no mechanical defects likely to cause accidents.

In some of the provinces special facilities have been provided to enable drivers to secure a check-up on the condition of their motor car and have it placed in the best shape possible.

In these times when economy of operation is essential, and it is necessary to make tires last longer, every facility for securing the most efficient operating results possible should be resorted to by motorists. Economy and safety go hand in hand.

CANADIAN FISH GOOD SUMMER FOOD

Don't pass up fish as a summer food. Frequently fresh fish caught in local waters is not only better, but cheaper than when shipped in.

"Get to know local varieties, and the days these are available at your dealer's," advises Miss Hazel Freeman, lecturer-demonstrator, Department of Fisheries. Current prices make fish worth investigating as a meat substitute. It has excellent food value, having high percentages of protein, fats, energy foods, minerals essential to health, and vitamins including A and D in the fat.

In selecting fish note that thick plump ones give best value for the money. See that the flesh is firm and shiny, eyes and gills bright, and skin glossy.

High temperature is essential to successful fish cookery. Oven should be 450 F. and frying fat piping hot in order to coagulate the natural juices which give fish its fine flavour. Fish does not require long cooking. Allow 10 minutes per inch thickness, at 450 F. Some of the softer varieties require only six to eight minutes at this temperature. Test with a knife. When the flesh has lost its watery appearance it is sufficiently cooked. To preserve the natural juices when boiling tie in parchment and use the juice for accompanying sauce.

Fry fish in dripping rather than butter. If a butter flavour is desired, pour melted butter over the fish when it is on the platter. The high temperature required for the fish makes butter brown and indigestible.

Foods served with fish should have contrast in flavor and color. Serve lemon, tomatoes, pickled beets, cucumbers with vinegar, or cole slaw.

NO PROFIT IN THIS TIRE SALE

Just as a favor, William Widner, Service Station Employee in Toronto, sold a second hand tire which had gone nearly 5000 miles to Anthony Frasson, riveter in war industry. Widner, who paid $20.00 for the tire, sold it for $22.00, thinking his price just and reasonable, but thereupon was fined $75.00 and costs or [illegible] in jail.

J. W. Schultz, director of used tires and rubber goods for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, testified that a new tire of the type sold by Widner retails at $21.55, affirming that such a tire having travelled 5000 miles was not worth more than $15.00.

Canadian Pacific Air Lines Girls Keep Trainers Flying

CANADIAN PACIFIC AIR LINES are making a notable contribution to Canada's war effort in the elementary training and engine overhaul fields. The young ladies shown above are working long and hard in the production end of the flying game and their tireless efforts are of real importance in [illegible] blowing Hitler and Hirohito off the map.

In shops located at strategic points throughout the Dominion, girls who were once stenographers, sales girls and students, are now busily engaged under the Canadian Pacific Air Lines banner. Picture on the left shows Miss Ina Lane putting all the energy of her twenty years into [illegible] her bit to [illegible] other trooper Wesley Lane, who is overseas with the Fort Garry Horse. With her is Miss Muriel Carr, also twenty, and both of them are mending the wing structure of a trainer plane. The upper right hand picture shows Miss Muriel Stevenson, who confesses that she would rather assemble instrument panels as a contribution to the cause than sell dry goods in a department store. Her heart is in the work and the panels go together with a will. The lower right picture shows Miss Florence Nordal in a Canadian Pacific Air Lines operated engine overhaul plant. She is testing valve springs tension, a far-cry from her old job of [illegible] manners.

All the girls in this industry have one motto and it is to keep the training planes flying.

This is the kind of spirit that Hitler cannot match and is one of the factors which will eventually soundly defeat him.

VITAMIN A IN SWINE FEEDING

(Experimental Farms News)

A whole menagerie of pig ailments have been experienced by the Dominion Experimental Station, Beaverlodge, Alta., in pen-fed [illegible] a sufficiency of vitamin A. The symptoms have been unfailingly prevented, and all but two of the most advanced cases have been cured in a month or two, by feeding milk, cod-liver oil, Pilchardene or alfalfa.

The first symptom of vitamin A deficiency was a strained facial expression and a peculiar position of the ears. The next symptoms usually noticed are excitability, unsteadiness of gait and a tendency to paralysis, especially in the hindquarters. Bad cases became prostrated and went off feed. Diverse symptoms noted in one case or another were: wry neck; stringhalt gait; failure of front and hindquarters to "track"; walking in circles; S-shaped twisting of the back; sprawling backward in attempts to walk forward and general inco-ordination of muscular movements. One pig died suddenly with a foamy discharge at the nostrils. Another collapsed in paroxysm with similar discharge but recovered under treatment. A few mild cases improved without treatment.

Pigs on the deficient rations gained fully as well for a time as those fed Pilchardene on alfalfa, then at four or five months of age one after another, irrespective of the grain ration fed, developed peculiar symptoms, while pen mates and litter mates escaped serious ailment. Unlike most other vitamins, A may be stored in the system, carrying an animal along till the supply is depleted.

Prevention is simple. Skim milk with a trace of butter fat in it, green or yellow forage, such as alfalfa, turned the trick. If these are not available 2½ teaspoonfuls of Pilchardene daily may be substituted. For pigs deprived of direct sunlight this has the added advantage of supplying vitamin D, which prevents rickets.

Pictures are shown of cripples fully cured and going to market as grade-A carcasses after a few weeks on Pilchardene or some other source of vitamin A.

KEEP SEWING MACHINE IN GOOD CONDITION

No more sewing machines for home use will be manufactured while there is acute need for metals for war, the Department of Munitions and Supply has ruled.

When those now in process of manufacture and stocks on hand are disposed of there will be nothing else to do but make those available give the longest service possible. Permits will be granted for making essential repair parts, but extra care may often eliminate this procedure.

Take care of your sewing machine needles. To avoid breaking see that the presser foot or attachments are securely fastened by the thumb screw. A large needle and thread to correspond should be used on heavy work. Avoid pulling material when stitching to avoid bending the needle and thus rendering it useless. The machine feeds the work without assistance.

If the machine runs hard after standing idle for some time, use a little kerosene in the oiling parts, run the machine rapidly, then wipe clean and oil. Keep well oiled at all points indicated in the instructions that come with the machine.

See that the belt has correct tension. This should be only enough to keep the belt from slipping.

The most important event, each year, connected with the production of pure seed, is the annual meeting of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association. This was held during the third week in June at Olds, Alberta. Prominent seed growers from all over Canada were gathered in the Provincial School of Agriculture and [illegible] to discuss ways and means of maintaining and improving the quality of Canadian seeds. No one could attend these meetings without wondering what would happen to the yield and quality of our field crops were it not for the efforts of a comparatively small group of hard-working seed growers.

Regulations governing the production of Registered seed are made by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association. Field and seed inspections, essential to the accuracy of pedigrees and observance of purity standards, are the responsibility of the Plant Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The various terms applied to the different types of seeds are confusing to many farmers. Actually they need not be. By purchasing Registered seed, the farmer can be assured of pedigree and performance. This is all he desires when buying a pure-bred bull or boar.

We cannot avoid the use of terms such as Foundation seed, Elite seed, Registered seed and Certified seed. Hitherto we have had First Generation Registered, 2nd, 3rd, 4th Generations, and so on. Each year, the seed is one more year removed from Elite, which produces First Generation Registered. However, the standards of purity are the same for all generations, so as long as a stock will pass field and seed inspection it might as well be just "Registered." At the Olds meeting it was decided to adopt this practice; namely, to have "First Generation Registered" and, thereafter, "Registered." The decision, however, was by no means unanimous.

LIVESTOCK PRODUCERS SHIP CO-OPERATIVELY

In a voluntary move for the conservation of equipment, several organizations have been formed among livestock producers, for trucking livestock in full loads to the nearest railroad depot and shipping to the Edmonton Stockyard, or to packing plants as directed. They are known as Edmonton district Livestock Co-operatives, shipping from Morinville, Legal, and Stony Plain. Newly organized is the Watershed Livestock Co-operative, and others are organizing at Hilliard, and Mundare.

Approval of such organizations is expressed by J. Gordon Wilson, Services Representative, Truck Control, for Alberta, in the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, who recently urged that the use of motorized equipment be confined to essential operation. It is expected that orders will be issued shortly, prohibiting producers and haulers to take livestock long distances on any route parallel to a railroad.

Town Barn Moved

The horse barn which has stood behind the Tofield Town Hall for quite a number of years is this week being moved to the farm of Joe Sutton.

Quite a few months ago, Walter Bellamy bought it from the Town and recently sold it to Mr. Sutton.

It is the last of a one time rather imposing set of buildings situated on that site. There was a long shed which housed the big steam boilers and power plant. And wells from which water was pumped by steam engine to a large cistern nearby. The whole layout was complete even to genuine Scotch engineers, Bill, Jack and Charlie Bowick.

At that time the Town owned a pair of beautiful bay horses, Percherons, we believe. Johnston Ferguson drove them and they were housed in the barn just sold. Just prior to twelve o'clock they would show up heading for the barn and also around the same time, Richardson the baker, who had a bakeshop in what is now W. C. Swift's work shop, would broadcast delicious odors of freshly baked bread. We have yet to find a better noon appetizer.

WEDDING

CALDWELL—STOCKDILL

Westmount Presbyterian church was the scene of a pretty wedding Saturday, when Dorothy, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stockdill, was married to Dr. Albert Edward Caldwell, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Caldwell. Rev. Leonard Wilson of Wainwright, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. T. P. Kirby played the wedding marches. The church was decorated with ferns and bouquets of peonies.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin and lace embroidered with seed pearls, and a veil of filmy white tulle. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and pink roses.

Miss Annie Swift, a cousin, as bridesmaid was dressed in a toe-length gown of forget-me-not blue and a flower hat of carnations and sweet peas, with a matching colonial bouquet.

Little Esther Miller of Ashmont, was flower girl. Her dress was yellow sheer, and she carried a bouquet of summer flowers.

Mr. John Caldwell, brother of the groom, was best man. Mr. John Settle and Mr. Charles Douglas were ushers.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The table, laid with a cutwork cloth of white linen, was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake between two tall pink candles. Mrs. W. C. Swift of Tofield, aunt of the bride poured tea, and Mrs. E. B. Shera poured coffee. Miss Kathleen Shelton, Miss Elizabeth Zinkhan, Miss Dorothy Williams, and Miss Laura Settle assisted in serving.

For the reception Mrs. Stockdill, mother of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of dusty rose crepe and corsage of talisman roses. Mrs. Caldwell, mother of the groom, wore teal crepe, a floor-length gown, and corsage of deep pink roses.

To travel, the bride wore a navy blue pin-stripe tailored suit enhanced by a silver-fox [illegible], gift of the groom. Her accessories were powder blue.

On their return from Banff, Dr. and Mrs. Caldwell will make their home in Tofield.

Both the bride and groom are graduates of the University of Alberta.

McKENZIE

An Old Timers' picnic will be held on Wednesday, July 15th, on the Community Hall grounds. Everyone is asked to bring their own picnic dinner along, and then dinner will be served cafeteria style at 12:00 noon. There will be baseball, softball, races, horseshoe, and a refreshment booth, etc. Everybody welcome. There'll be an Old Timers' Dance in the evening, so come and enjoy the whole day.

It seems as though we get plenty of rain now whether we want it or not, especially when we are planning for some doings. I'm sure we all notice that the mosquitoes don't mind it a bit anyway.

Mrs. Verlyn Moss and Marilyn left on Thursday evening for a two week's visit at her parents home at Hardisty.

A very enjoyable concert was sponsored in the Community Hall on June 26th by the McCauley Concert Group from Edmonton. All net proceeds went to the Queen's Canadian Fund in aid of British War victims. Although the programme was delayed a bit because some of the group had to leave their stranded bus and walk through mud and rain, the crowd was well entertained with musical selections by the pianist and violinist.

A dance was held afterwards to wind up a swell time.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Weatherill and Jack Jones left last Saturday for a trip to Calgary to take in the Stampede. Mr. Joe Jones and Marjorie are doing the chores while they are away.

The annual McKenzie School picnic was held on the last day of school, on the school grounds. With plenty to eat together with a grand day, there was a chance for everyone to have a good time.

In the late afternoon, all gathered to bid farewell to Miss Knudson and to wish her luck as she left. She will be teaching in Ryley next term.

Elsie and Grethe Logsted are home for the holidays, after having attended school at Dixon, Alberta.

Mrs. Eaglesham and Jean, and Katie Deserlays were dinner guests at Mrs. Roberge's on Monday.

Mr. Olson is in Edmonton to help mark examination papers.

Katie Deserlays is home for a week.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Jim Secord, a daughter on July 7th. Congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Jacobson and Carl and Mrs. Moss returned two weeks ago from a trip to Banff.

Nick Hawrylechko is now assisting Verlyn Moss with the work.

John Eaglesham was home on leave over the week end. He is now stationed at Camrose.

Mrs. Ball of Edmonton was a visitor at the Walker home for a few days last week.

Many from around here attended the July 1st Sports in Tofield.

Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Jacobson and Dennis were week-end visitors at Jacobsons.

John and Paul Kushnerick were also down and spent the week end at Geo. Francis' home.

—V—

Master Leonard McMullen of Ryley spent the week end at the Davison home.

TENNIS NOTES

The President says that there may have been an excuse for no news last week, but there isn't any excuse this week, so here goes.

ooooo

There has really been a lot of real good games on the courts since the weather has turned more favorable. Many of the younger people have been turning out as a relief from the head studies of school exams, and those a little older have been taking their recreation and exercise that pleasant way.

oooooo

Question: How do you count when the ball is being returned, hits the edge of a torn spot in the net, bounces up in the air and lands in the other court?

oooooo

You won't have to bring your hoe to the courts the next time as Geo. has made arrangements to have a sheep keep the weeds down.

oooooo

Society Notes: The courts were the scene of a very pretty affair on Sunday evening. Kimmit and Chandler lost a heck of a lot of sweat running around the chalk opposite each other. They started out dressed for cooler weather but soon heaved their hats away. Not long after the sweaters were discarded, and by the time they got their shirts open in front they were too tired to go any more. (Shucks we never could write society notes anyway.)

oooooo

Who was the Gas Company Employee that took two of the speedy members of the club to the cleaners the other evening?

oooooo

See you at the courts.

oooooo

We wish to remind you that Tennis Club membership fees are long past due and are as follows: Adults, $3.00; Juniors, $1.00; School Teachers, $2.50. Fees may be paid to the president, G. McFadzean or to the secretary treasurer, Anne Kliniak.

HAY LAKES

SWANSON—LOVGREN

Numbered among the prettiest of summer weddings was that which took place in the Scandinavian church Hay Lakes, July 7th, when Rev. S. Nelson, the minister of Meeting Creek church, solemnized the marriage of Hedwig Ingeborg, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lovgren, and August Walfred, son of Mrs. C. Swanson and the late Mr. Swanson. To the strains of Mendelssohns wedding march played by Miss Alma Lochelt, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She wore a white chiffon dress with floor length veil and carried a bouquet of white peonies. Miss Hattie Lovgren as maid of honor chose a floor length gown of pink chiffon with matching Dutch veil. Her flowers were pink peonies. Little Diane Lyseng, niece of the bride was the dainty flower girl. She wore a pale green floor length taffeta frock. Master Dexter Lindberg, nephew of the bride, dressed in a white sailor suit and carrying the ring on a white satin cushion entered the church with the flower girl. Mr. Herman Swanson, brother of the bride-groom was best man. During the signing of the register, Rev. Nelson sang accompanied by Miss Alma Lochelt. The ushers were Fred Djuve and Martin Lyseng, brothers-in-law of the bride. The bride's cake, made by Mrs. M. R. Lyseng, bedded in white tulle and fern, centred the table. The bride's mother, dressed in Air Force blue and wearing a corsage of tea roses, received the guests. Among the many gifts was a chest of Community plate silver, in Coronation design, a gift from the bride's brothers and sisters. For going away the bride chose a beige suit in eyelet embroidery design with brown accessories. After a honeymoon at Sylvan Lake, Banff and other points, they will reside on the groom's farm in the Edberg district. Best wishes are extended to the happy couple.

Many friends and relatives attended the funeral of Mr. Martin Thompson on Saturday, July 4th.

Gladys Grue and Georgie Webster celebrated their birthdays last week.

Many of the local girls attended [illegible] shower and farewell party for [illegible] and Alma Busenius. They are leaving for the east.

Evelyn Webster is at M. Olstead's New Norway, while Mrs. Olstead and Joyce are at the coast.

A PATRIOTIC PRAIRIE FRONT

The farmers of the North American Continent have, in an amazing fashion, increased the production of those foods needed by the Allied Nations for their war effort. The United States Secretary of Agriculture reports that cheese production in the U.S.A. has increased 80 per cent in one year; that ten million more hogs were coming to market this year than ever before, and that there will be plentiful supplies of beef, lamb, poultry and eggs for all home and export needs. There have been similar large increases of these products in Canada.

A special Searle survey discloses that of 912 points queried in the Prairie Provinces 92 per cent of these points reported increases in hog production and 27 per cent of the 92 per cent reported a large increase.

These considerable increases of bacon and other foods needed for Britain, and for other food deficient countries of the Allied Nations, represent a substantial effort on the part of the farmers of the United States and Canada towards the winning of eventual victory.

This increased hog production on part of our prairie farmers can well be called a patriotic effort, particularly when we remember that the price of hogs is still 15 per cent below its 1913-14 parity or purchasing power, whereas the average wages paid to industrial labour in munition plants is 44 per cent ABOVE the similar 1913-14 purchasing power of wages.

PLASTIC "WINDOWS" AID BOMB-WOUND TREATMENT

Treatment of bomb wounds to legs and arms is being aided considerably in Britain by the new "cast window" in use by the American Hospital in Britain a subsidiary of the British War Relief Society. The instrument, which is moulded of plastic, is used in conjunction with the "leave it alone" technique of curing bomb wounds accompanied by compound fractures.

Its development constitutes a definite advance in this branch of surgery as it enables surgeons to study the progress of a wound without in any way changing the conditions present. Doctors knew that the technique was vastly more efficient and less trying to the patient than the older one of redressing and cleansing the wound every three or four days. The plaster cast prevented observation and its repeated removal would result in changed conditions. The plastic window, a simple and unpretentious device, permits the doctor to peer into the wound and take cultures from time to time.

The base is flat and three inches square. In the centre is a hollow cylinder an inch and a quarter in height and an inch and a half in diameter integrally moulded with the base. Telescoping into the cylinder is a cup, the bottom of which acts as a seal against penetration of air to the wound through the cylinder. The cup is held in place by its lip which fits snugly over a groove at the top of the cylinder. Adhesive tape is applied as an added precaution. The plaster cast is poured around the base of the instrument, which is then securely embedded in the dressing.

When the surgeon wishes to make an inspection or take a culture he merely removes the cup and a good portion of the wound is available to him.

OTTAWA
THE BEHIND HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

Although some time has passed since the national budget was announced in the nation's capital, yet the new tax and borrowing plan of the Government is easily and by far the most popular topic of conversation of the day along Parliament Hill because never in the history of Canada have the people not only been called upon for so formidable a financial effort but well-informed observers backstage are inclined to believe that the last chapter in the whole story of this nation's herculean financial and economic task is not told as yet or is incomprehensible at this stage of the war.

These observers note the rapidity with which the war situation has changed of recent weeks, the nature of the danger itself, the actual magnitude of this small nation's effort in comparison with the last World War undertaking, and the resources which are available to carry on and to win this war, with the all-important point for everyone to bear in mind being that the Government seems to be extremely anxious to employ only sound financial and economic methods in this struggle.

Indeed, when all these facts are put together, the record of Canada in this respect is surprising in view of the small population in this land.

The people of Canada have been not only willing to lend and to spend whatever price must be paid for victory but the masses have even been eager to do so. It is an amazing record in this respect and it provides dependable evidence which proves the remarkable extent of this country's contribution to the collective war effort of the democracies.

Canadians have been more than willing to lend for victory. In the First War Loan after the war broke out, the people quickly oversubscribed a $250,000,000 issue. Less than a year later the masses oversubscribed a $300,000,000 issue. In the Third War Loan, in 1941, the Government asked for $600,000,000 and the people answered with $730,000,000. Later, the Fourth War Loan campaign was launched for $600,000,000 but so fast did the people subscribe that the objective was raised to $900,000,000. The people have loaned willingly to the Government over $2,157,000,000 in this war. In other words, the masses have been actually eager to lend money to the Government for war purposes.

Likewise the same story can be told about the people's attitude towards spending for war purposes. In 1940-1941 the total war cost reached $1,431,000,000 and in the comparable period of the first World War, 1915-1916, it was only $227,000,000. This year the total expenditures of the nation are estimated to be $3,900,000,000. In other words, the masses have been actually eager to spend money for war purposes.

In face of the small population in this huge territory, yet about 600,000 men will be under arms this year and about 5,000,000 workers will be available to produce total national wealth of about six and a half billion dollars. It means that each person in industry or agriculture will turn out an average of at least $1200 in products. On the other side of the national ledger, the country's needs in this year of war will consume about $3,900,000,000, and since the ordinary revenues are expected to reach only $2,050,000,000, the budgetary deficit will be about $1,850,000,000.

Nevertheless, it can be reported that, on account of the sound financing policy of the authorities, Canada's economic and financial position is still a favourable one, considering the fact that it is about the only nation in the whole world today producing more than its national requirements. Of course, the people of Canada will have lower standards of living and even hardships as the cost of this war pyramids up and up, but all these figures of billions of dollars are possibly meaningless to the man-in-the street unless he is able to use a proper yardstick to measure, to compare, and to translate them into terms of everyday understanding of the tide of events which are now flowing back and forth so rapidly in the present activities of the war.

There are three things to be taken into account by the man in the street in Canada at the present time in order to understand these matters of finance or economics in this war.

First, there has been no long-standing or severe regimentation of life in this country's war effort in comparison with what has taken place in other countries in recent years because Canadians as a whole have not only been willing but even eager to pay the price that victory demands.

Second, widespread publicity has been given to the facts that Great Britain's total expenditure in the fiscal year will be 5,296,000,000 pounds sterling, or $21,144,000,000, that Federal revenue in this year of war in the United States will reach the huge figure of $23,610,000,000 but there will be still a deficit of $50,-000,000,000 that must be raised by borrowing, and others indicating war expenditures of almost incomprehensible scales for the man in the street to digest in offering comparisons of this nation's costs with those of other countries. However, it must be pointed out here that speaking or writing glibly of such matters in terms of figures running into billions of dollars are not bringing much light to the average person unless there is a clear understanding of the significance of these figures, a simple explanation of the depreciated currencies of other countries, expressions disclosing the proportion of these costs to the national income of the land, reports the amounts obtained by lend-lease arrangements, figures of the exact amounts borrowed abroad or obtained as gifts, and statements of the wide disparities of population. When these facts are properly and fairly analysed, the extent of Canada's contribution to the collective war effort of the democracies not only bears comparison to the other allies but it even overshadows others.

Third, Canada has been employing steadily and regularly sound financing methods in this war, paying as much as possible by taxation and allowing as little as possible to be paid by borrowing. The government of Canada wants to avoid as much as possible burdens on future generations of debts and to reduce dangers of inflation.

These things must be born in mind by the man in the street, and though the demands for money in this year for war purposes will mean a lower standard of living, yet it is still a cheap price to pay for victory, particularly when it is remembered that the authorities or experts along Parliament Hill aim to maintain as much as possible a balance of the natural laws of economics and to avoid as much as possible a post-war depression.

LINDBROOK

The Social Credit Picnic given by the Hastings Lake and Lindbrook groups was held at Woolake's Beach Hastings Lake, last Saturday afternoon. The weather was ideal and quite a crowd turned out. Sports were held and for those who preferred bathing and boating, there was a good beach and boats. Mr. and Mrs. Woolake opened their refreshment booth for the picnicer's convenience. Mr. Rudy Heichen lent a musical touch to the whole affair by bringing his public address radio outfit, treating all to a selection of music and songs, all of which were heard all over as good as any band could do it. The Lindbrook V.V.R. turned out in force too, being challenged to a soft ball game by the Poltenvale V.V.R. unit. The visitors won, but the game was unfinished owing to the arrival of Premier Aberhart and Mr. F. Baker, M.L.A., who wished to address the crowd, which they did over a loud speaker, after being introduced by Mr. R. Murray of Tofield. We guess this picnic could be called a great success, weather, music, and people all combining to make it so. Mr. Geo. Woolake sr., kindly donated $15 to the group fund.

Whilst at the picnic at the lake last Saturday, Mrs. George Lee was taken ill very suddenly and had to be rushed off to hospital in Edmonton. Mr. Arthur Gill kindly gave up his time and car to take her up, arriving back about 6:30 p.m. when many had gone home.

A branch of the Farmers' Union is formed here now and about a score of the farmers here have already joined same, and it is to be sincerely hoped that all will do likewise. It is the only way that we can adjust our just and long overdue grievances. Every other branch of industry and professions, manufacturers, etc., in fact everybody but the farmer, as he gets it in the neck every time, and will continue to do so until such time as he determines to make his weight felt. The only way to do it is to do as the other unions do, combine, be loyal to the union, and admit only bona fide farmers who depend on farming for a living. The fee is only $1.25 per year, small enough to hurt no one, so look out for further announcements and join it.

Mr. A. J. Richardson, principal of Lindbrook School, is away for a couple of weeks in Edmonton, marking examination papers.

Lce-Cpl. Leslie Bailey, of the Calgary Highlanders, left on Saturday evening's train to return to duty. Best of luck from all your friends in Lindbrook.

The VVR parade on Tuesday evening was a very successful parade, despite the blitz put on by the mosquitoes, which were repulsed with great losses. There were 26 members on parade and the junior 4th Division totalled 16. Four new members signed on. A new type of instruction was on the menu this evening. That of bayonet fighting under the instruction of Cpl. Lancaster. None better for that than an old kiltie, that's their specialty "cold steel." We are indebted to Mr. Rudy Heichen for his mobile band. It made a lot of difference on the little route march. There will be parade at Lindbrook Stn., 2 p.m. Sunday for the purpose of target practice, so turn out and bring serviceable 22 rifles that will take 22 long rifle cartridge. Nicolaas Schoester is a native of Holland. Once he thought of settling in Java, but the heat drove him back to Holland. He took ship for Canada then—that was in 1917—and the ship took so long to sight land he thought he was on his way to Java again. Finally he came up the St. Lawrence to Montreal, stayed a while, saw Canada on a harvest excursion and crossed the United States as a visiting artist. From Halifax, where he has made his home for some time, he conducts his own musical programme on Saturdays at 6:30 p.m. CDT (5.30 p.m. MDT) for National Network listeners. They are heard over Station CBK, Watrous (540 Kcs.) each week. He is active in curling, golfing and tennis circles, will never pass up a swim in the North-West Arm winter or summer; and is a member of the Polar Bear Club—no wonder!

SWINE MARKETINGS

During the first 5 months of 1942 marketings of swine in Alberta exceeded by 6,000 head the total marketings for the whole year of 1939 and are 230,000 head above marketings for the same period in 1941. Swine marketed in Alberta for the period January to May 1942 total 969,230 head. Alberta's swine production for the period January 1st to June 28th, 1942, is about 31 per cent above that of 1941 and is slightly above that of Ontario for the same period this year.

ONE OF THE potent arguments of those who [illegible] America to withdraw from international councils after World War One was that the United States was in danger of being used as a cat's-paw by European powers. Considering the size and power of the United States such a fear could exist only on the assumption that Americans were a nation of simpletons. Too many Americans accepted this assumption. As Will Rogers phrased it, the United States had "never lost a war or won a conference." So it eschewed the battle of the conference table and surrendered the security that American soldiers' sacrifices had won.

Americans can have little excuse for permitting such tragic history to repeat itself. It is now clear that the American voice must exert a decisive influence on the pattern of the post-war world, and that it is in fact already exerting a profound influence on world thinking toward peace.

Responses in both Britain and Russia to recent speeches by American leaders show the great weight American views carry today in European capitals, as well as the similarity of American, British and even Russian attitudes toward the post-war world.

The United States, Britain and Russia, it would appear, share in large measure a desire to work out a world system which will prevent war, not only through collective security backed by international force but by providing the most tolerable conditions possible for peoples of all countries.

For example, the Memorial Day speech of the American Under Secretary of State, Mr. Summer Welles, stressed that while individuals, groups or peoples who "can truly be held accountable" for the world's present plight should receive inexorable justice, no nation should be forced to "atone vicariously for crimes for which it is not responsible, and no people shall be forced to look forward to endless years of want and starvation."

It is notable that this speech was well received in Moscow. This fact may help to set at rest apprehensions that the Soviet Union will seek to keep post-war Germany weak by economic measures which would entail great suffering for the German [illegible]

Considering the ordeal to which Russia has been put by the Nazis, a most unrelenting policy toward Germany may understandably be demanded by the Soviets. If, however, this policy is limited to restraints necessary to insure Germany's good behavior—such as use of international police and suitable political measures— one of the great mistakes of the post-Versailles period can be avoided, namely commercial throttling of a great industrial people, which once again might have dire economic and political consequences for Europe and ultimately the world.

In Britain, statements in the House of Lords showed substantial agreement with the point of view expressed by Mr. Welles. Aside from direct expressions of approval was the declaration of Viscount Selborne, Minister of Economic Warfare, that "Britain will never propose a revenge peace." Viscount Samuel welcomed the likelihood of American influence on post-war settlements with these words: "Our anxiety with regard to America is not that she will claim her position in leadership of the world, morally, politically, economically and militarily, but that she might not."

This does not mean that America has already won the battle of the conference table. But it does indicate considerable progress among the leading members of the United Nations toward agreed peace aims compatible with American ideals.

The fact that American statesmen at this early hour are making public statements on peace aims is itself significant of the influential role which its allies concede to the United States. For these statements are focusing world attention on American hopes at a time when the United States, Britain and Russia are engaged in confidential conversations on their post-war aims. Unless the American statements could have an effect on the conversations, it is not likely they would be made.

Naturally they deal with broad questions rather than details. They express an attitude rather than the specifications for a post-war structure. But the amount of agreement they have earned is a measure not only of the possibilities of post-war co-operation among all the United Nations, but of the opportunity Americans can exploit and the responsibility they must exercise for their own and other people's welfare and security. —The Christian Science Monitor.

Stout Hearts, Patience & Work

"Rejoice not against me O mine Enemy!
When I fall I shall arise."
—(The Pilgrims Progress)

The United Nations are passing through dark days. There seems to be no end to our defeats. Some people in consequence are becoming critical of our direction of the war.

We suggest, however, that those who feel that everything is going wrong, and that we should have done better, might pause for a moment, and draw up a war balance sheet. It will then be observed that if much has been lost, if we have suffered many defeats, that, too, something has been won, and that some victories have been scored.

It is true that the United Nations have lost much territory and many people. The Channel Islands, Hong Kong, Malaya, Singapore, Sumatra, Java, New Guinea, the Celebes, Borneo, Burma, Wake, Guam, the Philippines and some of the Aleutian Islands, and now Egypt hangs in the balance. On the other hand we have taken Italy's vast African Empire, Ethiopia and Eritrea, and also Madagascar, which give us command of the Persian Gulf and of the Indian Ocean, and so assures a supply route through the Middle East to our gallant ally, Russia. Let it be remembered also, that we have destroyed or taken prisoner large Italian Armies and numbers of German fighting men, and that we have destroyed in addition numbers of enemy warships and transports, planes, tanks, and other fighting vehicles. Besides this, one by one Germany's vast inland war industries are now being severely bombed and damaged.

Some, however still feel that we should not be suffering our present day defeats, considering, they say, that the war has now been going on for two and a half years. They venture the opinion, therefore, that there must be something wrong with our direction of the war, something wrong with our Generals and our armies.

WHY OUR PRESENT DEFEATS?

The bald truth is that the reason for our defeats is easy to find. Our present difficulties are the direct and inevitable result of the apathy and lack of vision of the Governments of the democratic countries for years before this war started; those years when we remained indifferent to the reports of the ever growing armed forces and the obvious aggression of our present enemies. When, therefore, our enemies with their well trained and equipped and numerous forces of all arms struck us, we were caught completely unprepared.

It does not lie within human power to make up in two and a half years for the severe handicap with which we burdened ourselves by giving a strong, aggressive, numerous efficient and ruthless enemy seven years start. It would be miraculous if under these circumstances we were not after two and a half years still suffering defeats.

Yet we can, however, say that a miracle actually has happened in our favor, and that miracle is that we are still in the field fighting, which we owe in great part to the inspiration and vigor of Mr. Churchill, to the vision of Mr. Roosevelt, and to the extraordinary gallantry of our airmen and all our fighting men, including of course our brave seamen. If Russia, a country with twice the population of Germany, and which had prepared for this war at least as long as Germany, finds difficulty in withstanding the Nazi onslaught, how much more difficult must it be for the Democracies which up to the very declaration of war had made practically no preparations whatsoever.

Mr. Lyttelton, for instance, has just told the House of Commons that on the day war was declared Germany put 6,000 tanks into the fighting line, whereas the whole British Empire had a total of only 181.

The truth is that Generals can only fight an enemy with the men, the munitions and the equipment provided by Governments, and if those men and arms are inferior to those available to the enemy, then we must expect to suffer defeats, but we should not blame our Generals for this. The responsibility goes years back and rests upon other shoulders.

THE TASK AHEAD OF US

At this moment, therefore, the task ahead of us is perfectly clear. It is for our armed forces to hang on gallantly to the best of their ability until the peoples of the United Nations are able to build up and send to our Generals large well-equipped reinforcements so that our enemies can be met eventually on equal terms. We need, however, not despair. The strength of the Allied Nations day by day is growing, and in due course we shall be more powerful in every arm than our enemies, then victory at last will be in sight.

Those who have been privileged to see the manoeuvres of the different parts of the Canadian Army during this Army Week will unquestionably have a feeling of quiet confidence that when such armies are large enough and sufficiently well equipped that victory then for us will not be far away.

HOW BATTLES ARE WON

The winning of battles still depends today on the agelong simple principles of tactics and strategy which have changed but little in thousands of years. The side usually wins which has the most numerous, best equipped and best balanced force of all the required arms, which means for this war—air, naval and land forces—. The side, moreover, which has the initiative and the surplus power to attack where and when it desires has a great advantage over the side which is obliged to stay only on the defensive because of a lack of sufficient force. When, however, the armed forces of the Allied Nations, complete with well-trained men and with munitions in all arms are superior to the enemy, then we shall be able to seize the initiative and force the enemy himself to stay on the defensive. Then one can predict with certainty that complete victory in our favor will be assured.

Let each one, therefore, in the meantime, keep a stout heart, have patience, and to the utmost of his ability perform that task which he is called upon to do; so will each be helping Canada's war effort —Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, July 6— Establishment of tribunals with legislative authority to deal with western farm debts is a step in the right direction, according to Premier Aberhart, and he believed decision of delegated to the Saskatoon Farm Conference to press for such bodies is sound. "The problem in connection with farm debt has received a consideration and examination never before given," he said. "I am confident that the government at Ottawa will recognize the sincere desire of the West to clear away the barriers that have prevented the three prairie provinces from giving the best service to the nation."

Alberta government delegates to the farm conference included Mr. Aberhart, Hon. Lucien Maynard, Hon. D. B. MacMillan and Hon. Solon E. Low. At the Regina meeting called for July 10 and 11, Mr. Maynard and Mr. Low will be delegates. This meeting is called for the purpose of preparing a submission for presentation to Ottawa. The resolution proposing the tribunal was moved at Saskatoon by Robert Gardiner, veteran U.F.A. leader. It was adopted unanimously by the Confer[illegible]

The delegates resolved: That a tribunal or tribunals be created by the appropriate legislative authority in Canada to:

(a) write down the principal of farm debts, secured and unsecured;

(b) reduce the interest rate on farm debts, secured and unsecured;

(c) alter the terms of payment of farm debts, secured and unsecured,

(d) review and revise its own decisions in the light of events subsequent to the making of the decisions;

(e) extend to individuals in any particular year of circumstances, the protection of any of the provisions of this legislation available to any debtor, whose affairs are being administered under it;

(f) to stay proceedings arising on debts or securities after an adjudication has been made;

(g) make the foregoing remedies available with respect to any farm debts regardless of the time at which they were incurred.

Following the Ottawa meeting with Dominion authorities the Conference will again be called to receive the report of delegates.

Latest move in the Alberta debt situation was made by the Columbian National Life Insurance Co., a U.S. concern, which filed statement of claim against the province. The company does not operate here, but possesses certain Alberta bonds. It is sought to obtain accrued interest on these bonds.

On all sides we hear there may be a serious shortage of coal this coming Fall and Winter. Coal mines, however, are available NOW to the coal and freight cars are available NOW to transport the coal. YOUR SCRAP METAL URGENTLY NEEDED!

This New Method makes Scrap Metal Collection easy for you.

More scrap steel and iron is urgently needed for more ships, tanks, planes, guns and munitions. You are asked to do your part by turning in every available ounce of scrap metal from your farm.

In order to facilitate the systematic collection of scrap iron and steel in the three Prairie Provinces, the Wartime Salvage Limited, a Government Company, has completed arrangements with the following Western Canadian Elevators for collection and purchase of scrap iron and steel:

Alberta Wheat Pool. Saskatchewan Pool Elevators.
Manitoba Pool Elevators Ltd. United Grain Growers Limited.
North-West Line Elevator Association.

These Companies handle and purchase this material on behalf of the Government without cost to the Government, and without profit to themselves. Any monies received over and above the actual cost of handling will be donated to War Charities.

An Agent of one of the above named Elevator Companies has been appointed in your district as an official buyer on behalf of the Wartime Salvage Limited. The price to be paid by these Agents has been fixed by the Department of Munitions & Supply at $7.00 per net ton at the elevator, for all forms of scrap iron and steel excluding: (a) Sheet tin of any kind; (b) Automobile bodies and fenders; (c) Stovepipe; and (d) Wooden attachments.

This price applies at any designated point in the Prairie Provinces.

Your contribution to the war effort and to war charities is simplified by this arrangement and it will be more effective inasmuch as you now can take your scrap metal to the Elevator designated in your district and obtain a receipt for it from the Agent.

Should you desire to donate your scrap to the war effort, then such receipt voucher can be endorsed by you, payable to the Voluntary Salvage Committee in your community. The Voluntary Salvage Committee will use such money for war charitable purposes.

Your contribution of scrap iron and steel is urgently needed NOW. Dig out every available ounce of scrap on your farm and take it to the Elevator Agent nearest you without delay. Canadian war industry needs it badly.

MUST BE PREPARED TO SPEND FIFTY PER CENT OF NATIONAL INCOME ON WAR

Canada must be prepared to spend as much as 50 per cent of its national income if the war is to carry through to final victory, G. W. Spinney, chairman of the National War Finance Committee, Ottawa, told the annual meeting of the Investment Dealers' Association.

"At that rate", Mr Spinney emphasized, "it will be a costly struggle and will entail real sacrifice on the part of everyone; but I am confident that the people of Canada are determined to pay whatever price we must to preserve our way of life and to defend the land we love. We can count upon it that war is never cheap but it surely is a million times cheaper to win than to lose."

Mr Spinney warned of the dangers of inflation, pointing out that the wrong kind of financing could raise the cost of the war program and yet reduce its efficiency. He insisted that while Government regulation could do a great deal to check inflation, no threats, laws or administration decrees could do for the Canadian people what they could do for themselves by foregoing excessive spending and regularly set aside a portion of their earnings in War Savings Certificates and Victory Bonds.

He recalled the swift progress of inflation in the last war, from 1916 when the cost of living first began to rise until 1920. "Some of us may remember", he quoted, "that the average cost of a 10-pound bag of sugar was $2.50; a dozen eggs cost 80 cents; a 10-pound bag of flour sold at 84 cents; a cook stove that cost $32 in 1914 went up to $60; a ordinary grey shirt rose in price from 75 cents in 1914 to $2.50 in 1920; the money a housewife paid for a yard of cotton cloth was by 1920 enough to buy only one-third of a yard. Food, fuel, shelter and clothing which cost $1 in April 1916 had risen to almost $2 in 1920, so that the family with no increase in income found its producing power cut in half.

"In financing this war voluntary savings must play the major role and we will all have to pitch in and buy Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates in ever increasing amounts."

The National War Finance Committee was shouldered with a huge and important responsibility, its chairman declared. "We have got to keep relentlessly at the job of pointing out to every citizen his plain duty in the matter of saving and lending and we have to provide every reasonable facility for enabling the people of this country to lend their savings to the country with ease and despatch. We have built an organization which has penetrated every city, town and hamlet in the Dominion and will make its appeal through industrial payroll plans, women's organizations, schools, stamp clubs and innumerable other channels".

Mr Spinney thanked the Investment Dealers Association for its cooperation, remarking that it constituted one of the great pieces of machinery in the set up of the National War Finance Committee. He said that through the National War Finance Committee the Government was going to make further demands upon the time and facilities of the Association, noting that they would constitute the greatest test it ever had to face. He was confident the Association would meet the test with "vigor and determination"

GOVERNMENT BULLETIN ON HOME CANNING

Successful home canning depends on destroying all bacteria, yeasts and moulds, and sealing the product in air tight containers, so that no contamination can take place to cause spoilage. At the same time the natural colour and flavour should be preserved. How this can be done is explained in the revised household bulletin, No. 8, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables".

Full information is given on checking equipment, washing and sterilization of jars, testing jar rings, selection of product, grading or sorting product, washing and peeling, blanching when required, preparation of syrup, packing jars, processing or sterilizing, sealing, cooling, and storing, together with a time table for cooking and canning the various fruits, and a time table for vegetables. Special recipes are also given for tomato juice and tomato soup. The bulletin may be obtained free by writing to the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

DISCUSS DECREASE DRIVERS' LICENSES

Alberta's drop of approximately 26,000 in the number of licensed car drivers, compared with a year ago, has caused some speculation as to the factors responsible, according to officials of the Alberta Motor Association.

While it is realized that there is a drop of 8,000 car registrations as against a year ago, the sharp decrease does not appear to be in line.

Government officials claim, in explaining the falling off in drivers' licenses, that it is due to a combination of circumstances. The main one, it is claimed, is that numerous enlistments of young men in the armed forces have been responsible.

Still another factor is that as 'dad' owns the car in many cases, and operates it according to his gasoline ration coupon, the younger members of the family do not take out licenses because there is not the same free use of the car as in pre-war ways. Many men just use their cars for a short drive each day and it is not available for pleasure driving to any great extent.

Doubtless many of the drivers' licenses also have been dropped because of cars being laid up on account of gasoline and tire restrictions.

The general situation, however, is being watched by the A.M.A.

JUTE BAG SALVAGE IS VERY IMPORTANT

Go all out on the salvage of jute bags! There isn't a scrap of jute being imported into Canada now, and a situation already bad will be worse unless every effort is put forward to salvage and conserve the supply of bags available in this country, reports the National Salvage Committee.

The farmer should return empties to his feed dealer or sell them to a second-hand bag dealer who will repair them and sell them to the mills. A very real shortage may occur unless bags are kept moving from the emptier to the filler. All bags are needed. There are large numbers of bags in urban as well as rural homes which should be put back into circulation.

CANADA APPROVED FLOURS ARE SATISFACTORY FOR HOME BAKING

The new Canada Approved Flours have been tested and found very satisfactory for all home baking as well as commercial or home baked bread says Miss Vera Richards, Women's Branch Extension Service, Department of Agriculture.

Canada Approved Flours are not "enriched" or "fortified" flours which are usually obtained by adding certain synthetic chemicals, but, in the milling process of these flours, much more of the natural B Vitamins and minerals of the wheat berry are retained than in the process used for white Flour labelled Vitamin B White Flour (Canada Approved) is a creamy white flour milled to retain 400 International units Vitamin B1 per pound.

Flour labelled Vitamin B Flour (Canada Approved) is somewhat darker and retains 550 units Vitamin B1 per pound.

Whole Wheat Flour results in a dark product but contains 660 Units Vitamin B1 per pound.

Where it is not feasible to use whole wheat flour, Canada Approved Flours may be used successfully, e.g. in baking powder biscuits, chocolate or light butter cakes, sponge cake and shortbreads. Pastry made from Vitamin B White Flour is a little more difficult to roll but bakes well and has a good texture. Gravies and cream sauces need slightly longer and more careful cooking to prevent lumping.

People who cannot tolerate the coarser "Whole Wheat" will likely be able to tolerate the new flours.

Six slices of the new Vitamin B White bread will meet one sixth of your daily needs of Vitamin B1 or one fifth if Vitamin B bread, or one-quarter if whole wheat bread. Other rich sources are: Rolled oats, liver, legumes, peanuts, dark molasses and lean pork.

Insufficient Vitamin B1 in your diet results in: Jittery nerves, mental depression, constipation, lack of appetite, neuritis, and failure to use carbohydrates properly in the body.

CBC's shopping expert who is heard every Wednesday afternoon at 2:33 p.m. CDT (2:33 p.m. MDT) over Station CBK, Watrous (540 Kcs.) giving consumer information to Canadian housewives, hails from the West. She began her career on a Winnipeg newspaper. She later became a copy-writer for a large department store, where she learned a great deal about consumer's goods. When the war broke out, she decided her experience and knowledge could be of use to other Canadian women. Getting in touch with the authorities in Ottawa, she obtained figures and facts for shoppers, which she presented with Audrey Hutcheson on the CBC series, "Shop to Save" heard all last winter on alternate Wednesdays. The series proved so valuable that she is now heard weekly in a new series called "Wartime Shopping."

REDUCE FOOD COSTS AND IMPROVE HEALTH

Cook potatoes in their jackets; don't discard the outer leaves of lettuce and cabbage; save all the water in which vegetables are cooked to put in soup or add to gravy; don't cut or shred fruits or vegetables for salad until the last possible moment before serving; insist on bread made with vitamin B (Canada Approved) flour. All these little things add up to better health through increased vitamin intake without adding to food costs, and good health is vital for victory.

Potatoes can be a dependable source of vitamin C, but too frequently 50 per cent of this valuable quality is lost in the cooking, according to Nutrition Services, Department of Pensions and National Health. Much of the vitamin C content can be saved by cooking potatoes in their skins. This should be done not only in baking potatoes, but in boiling as well. They can be cooked in their jackets and peeled just before serving, or with new potatoes many people like to eat their tender skins.

The dark green outer leaves of lettuce and cabbage are coarser in texture than the inner leaves but they are 10 to 30 times richer in vitamin content than head lettuce.

DEVILLE

Quite a number of the Deville folk motored out to the Garden picnic on Tuesday.

Mrs. Stanley Cowden, who has been working in Edmonton was home for a day this week.

With two extra gangs working steadily here we can see quite an improvement in the railroad tracks. Heavier rails are being put in.

A Deville Picnic and Sports Day will be held on July 15th. There will be a large variety of sports and this will be followed by a big Barn Dance in Alex Morrow's barn—so how about it folks?

Light Agenda For July Cornhill Council Meeting

Three men wanting to purchase N.W. 10-50-20 was the interesting feature of the July meeting of M.D. of Cornhill held at the district's office on Friday, July 10th. The quarter was sold to Mr. A. H. Martens.

There were present at the meeting, Reeve Walker, (in the chair); Councillors Anderson, Blake, Brown, Coombes and Swabey.

Minutes of the last meeting together with a list of accounts passed for payment were read and formally approved.

Mr. Hamm interviewed council regarding the purchase of N.W. 10-50-20. Mr. Hamm had been leasing it from the council for the past five years, giving one-third of the crop as rent. There was about 20 acres broken. The lease was given with the understanding that he would have first opportunity of buying.

Mr. A. H. Martens was also present and expressed his desire to purchase the quarter.

There was also a bid from Mr. Stanley Brown.

After some discussion it was decided to have Mr. Brown come in and have both he and Mr. Martens make a final offer and then give Mr. Hamm the opportunity of meeting this if he so desired. The matter was then tabled until after lunch.

The regular monthly financial statement was studied.

On the motion of Councillor Swabey a small cheque in favor of a ratepayer was held up and will be applied on drugs purchased for ratepayer by the municipality.

On motion of Councillor Blake, the secretary was requested to notify Mr. Joe Winder that he must not close the trail on N.E. 2-50-20.

Mr. Evanchien will also be notified regarding trail through S.E. [illegible]

The labor pay sheet re fighting fires was discussed and tabled.

Letter from E. E. Florence, Edmonton, re position on No. 18. Council will keep the application in mind.

F. Grummett desired an advance of wages and was granted $50.00.

Adjournment for lunch.

W. Davison, weed inspector and fire guardian, interviewed council regarding pay for fire fighters. Two meetings previous he understood that firefighters would be paid 15c per hour and he promised some fire fighters this amount for their services. The amount involved was something over five dollars. At the last meeting he understood a decision was made not to pay fire fighters. He did not mind what the future policy was, but he would like to see the men to whom he had promised pay, receive it.

In discussion it was brought out that there was a time when men ordered out to fight fire were paid but fires became so numerous that the practice had to be stopped. Stopping the pay reduced the number of fires. No payment was made for fighting fire this spring and if Council acceded to Mr. Davison's request, Council would be inundated with fire fighting accounts. The decision not to pay for fire fighting arrived at at the last meeting was sustained.

Messrs. Brown, Hamm and Martens being present the land deal was opened again. Messrs. Brown and Martens were requested to submit their best offers in writing and Mr. Hamm would be given an opportunity of equalling it. The following offers were received:

Mr. Brown: $400 total price to be paid at once or $250 paid now and $275 in three equal annual payments.

Mr. Martens: $200 to be paid now, $200 to be paid in October 1942, and $200 to be paid in October 1943.

Mr. Martens' offer was considered the best and as Mr. Hamm did not wish to equal it, on motion of Reeve Walker it was decided to sell Mr. A. H. Martens the land for the above price and terms. A bylaw covering this was given its first and second readings.

Letter from Prairie Farm Assistance Board enclosing cheque for $122.75 in payment for making out acreage reports. As the secretary did this work at the specific request of the authorities, it was decided on motion of Councillor Coombes that the money be turned over to him.

Letter from Dept. of Agriculture. They desired reports as to number of cattle and number of cattle owners in the municipality.

Letter from Mrs. McMenomy. She desired to purchase lots 12, 13, 14, 15, blk. 7 and lot 3 in block 5

LINDBROOK

Lovely haying weather, eh?

Mrs. J. Leahy of New Westminster, B.C., is here on a visit to her sister, Mrs. W. Glenn and family of Lindbrook. Mrs. Leahy, former resident of this district will be remembered by many here, most of whom may have the pleasure of renewing her acquaintance during her visit.

We note in the Mercury that mention was made of a Tofield family having the honour of having 4 sons in the armed forces, and a great honour it is too. We of the countryside have our records too in this respect. Mr. and Mrs. John Logan have 4 in this war and lost one son in the last war. Mr. Adolph Campion of Hastings Lake has 4 sons and one daughter in the services, and Mr. and Mrs. Tough have 3 or 4 in, and we believe that the Donald family also have quite a number in the Services too; so it is fitting that these should all be mentioned in this respect.

To Mr. Adolf Campion goes the honour of being the first one to deliver scrap metal to the elevator, so get busy and do likewise, it is badly needed. Let our fellows throw it at the enemy before he throws it at us.

Mrs. Leslie Bailey returned home to Lindbrook this week where she intends to stay whilst her husband is away on active service.

What about joining the Farmers' Union? Have you done so? If not get busy and join. Don't wait until the war is over and prices drop, see to it now that they don't drop to prices that will leave you ruined. All the other organizations are entrenching their positions now, so do likewise or else you will never get a chance to do so. Don't leave it to George to do it, do it yourselves. Each one that doesn't is not only cutting his own throat, but the throats of his fellow farmers, their wives and children.

The VVR target practice held Sunday afternoon was well attended, despite the unsettled weather and bad roads which prevented many from attending. There were 5 targets at 20 yard range, using Dom Long Rifle 22 ammunition, using own rifles. Some exceptionally good scores were made, especially by Messrs. O. Wagner, J. Bracegirdle and R. Goubault, all these being way up in the 90's out of a possible 100. The rest of the shooting was of high average too; believe me, I wouldn't want that bunch shooting at me. Five rounds were fired as sighting shots and 5 rapid, that is, 10 rds. per man. It is to be hoped that another practice will be held soon.

The Tuesday evening parade was well attended. Squad drill and bayonet fighting under section leaders took up the first part of the evening, and the second part took the form of a route march to the strains of martial music provided by Mr. Rudy Heichen's "band wagon" the public address radio mounted on his car. The boys are getting pretty good now. There will be a target practice on the range next Sunday at 2 p.m. Fall in at Lindbrook station. Bring serviceable 22 rifles, ammunition is provided.

Have you brought your scrap iron to the elevator yet? If not, do so before haying and harvesting starts. There is quite a little pile there now. Wednesdays and Fridays are receiving days but and day it will be taken care of, weighed, etc.

Mr. Thomas Porter of Lindbrook has kindly donated for use, a large Union Jack to be flown at all parades of the VVR here. It was the saluting point on the march past on Tuesday's parade.

Now if someone else donates a drum and a Bugle, we shall be set up good.

On Tuesday, July 21, a meeting of the Ladies' Aid and also one of the War Workers' Club will be held at Mrs. Alvin Steen's. The Ladies' Aid will meet at two o'clock and the War Workers' about three. In this way it is hoped both meetings can be held with no interference of one with the other. Due to bad roads, neither group has met for some time, and members of both are urged to attend. Will the War Workers please turn in all afghan squares or yarn as the afghan is being put together and these are necessary to complete it. If you are not sure of attending perhaps you can turn in your work to Mrs. Steen, Mrs. Warner or Mrs. Mel Wood before the meeting.

Last Friday's home nursing class was taken by Miss Gilchrist of the Holden Health Unit. Miss Gilchrist gave instructions in first aid and all present heard much of value that can be put to use in times of emergency or accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Noland, old timers of the Lakeshore district, but who now live in Oregon, have been visiting relatives in Tofield and Grand Prairie the past month or two. They are leaving Thursday for the States. Many Lakeshore people have had a visit with them while they have been with Mr. and Mrs. Lester Noland and we are glad to see them still looking so well.

COPIOUS RAINS THIS YEAR

From the middle of June onwards this district has received copious rains. Already we are far ahead of last year as regards rainfall and signs are not lacking that more is to come. Last week end a real soaker fell, the rain gauge registering over two inches. Rain started falling midnight Friday and continued on well into Saturday night.

LOCAL MAN RECEIVES COMMISSION

2nd Lieut. Glover (Norman to most of us here) with Mrs. Glover, arrived from the west Sunday night. 2nd Lieut. Glover recently successfully passed an officer's training course and has been awarded a commission.

Norman was raised and went to school here, played on different sporting organizations, was married here, was in business here, and his many friends are genuinely pleased to learn of his promotion. He enlisted about two years ago, has been stationed at Camrose, where he first became corporal, then sergeant, and was then recommended for a commission.

KETCHAMOOT PICNIC

Ketchamoot picnic was pretty well washed out on Wednesday the 8th, but the ladies' aid exercised splendid judgement by holding it on the following day, Thursday.

The usual sports were held and Ketchamoot's splendid reputation for chicken suppers was fully maintained.

In the evening a dance was held at the school house.

BASEBALL

Last Thursday evening the Tofield baseball team went to the Ketchamoot Red Cross Picnic for a game with McKenzie. McKenzie, however, did not come, so Ketchamoot formed a team and a good battle resulted. Tofield won the game 7-4 however, behind Ches McAllister's fine hurling. It was his fourth straight pitching victory. The crowd was well entertained with some errors by Johnsrud. It is fun to ride the players about their misplays, but when the manager lets 'em go through, it arouses the fans to additional enjoyment.

CUT HAY EARLY

(Experimental Farms News)

To obtain the maximum amount of feed nutrients, hay should be cut at the proper stage of maturity. Cutting at comparatively early stages of maturity is recommended, and where there is a shortage of labour it should be very early if the cutting is to be completed before the last part of the hay crop has become over-ripe, says P. O. Ripley, Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Tests and experiments have disclosed that the yield of dry matter in alfalfa increases consistently from the time the buds appear on the crop until it is about 50 per cent in bloom. The protein in the crop decreases considerably as the plants mature. It has been found that alfalfa cut when the buds were appearing contained about 24.7 per cent protein, and in full bloom, only about 20 per cent. On the other hand, fibre which is comparatively indigestible, increases from about 25 per cent at the time the buds are appearing to 30 per cent when in full bloom. Calcium decreases from 1.98 per cent at buds appearing stage to 1.73 at full bloom. The phosphorus content decreases from .27 per cent at buds appearing to .24 per cent at full bloom. Similarly, red clover cut in the bud stage contains about 17.9 per cent of protein, and in approximately full bloom only 15.4 per cent. The phosphorus decreases from .22 per cent in the bud stage to about .25 per cent when in full bloom. Timothy just after heading contains 10.8 per cent protein, and when in full bloom only 7.5 per cent. The phosphorus in timothy when just headed out is approximately .25 per cent, and in full bloom about .18 per cent.

These figures indicate the real value of early cutting of the hay crop, and the general recommendation is that alfalfa should be cut when as nearly one-tenth in bloom as possible; red clover, just before bloom; timothy, as soon as the crop is completely headed, and before there is too much bloom on the plant. Sweet clover should be cut for hay just as the buds are appearing.

SYRUPS FOR CANNING FRUITS

Corn syrup and honey may be utilized to conserve sugar in making syrup to can fruit.

A thin syrup can be made by using half cup sugar, half cup of corn syrup and 3 cups of water. Another thin syrup, consisting of 1 cup of honey to 3 cups of water, is also satisfactory. These syrups are of about the same consistency as that obtained by using 1 cup of sugar in two cups of water and are recommended for all sweet fruits.

A medium syrup similar to that obtained with 1 cup of sugar to 1 cup of water can be made by using half cup sugar, half cup of corn syrup and 1 cup of water. A second recipe for making medium syrup is to use a quarter cup sugar, three quarters cup of honey and 1 cup of water.

For each pint jar half to three-quarters of a cup of syrup is needed for small fruits and 1 cup of syrup for large fruits.

Homemakers interested in further information on the use of honey in canning and preserving should write to the Department of Agriculture for a free bulletin on the subject.

BOARD ASKS RETURN OF SUGAR COUPONS

In accordance with the ruling that householders and firms should return coupons for surplus sugar supplies on hand after the rationing date, July 1, 1942, there is a steady flow of coupons coming in to the rationing division, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, officials state.

Coupons are submitted to the regional offices of the Board, Williamson Building, Edmonton, and will be received every two weeks, for as long as the supplies last, or until the householder needs more sugar.

As yet there has been little response from residents of country districts, due, it is felt, to distance, and problems of communication. City areas have responded well.

In some cases, sugar itself has been returned to the rationing offices of the Board, indicating that people are anxious to comply with regulations promptly. Infringements bring penalties to the maximum of $5000.00 or five years imprisonment, or both.

HITLER chose "Guns instead of butter." So the Nazis have guns! We must catch up . . . and beat them.

They tortured people to make them save. We must save willingly.

So it's up to us, each one of us, to economize of our own free will . . . to economize and buy War Savings Stamps so that we can outstrip our enemies with planes and tanks and guns and ships . . . so that our soldiers may be better equipped than the enemy they have to conquer.

Women must help by economizing in the kitchen, by patching and darning, by shopping carefully and cutting out waste. Make up your mind now to buy one, two, five or more War Savings Stamps every week. You can. You must!

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, July 13, —Re-opening of discussions relative to western private farm debts was accomplished at Regina, Friday, when representatives of the three prairie governments met to discuss proposals for presentation to the federal authority for debtor rehabilitation. The Regina meet follows the notable conference at Saskatoon June 29 and 30, at which all governments and farmers organizations were represented. When delegates to the Regina meet have reached an agreement as to the best proposal to make, they will proceed to Ottawa.

Four members of the Alberta Legislature, two opposition and two government members, told old age pensioners in Edmonton this week that they were wise to organize and press for more adequate pensions. Representing the government were Hon. N. E. Tanner and N. B. James, M.L.A., with J. Percy Page speaking for Independents and Hugh J. MacDonald, K.C. representing the Liberal group. Mr. Tanner declared that the pensions problem will be settled adequately only when government has the power to issue, create and control the distribution of currency and credit. The recent $5 a month increase was a step in the right direction, but was not enough. Mr. James urged pensioners to keep up pressure until they obtained $50 a month for all more than 50 years of age.

Among Alberta industries showing steady increases in production during the first four months of this year are coal mining, which improved 30 per cent with production valued at $7,221,704, petroleum, which rose 22 per cent to a value of $3,298,590, cattle exports, which rose 64 per cent to a value of $3,502,219, sheep and lamb exports, up 93 per cent to a value of $461,174, and cheese production, which rose 154 per cent to a value of $259,617. Packing plant production was valued at $21,285,631, a gain of 70 per cent.

During the first three months of this year, live stock marketings showed encouraging gains. Cattle [illegible] 70,146 head valued at $3,555,100 an increase of 52 per cent, calves numbered 16,280 worth $364,698, an increase of 44 per cent and hogs numbered 585,853 worth $12,912,200, an increase of 96 per cent. Sheep and lambs numbered 73,213, were valued at $693,611, a gain of 28 per cent. Gains were also recorded in flour milling, 6 per cent, concentrated milk, 57 per cent, clay products, 4 per cent, lime, 30 per cent, and butter, 5 per cent.

Unemployment relief decline 71 per cent with 4,446 registrations.

RED CROSS SPECIAL

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

London, July 13— Murderous raiders swooped down out of the sun-gilded clouds to machine-gun children who were playing that summer's evening on a coastal village green. Peter Cooper, head warden, who rushed Canadian Red Cross aid to these little victims, told me the details of this slaughter of the innocents.

"Nazi bombers flew towards the village and made for the recreation ground where schoolboys were playing cricket," he said. "The airmen blazed away with machine guns and dropped bombs on their homes—one house was demolished. In it were Albert Gibson, gassed during the last war, his wife and their daughters, Gladys and Maggie. The entire family was wiped out with the exception of their son Harold, aged eighteen, who left home to join the colors that morning."

Women's Voluntary Service workers dashed from the nearest town with Canadian-given mobile canteen and car filled with Red Cross foodstuffs, blankets and clothing. A rescue centre and first aid post were quickly established and wounded children and parents given help on the spot in the name of the people of Canada.

Having splattered the village with blood, the Hun airmen flew on to the neighboring village to repeat the crime. Dick Marsh, civil defence worker, described the attack: "Nazis flew so low they could not fail to see the children playing on the village green. Bombers skimmed tree-tops as they flew up and down the green, machine-gunning the kiddies. Although several were injured, the only child killed was six-y[illegible] Jean Handforth, who was practising five-finger exercises on the piano in her grandmother's house. Bombers fired through the window spattering the tiny tot on the piano stool with bullets."

Marsh supervised first aid service which the Red Cross quickly provided. Wounded toddlers had their wounds bound with bandages which other kiddies in Canadian homes had rolled. They were wrapped in Canadian-given blankets—an ambulance from Canada rushed them to hospital. But not even the Canadian Red Cross could do anything for the bullet-riddled body crumpled in a heap at the foot of the piano.

Send your contributions to your local Red Cross branch, Provincial Division, or to the headquarters of The Canadian Red Cross Society, 95 Wellesley St., Toronto, Ont.

WASTE AND FRILLS ARE OUT OF FASHION

Waste and frills are out of fashion! The ruffles you omit from your next pair of curtains will help spread the available supply of cotton which will become growingly scarce because of the increased demand for war purposes, as well as shortage of labor and materials for manufacture.

Those who make their own curtains and slip covers can contribute to the war effort by sticking to the simplest styles — straight-hanging tailored curtains that stop at the window sill, and slip covers without a pleated apron.

Considerate care of household fabrics is just as important as careful buying. Buy washable fabrics whenever possible. Dirt is the enemy of fabric life. Wash or clean curtains and slip covers before they get so dirty that harsh cleaning methods must be used.

GUARD CHILDREN AT STREET PLAY

Now that thousands of school children are home from school for the summer holidays, motorists are being urged to use every care to prevent accidents.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association have drawn attention to the danger when children are allowed to play on the streets or highways without proper supervision.

Some weeks ago, police found that a two-year-old child had been fatally injured without the car driver having any knowledge of the accident. Evidently the car had been started up and driven away, without there being any indication that a youngster was playing under it.

Children play on the streets or roadways, eagerly using these clear spaces for their sports or games. They are unaware in many cases of the need of keeping a sharp lookout for motor traffic.

Each summer season, a number of deaths are caused through youngsters running out from behind standing cars. In some cases, they suffer severe injuries.

A.M.A. officials urge parents or guardians to warn children to watch for oncoming traffic.

Motorists, most certainly those who drive safely and observe traffic laws, strive to avoid accidents, but there is a duty on parents or guardians to impress upon children the dangers of playing or running across [illegible] regardless of the dangers that lurk there. Co-operation on the part of all will serve to avert the injury and possible death of Alberta children when at play.

TRUCK DRIVERS MUST HAVE PERMITS TO CARRY PASSENGERS

Truck drivers must be sure to have permits to carry passengers, on their trips, obtained from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. J. Gordon Wilson, Services Representative, Truck Control of the Board, has given a memorandum to Superintendent R. I. Bird of the R.C.M.P., detailing the cases in which truck drivers are required to produce permits for passengers, in an increased effort to curtail unnecessary travel and conserve equipment.

Any employer requiring the use of a truck to carry employees where no other means of transportation is available, such as to logging or construction camps, must apply to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Williamson Building, Edmonton, for a permit.

In districts where there is no other means of transportation, such as by bus, train, or boat, a truck driver may obtain a permit to carry passengers to their final destination, or the passenger should apply for a permit.

A farmer driving a truck on Sundays, or on any other business than that of the farm, must have a permit to carry passengers. On the other hand a farmer does not require a permit to carry any members of his family, employees, or neighbors in his truck, when on business in connection with farm work, or on necessary shopping trips to the nearest town on week days.

Livestock owners and two helpers may ride in the cab of a truck when used for freighting livestock, without a permit, but livestock owners may not use their trucks to carry members of their families, even when the truck is in use for freight, without a permit from the Board.

HONEYBEES ON A WAR FOOTING

(Experimental Farms News)

Not only is honey needed to take the place of sugar, but beeswax has become of greater importance. By increasing the production of wax and saving every bit produced, beekeepers will be making a contribution to the war effort.

Beeswax is used in the building of Corvettes, the manufacture of parachutes, fuses, explosives and many other essential items. The beeswax crop of 1941 was estimated at 320,000 pounds, but during the present year at least 500,000 pounds are needed for the war effort alone and an estimated 750,000 pounds for 1943. Thus, the war requirements far exceed the supply without consideration of civilian uses. All shortages in the past have been met by importing wax from other countries, but the shipping situation prevents dependence upon this source for the time being. At the same time the United States is faced with a reduction of 2 and a half million pounds in her imports and is also issuing an urgent call to her producers, says C. A. Jamieson, Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm Ottawa.

Certainly a large quantity of wax can be saved each year by removing every particle from the hives [illegible] periodical examinations, and by scraping all hives, supers, floorboards and other equipment before storing it away for the winter. Some more may be saved by turning from comb honey to extracted honey production, comb honey is a luxury which can easily be omitted from the production program for the duration. A [illegible]able saving can also be made by preventing the destruction of comb by wax moth, mice and other pests. Another point that should receive careful consideration is the burning of combs from diseased apiaries. Melting them under expert supervision is just as efficient although a little more costly.

More wax can be produced by using one less comb in every super which will result in a fatter comb and an increased yield of capping wax. In uncapping these combs the cappings can be cut even with the wood.

All cappings, broken and deformed combs and scrapings from hives should be consigned to the melting pot.

NEW C.N.R. LOCOMOTIVES POSSESS BIG POWER

Montreal, July 13—Locomotives now being delivered to the Canadian National Railways to haul wartime freight include a new arrangement of steam piping designed by System engineers to obtain greater power with economical coal consumption. On stretches of main line between Toronto and Montreal modern engines of the National Railways haul trains with as many as 100 laden freight cars when moving war supplies.

JULY 1st AT TOFIELD—

IT IS WITH genuine satisfaction that we publish the financial statement of the activities at Tofield on July 1st. It is pleasing to know that once again this day has proved a success financially and that the Red Cross Association will profit handsomely from the day's doings. While the gate receipts were lower than last year, the net profit was greater and resulted in a surplus of $205.60 which was handed to the Red Cross.

All those who in any way whatsoever contributed to the success of the day are to be congratulated on the success of their effort, knowing that in addition to having arranged pleasure for hundreds of people, they have also arranged for assistance for those in dire distress.

CORN IN EGYPT—

THE ROYAL BANK of Canada has the happy knack of getting out a fairly human news letter. Certainly on most occasions the letter deals with money, gold, silver, bonds, mortgages, stocks, shares and the general paraphernalia of the financial world. But even so the fellow or fellows who write the letter seem to be able to dilute a purely Scroogian subject with a degree of human interest.

For the month of July however, the institution really outdid itself as while the folder published is still a "bank" letter it contains no reference to money, stocks or bonds, neither is there any exhortation to save or borrow, but rather the usual bank phraseology is replaced by an exceptionally good article on dehydration of eggs, fruit, vegetables, etc.

Preserving food by the process of drying is as "old as the hills." While a combination of mechanization and science has brought modern dehydration to a high pitch of efficiency, even if not perfection, some form of dehydration for human convenience has been practised for centuries. A few years ago Chow Joe (Big Ben) gave us some dried Chinese cabbage, which when soaked and boiled was quite good, resembling Swiss Chard. Chow Joe told us "all China boys eat it."

Of late years the preservation of foodstuffs either by sterilization, quick freezing or drying, has become big business. Everybody knows the familiar canned goods, city dwellers have become accustomed to the quick frozen foods and more recently a new version of dehydrated fruits and vegetables have become known. Of the three processes, for the moment at least, dehydration holds the spotlight. With a world-wide war raging and shipping space at a premium, any process of food preservation that will reduce weight and bulk and at the same time retain food value and palatability, is a pearl without price.

For almost fifty years in Great Britain there has been many attempts at successful dehydration of vegetables for human consumption. But something in the way of management, technique, supply, etc., almost invariably brought a halt to the most promising prospects. In 1934 however, a plant was started at Cambridge, Eng., and in 1935 the company commenced drying on a commercial scale. The enterprise has grown to five plants and a sixth is now under erection. The company's product consists largely of dried vegetables for cattle feed, but it also does much business in dried vegetables for human consumption. One of its products is dried potatoes in powder form by which mashed potatoes may be procured by the house wife in a few minutes. Those working in the industry run up against numerous difficulties among which the following may be cited as a fair example. In the drying process the starch granules of the potato become broken which prevents perfect reconstitution. This means that when the house wife makes mashed potatoes from the potato powder, she obtains a sticky mass instead of a fluffy bulk such as good mashed potatoes should be. Success is being achieved in regard to this problem. Another difficulty is the retaining of natural flavors in dehydrated vegetables. Turnips, carrots and such like vegetables for dehydration purposes are invariably shredded. The early product due to its appearance and lack of flavor was promptly dubbed hay. Research indicated that this was due to enzyme activity, which could be prevented if the vegetables to be dried were subjected to a blanching process by steam or otherwise. Flavor and palatability can only be retained when the vegetables in their fresh state are of excellent quality. In America dehydration of vegetables has literally leaped into prominence. In 1940 there were 15 plants producing 5 million pounds of dry vegetables. There are now reported to be 113 plants with an aggregate annual production of 125 million pounds. When one considers that to get one pound of dry vegetable, 15 pounds of water must be evaporated, it does not look so easy. It is probably news to many that even such a product as butter is being dehydrated. The New Zealand Dairy Research Institute before the war perfected a method of dehydrating this product. A trial shipment of 400 tons was made last year and the British Government have contracted to purchase 20 thousand tons between 1942-1943.

Throughout the entire world preparations for war go on apace. Over a large portion of it actual hostilities occur. Men and machines formerly devoted to agriculture, profitable or unprofitable, are now being drafted into belligerent ranks. It is true we now have on this continent, all we need in the way of foodstuffs. But is is also true that over large areas on other continents a shortage of food exists. It is impossible to foresee into the future and on this continent we may never have to face a situation where there is not enough food to go around. But it is quite obvious that over the entire world with so much energy being devoted to warlike pursuits, there will be an increased demand and lessened supply of food for human needs. Consequently any information or any process that will enable foodstuffs to be stored in years of plenty for use in years of scarcity, should be of absorbing interest.

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

As the representatives of the people of Canada stoke up the legislative fires in the crowded nation's capital, the sweltering summer heat and the extremely contentious measures cause tempers and temperatures of the wilting members of Parliament to climb up to the breaking point. The result is that in these critical days the progress of Parliament is a tidal movement of flood and ebb of interest and there is often exhibited an obvious impatience for action as the debates on war problems drag on in Parliament, with many odd and important, though often unpublished or improperly publicised, events disclosing themselves both in public and in private wherever or whenever these representatives work, talk or relax on Parliament Hill.

To a casual observer, these reactions behind the scenes of the representatives in dealing with domestic crises apply only indirectly to the task of navigating the ship of state in its dangerous course, but to an experienced observer, these reactions of the spokesmen of our democracy mean much in indicating the striking differences between their opinions in the past and today, in explaining their altered perspectives, and in implying the kind of outlook that exists along Parliament Hill. These reactions in domestic crises and subtle yet definite changes do not apply indirectly but directly to the task of steering the ship of state through the storm of world war and world changes because beneath the surface these reactions show that all representatives are really in complete agreement that nothing whatsoever shall sidetrack them from their single and common purpose of winning the war.

In other words, opinions of representatives may change to fit conditions, but these are necessary reactions to save Canada as a nation and to hold on to those things which are valued most in our form of freedom or democracy.

Reduced to the simplest terms, this means that though some events along Parliament Hill are often unpublished or improperly publicized yet they are really extremely important happenings judging by the reactions and interest of the representatives themselves. A veteran observer knows that in no uncertain manner.

Just such an event of extraordinary reaction and interest amongst the representatives themselves has been provided by Hon. Cyrus MacMillan, member of Parliament for Queen's Prince Edward Island, and Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences at McGill University in Montreal, who broke his silence and made his maiden speech after three sessions in Parliament. But what surprise and excitement he caused by his sensational speech which was more remarkable since it was delivered obviously off-hand or without any preparation. This was apparent because, as word spread about in the lobbies and offices of what was happening, the House of Commons was filled up quickly with members who followed with intense interest every word of the unusually brilliant speaker, breaking out again and again in loud, spontaneous applause from all sides.

But what did Hon. Cyrus MacMillan say?

He started his unforgettable speech simply by making the introductory remark that he was not posing as an "evangelist of harmony" since he did not believe that disharmony existed to-day in Canada to any great extent.

"There has been far too much beating of dead political horses," he said as the House of Commons listened with rapt attention. "I am going to vote for this legislation. This bill before us is the result of a people's decision, a popular vote, a popular choice, but while overwhelmingly in the affirmative, it was not unanimous. There was a difference of opinion in every town, in every district. That difference does not mean revolt or disunity. It does not mean hatred. In these days, with an effort to make everybody think alike, or not think at all, surely it is a privilege, perhaps a luxury, to differ from those for those for whom I have a deep respect. One of the things we are fighting for today is the liberty of difference, and that liberty of difference does not mean the severance of friendship.'

"Now there is a certain portion of the press," he continued, that, with a peculiar presumption, arrogate to themselves the sole anxiety for an all-out effort. They even become armchair strategists and field marshals. I have no objection to their assuming that role if by doing so they do not paint an inaccurate picture of my country. We are all, inside this House and outside this House in Canada, whatever our differences may be, one in hope and in heart, and that hope is for the speedy winning of the war. The young men, young women and the children with whom I have come in contact in this country are each and all sentinels on duty willing to do their best for the safety and defense of the country. Therefore, let us be done with this disunity and these recriminations. Let us guard our tongues and our pens when we write or speak about this bill. Now with many of my honorable friends in this House who served in the last war, I believe in the voluntary system so long as it works. We believed in it in the last war. But there may come a time when the supply of men will dry up. We cannot win this war without aggressiveness, aggressiveness means casualties, casualties means reinforcements, and reinforcements mean that troops have to be raised and sent in one way or another.

"I think one of the proudest things to any Canadian is the success of the voluntary system. In my little province (P.E.I.) small in size but great in heart, nearly 10 per cent of our entire population have enlisted for active service. If that proportion was extended throughout all Canada we would have over a million men in the field today. Conscription in my province would not mean anything because there is no one left to conscript, and that I think should be the situation throughout Canada."

After discussing the youth of this country, his or her problems, and other factors in what he termed a "sleep walker's world" at one time, he referred to the press once again.

"One man has been pursued relentlessly and maliciously in a manner before which I think future historians of Canada will stand appalled. That man is the Prime Minister of this Dominion. I am not going to indulge in excessive compliments because it always breeds suspicion, but I will say that it is not for his contemporaries to judge him, but I believe he will be borne in the hearts of the Canadian people because of his conduct of affairs in these last few years, as long as this nation survives."

The Dean of McGill University then proceeded to complain about the lack of news, to explain what Canada is fighting for in this war, to indicate his opinion [illegible] situation of the Province of Quebec in this war, and to read Sir Arthur Currie's famous message, part of which states as follows:"You will advance or fall where you stand, facing the enemy . . . on many a hard fought field of battle you have overcome the enemy. With God's help you shall achieve victory once more."

"My point is this," said Hon. Cyrus MacMillan, "that message was sent to us a little more than three months after the conscription election, with all its turbulent activities. Do you suppose that the men who listened to that and went over the top to crack the Hindenburg line were worried about conscription? The Frenchman from Three Rivers was in the centre of the platoon; on his right was a Scotsman from Cape Breton; on his left an Irishman from the Fraser Valley or Toronto, an Englishman from Victoria. One word only described them. It was the word "Canada" on their shoulders."

The reaction of the representatives to the words of this spokesman has been electrifying and it has been an event full of meaning or consequence along Parliament Hill, though it has been improperly publicized in proportion to its effects.

THE NATIONS DANCE FOR JIMMY GOWLER

When not otherwise engaged, Jimmy Gowler, youthful Winnipeg musician and orchestra leader, spends most of his waking hours chasing tunes. He chases them through Winnipeg's crowded, cosmopolitan streets and through rural Manitoba when the opportunity offers. In some town or country home, some farmer or town-dweller from Russia or Czechoslovakia, or Norway, or Sweden, or Denmark, hums over a folk-dance remembered from his light-footed youth, and Jimmy, with a stub pencil and the back of an envelope, jots it down. A week or so later you hear it on CBC's "Dances of the Nations" (Saturdays, at 11:30 p.m. CDT, 10:30 p.m. MDT). A few days ago some of Winnipeg's lovely young dancers from several national groups came down to the CBC studios during rehearsal to show Jimmy how the dances really went. Here they are: Miss Gladys Pundyk, in Polish costume, is demonstrating a polonaise, while standing by and clapping hands to the gay music are Miss Marion Kummen, of Norway, and Miss Greta Hammarstrand of Sweden. Miss Kummen is the daughter of Mr. C. T. Kummen, Winnipeg's Norwegian consul. The costumes worn by the young ladies are not only complete and authentic, but extremely valuable and —at present—almost irreplaceable.

PRICES OF FARM PRODUCTS IN BRITAIN

The price that British farmers obtain for their wheat is 16s per hundredweight. As the official rate of exchange now makes a British shilling worth 22 Canadian cents, this would equal $2.11 a bushel.

The price of feed oats in Britain is now $1.06 a bushel.

Prices of cereal grains were raised during the forepart of the year to compensate farmers for the increased cost of farm labor.

The British Food Administration buys practically everything the British farmer produces, and its operations have a considerable effect on the methods and practices of British farming. The influence of agriculture is exercised first of all upon the patriotism and goodwill of the farmers and then by fixing prices in such a way as to encourage production of what is wanted. There has been a steady increase in the price of domestic farm products since the war began, and the guaranteed prices for wheat, potatoes and milk are now considerably above those paid for the same products in 1939.

SUBSIDY ON BUTTERFAT

With a view to stimulating increased production of butter and to avert a threatened shortage next winter the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has announced a producers' subsidy of six cents per pound on butterfat effective as from July 6th, 1942.

Higher production of butter is required in Canada. For the first 5 months of this year creamery butter production was 10 per cent lower than for the corresponding period in 1941, while domestic disappearance was more than 10 per cent higher.

Not only is the Wartime Prices and Trade Board interested in higher production of butter, it calls on Canadians to eliminate all waste of butter by every possibl[illegible]

The six cents subsidy on butterfat is payable to the creameries and they pay them to the producers. Cream producers will, therefore, look to their local creamery for payment of the subsidy.

SUCCESSFUL W.C.T.U. CONVENTION

(Mrs. I. B. Moen)

The W.C.T.U. convention was held June 26 and 27th, the first convention date was postponed on account of bad roads, and the second one was no better as far as roads were concerned, as the weatherman, gave us a regular downpour for both days. But everybody turned out with smiling faces, even after being pulled through mud holes and taking shortcuts through farmers' yards.

Some of the city women had the thrill of riding in a horse drawn trailer for the first time in their lives, and saw with their own eyes what genuine country mud is like.

The convention was splendid with a good turn out to the very last afternoon.

The biggest crowd was Friday evening. When the Junior Silver Medal contest was held. Every contestant did justice to themselves and their community. Rebecca Eide won the Silver Medal. Each of the six contestants received a box of candy from the local W.C.T.U.

Several musical items were intermingled through the program.

Piano solo, Corrine Haukedahl, Solo, Muriel Ness; Song, by the school children; Duet by Alice Broughton and Muriel Ness. The Provincial President gave an address.

Saturday finished all the business and reports and Saturday afternoon the convention ended after which we all joined hands and sang "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

We wish to thank everyone who took part in the program and for the splendid way our neighbors turned out and helped us with the lunch, and the hospitable homes who took care of delegates for the night.

Dutch Harbor is situated on tiny Amaknak Island, in a deep inlet of the northern shore of much larger Unalaska Island one of the long chain of Aleutians which string out in a sweeping arc toward Japan. It is about 2,835 air miles from Tokyo on the southwest and 2,345 miles from San Francisco on the southeast. It thus forms the apex for a roughly triangular line which might be drawn on the map between the three points. From Seattle, Wash., to Dutch Harbor is about 1,900 air miles.

The United States has been building fortifications there since 1940. Their extent has been kept secret.

Dutch Harbor, which until recently was only a village with a trading post, a fuel oil depot, and a naval radio station, received its name because of the tradition that a Dutch ship first entered its bay. Russian navigators however, early came this way. They knew the then-busy fur-sealing centre by its native Eskimo name of Udakta. Later the harbor became a way station for vessels making for the gold rush regions of the Yukon and Nome, Alaska.

Dutch Harbor is one and three-quarters miles long by half a mile in width. Water is deep near the shores and in most parts of the harbor; violent gales occasionally sweep these waters, when mariners are warned to look out for williwaws, sudden gusts of cold land air, common along mountainous coasts of high latitudes.

WHEN TO CUT SWEET CLOVER FOR SEED

(Experimental Farms News)

Sweet clover seed matures very unevenly and as ripened seed shatters readily it is never possible to secure the entire crop. Generally, the crop is harvested when two-thirds of the seed pods have turned brown. A calm, dull day is preferred for the job and where possible it is advisable to take advantage of a heavy dew or light shower. Seed cut on the green side may have good germination but well matured seed carries more plant feed and is more pleasing to the eye. Moreover, plump seed is more readily cleaned.

Occasionally it is necessary to hasten or delay cutting to avoid certain mixtures in the crop. On the other hand, sometimes this can be accomplished by leaving a high stubble.

These and other points, states E. C. Stacey, Assistant Superintendent of the Beaverlodge Experimental Station, will be obvious if the stand is critically inspected as maturity approaches. If the stand is clean and uniform the decision as to when to cut will be less troublesome than if it is weedy or patchy. At best one has to be ready to act promptly and once having decided to cut not to regret the inevitable loss from shattered seed, since if the decision is wisely made the improvement in the crop thus secured will probably more than equal the accompanying loss.

MUST APPLY FOR POSTPONEMENT WITHIN EIGHT DAYS OF DATE OF NOTICE

When a recruit receives his notice to take a medical examination to ascertain whether he is medically fit for military training, he must go before a doctor within 3 days for his examination as the notice informs him. It would be wise for him to ask the doctor whether he has been placed in Category "A" for no one is being called for service at present who is not placed in Category "A". If he is placed in Category "A" and desires a postponement of his training he must apply in writing to the Registrar of the War Services Board at Edmonton within 8 days of the date, not the receipt, of the notice, stating the reasons for his application. If he is employed by another, the employer should support the application. If there is such a delay in the notice reaching him that he cannot take the examination and make his application within the specified time, he can and must send in his application not later than the day he takes his medical examination. He need not and should not apply in person at the Registrar's office. His failure to make his application as and within the time specified will probably result in his failure to secure a postponement, however deserving he may be of such postponement, for the Board is forbidden to grant a postponement within fourteen days of the date at which he is subsequently notified to report at the military training centre. The provisions apply to every one including farmers who are entitled to postponements for they are so entitled only if they apply as stated.

The delay in the notice reaching the recruit is in nearly all cases due to his failure to comply with the Regulations requiring him to notify the Registrar of any change of address, the result being that the notice may travel from Post Office to Post Office before it reaches him. Under the Regulations not merely must he notify the Dominion Statistician, which most of them do by going to the Post Office and signing a postal card which is furnished them, but he must also notify the Registrar of the Division and his failure to do so may result in his being deprived of the right to receive a postponement and in addition will render him liable to a penalty under the Regulations.

In all cases in which a farmer applies for a postponement he should not only send in his written application but he should fill in all the answers to the questionnaire sent him and have the facts certified by some one in authority who has personal knowledge of them, and forward it with his written application. The observance of these regulations will avoid disappointment for they have the force of law and the Board must see that they are carried out. The Board is required to send a specified number of recruits to the training centre and on the specified days and after the list is made up and the notices sent out it is too late to make changes, and it is useless to make applications then for the Board is forbidden to grant them.

When a postponement has been granted and a further postponement is desired, it is essential that application be made within the time specified in the notice advising of the postponement, whether a farmer or not.

"SUGAR" CARDS FOR MEN IN UNIFORM, MEMBERS W.A. FORCE

Soldiers, sailors airmen, and members of the Women's Auxiliaries to the Armed Forces will be given sugar ration cards to pack in with their kit when they go on leave of more than seven days, it is announced by the rationing division of Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Edmonton. They will be issued with sugar ration cards by designated officers of the force, who will return their applications to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

But, if members of the Armed Forces have leave for seven days or less, they will have to depend on sharing the sugar supplies of their relatives and friends.

Upon enlistment with any of the armed services, men or women will be required to surrender their sugar ration cards. On entering barracks, men or women will likewise be required to give up their ration cards, which in both cases will be returned to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

LINE ELEVATORS' EXHIBIT

A brightly lighted mechanically operated panorama to emphasize the tremendous importance of agriculture in Canada's war program will form the main portion of the line elevator companies' exhibit on the fair circuit this summer. The entire back part of the 30x15 ft. booth will be divided into three sections. The first will be a Western Canadian rural scene. This will illustrate the production of those farm commodities which are urgently needed for war. The second scene shows an industrial area. From one end of this scene essential farm products will be seen moving to the factories. This movement will be effected by means of an endless belt. At the other end of the scene another endless belt will carry the processed farm products to seaboard for shipment to Britain and the fighting fronts. The third scene will show a convoy of ships actually moving out to sea. Merchant ships carrying precious food from prairie farms will be escorted by warships arranged in proper convoy order.

One of the sides of the exhibit will be used to illustrate the amazing things which are being done to foods to conserve shipping space. Exhibits will be included to show how much space is saved by drying eggs, evaporating and powdering milk, and dehydrating fruits and vegetables. The opposite side will illustrate how yields of crops needed for war can be improved by controlling weeds, insects and diseases.

A pamphlet entitled "Your Farm Has a War Job" will be distributed from the exhibit. Sound moving pictures will also be shown. All farmers and other fair visitors are cordially invited to visit the line elevator companies' display. It will be shown at the Swift Current frontier celebration and the following exhibitions: Estevan, Calgary, Portage la Prairie, Yorkton, Melfort, Lloydminster, Vermilion, Vegreville, Red Deer, North Battleford and Prince Albert.

LINDBROOK

A party was given by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lancaster in honor of Mrs. J. Leahy of New Westminster, B.C. Mrs. Leahy, being an old resident of this district, only her old time friends were present. Whist was played for a while but after a few hands, was abandoned to renew old acquaintance with the guest of honor. A dainty lunch and coffee was served and during the same, the prizes were distributed. Mr. and Mrs. W. Glenn won the ladies' and gent's first, respectively, whilst Mrs. J. Brown won the coveted consolation prize and Mr. Otto Lindgren won the same for the gent's end of the game. Despite a downpour, the guests all got home safely.

The VVR target practice on Sunday afternoon was very well attended and some very good scores made, in fact all the targets showed a pretty good average.

There have been several loads of scrap delivered at the elevator this week, but more is needed, so please get it in as soon as possible.

Several of our local men went to Ministik one evening last week to discuss matters relating to the new Farmers' Union meeting. They were Messrs. W. Lancaster, C. Morden, and Jas. Hooper. By the way, have you joined the Union yet? If not, do so and save your bacon, you'll never get anywhere going on as you are now, the others will always have the say.

The heavy downpour on Friday, whilst causing annoyance, did not do much damage, beat down a little of the crop where heavy, also some hay; as for the haymakers, well, we cannot print their remarks about it.

The sympathy of the Lindbrook folks is extended to the Waters family of South Cooking Lake on the sad loss of their father, Mr. V. Waters. Deceased was rather well known even in this district, and we feel sure will be sorely missed by his nearer neighbors and friends.

KETCHAMOOT

"And the rains came," you did not have to go to the movies either to see it, as an exceptionally heavy rain fell Friday and Saturday. We are afraid to complain as we have seen dry seasons too. But enough is enough for a long while, as it is impossible to get haying and summer fallowing done.

There will be no Ladies' Aid meeting this month, but will be held at the regular time next month, Aug. 5th, at the school house.

The Ketchamoot people, especially the ladies are pleased their picnic is over, and that it turned out so well under the circumstances. The Ladies' Aid cleared $73.00 at the table, the Red Cross $20.00 at the stand and $16.75 at the dance at night. We wish to thank one and all who helped in any way to make it a success and there were many ways.

Messrs. Dan Dodds Harold Schultz, Clifford Appleby, Stanley Sears, William Davison and Elizabeth Findley, attended the dance at Lakeview Friday night. Dan, Harold and Stanley motored on to the city and spent the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lee and Miss Viola, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lee and son Wayne of Edmonton, came down to visit relatives and attend the Ketchamoot picnic. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lee stayed over until the next day to greet old time friends.

The Sears family held a family gathering at Lakeview Sunday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sears, Albert, Hazel and Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears and Gary, Mr. and Mrs. William Ingram and children, Wesley and Donna, Mrs. Wendell Wiley and Yvonne, Jimmie Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Owen, Allen and Oliver of Holden, Mrs. Don Creasey and daughter, Frances of Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Harrison, son Ralph and little Miss Ruth Turris, spent Sunday at Lakeview.

Mrs. J. H. Ingram received word her cousin in the R.C.A.F. had been killed overseas. Albert Sears was the guest of his parents when stationed in New Brunswick.

Mrs. Harold Smith and daughter, Elvie, returned to their home at Mountain House one day last week. They were accompanied by Mrs. Smith's sister, Miss Mabel Lawson.

Practically all the neighbors spent one day at the Edmonton Exhibition.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCall, now stationed at Calgary visited home folks on Saturday.

Mrs. Alvin Schultz and son Bobby returned to their home at Leduc one day last week.

LAC Albert Sears, RCAF, left Tuesday evening for Rivers, Man. after a two week's leave with home folks.

Miss Edith Davison of the CWAC who is stationed at Calgary is spending a two week's leave with her mother and brother.

Home folks of LAC Tom Sutton of the RCAF received word of his marriage. He is now stationed at N.B.

The Barnes, Coombes, and Davison families spent Sunday at Hastings Lake.

Messrs. Jimmie Ingram and Art Patterson attended the Calgary Stampede and spent a few days at Banff.

Miss Hazel Sears spent the week end in Edmonton, the guest of the Thompson family.

Mrs. A. J. Williams returned home one day last week. She accompanied her sister from Fort Saskatchewan to a trip to the coast to visit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sutton have purchased the old Whittier farm which has been built up into a nice home.

Municipal Notes

The one big question looming up on the horizon today is that of sufficient farm help for harvesting operations. The problem has had the attention of the authorities for some time and recently Mr. W. H. Moss, manager of the Unemployment Insurance Commission Office in Calgary, addressed a gathering of M.D. secretary-treasurers and other Municipal officials on the matter.

†—†—†

There has been formed a provincial advisory committee for harvest help, one member of which is a secretary treasurer of a municipal district. This committee has asked the secretaries of all municipalities to co-operate with the District Agriculturist of the Provincial Dept. of Agriculture to call meetings in his district for the purpose of acquainting the farmers with the seriousness of the situation and the necessary steps to take to solve the problem.

†—†—†

The meetings would be expected to set up local committees composed of elevator men, representatives from various farm organizations, leading farmers, business men and others.

†—†—†

The functions of these local committees will be:

(a) To organize the district so that by an interchange of work or otherwise, the needs of the local district will be taken care of locally.

(b) To ascertain if help is needed in the district. The number still required, and data required to be furnished by the committee to the secretary-treasurer, who will advise the Employment and Claims Office of such requirements.

(d) It is suggested that the committee arrange with farmers obtaining such help to the end that board be provided during inclement weather.

†—†—†

At the last meeting of Cornhill Council, the question was raised as to the payment of men called out to fight fires. In paragraph 19, page 6 of the Act for the Prevention of Prairie and Forest Fires after going on to say that men may be called out, the paragraph ends with "and such assistance and services shall be rendered without remuneration."

†—†—†

The more than ordinary rainfall has made the work of road construction none too easy this season. At present the large outfit is working in division 3. The patrol grader tries to keep one jump behind the rain.

†—†—†

Don't forget the office will be closed July 25th to August 5th, both dates inclusive.

†—†—†

If you want the government to pay you wheat acreage reduction you must file a sworn statement. Don't wait until the last day.

†—†—†

If you have less wheat sown this year than you had in 1940, you have a claim. Also if you had no wheat in 1940 but had wheat in 1939, and this year you have less wheat than you had in 1939, you have a claim.

†—†—†

After some long time of uncertainty, the scrap problem has settled itself down into an orderly plan. Those with scrap metal are asked to take it to a nearby elevator. The agent will, on behalf of the government, and without cost to the government and without profit to himself or the elevator, buy suitable scrap iron and steel at $7.00 per net ton. Sheet tin, automobile bodies, and fenders, stove pipe, etc., are not acceptable.

†—†—†

Scrap metal is urgently needed for the war effort and this plan simplifies its collection, at the same time making it worth your while to deliver your scrap.

LAKESHORE

Mrs. Sherlock sr. is visiting old friends in the Lakeshore district, and was able to see a number of the ladies at the meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Sherlock looks very well and it was a pleasure to have her meet with us again.

Walter Eaton spent a day in town this week that was anything but pleasant. He had his tonsils removed Wednesday morning. Here's wishing him a speedy recovery. It isn't very pleasant to pass up fried chicken just because your throat is sore.

Mrs. Bethel and Mrs. Bill Seale attended a shower for the former Miss Dolly Weslake, on Tuesday afternoon.

Miriam Seale had a jolly camping holiday with four or five other girls at Cooking Lake.

Mrs. Abernethy left Saturday evening to join her husband in Ottawa where she will spend a few weeks with him before he comes west for his summer leave.

Mrs. Majakey and Vernon are at Lloyd Wood's while Mrs. Abernethy is in Ottawa.

The ladies seem to have it all over the men this year when it comes to holiday trips, so it is with real regret that we noticed an omission last week. We fully intended to say that Mr. Warner and the boys had been to Boyne Lake with Mr. Donnelly Warner on a very successful fishing trip. We doubt if any of the ladies will have as much to show for each day of their trip as these men—and probably won't be able to match the men's stories.

R. C. Phillips returned from the coast last Friday, spending a day or two in Edmonton on the way back.

There are rumors that two of the quartette that started for Vancouver two weeks ago were left behind when the train pulled out of Edmonton. Trains, as well as time and tide, wait for no woman—but we'll leave the story for the ladies to tell when they get back.

The weather favored the ladies on Tuesday and there was a good turnout of both L.A. members and War Workers. The Ladies' Aid discussed plans for a congregational picnic, but no definite date was set. The War Workers completed the afghan and turned in a large bundle of other articles to be donated to the Red Cross and I.O.D.E.

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

It has been indicated in this column in the past that claims of serious disunity both in Ottawa and out of it often contain flamboyant and intemperate exaggerations of the truth. Today, it can be stated that this is even more so because evidence of such time-wasting and effort-wasting activities keep coming to light in such volume that this veteran observer must report that well-informed sources backstage along Parliament Hill hold that to believe these claims of disunity is to overstate or to exacerbate the actual situation.

Though for some time now the Government in Ottawa has become surrounded with political differences of a very perplexing character, yet there is much convincing evidence to support this belief. But it would require far too much space to present in detail all the arguments or reasons. However, a specific instance of importance might be mentioned at this time. It consists of precise statements made in Parliament in a single day's proceedings by the leaders of every responsible political party, showing the extent of good-will or mutual desire for unity which exist in reality today along Parliament Hill, if these statements are read between the lines.

"Today the very existence of the nation which was established in 1867 is threatened," said Premier Mackenzie King. "a few days ago for the first time since Confederation, Canadian soil was attacked." Then at another point, the Premier said, "Canada's Army is strong and it is united by a common purpose. It is the duty of all Canadian citizens to be no less strong, no less united by a common purpose. On this 75th anniversary of Confederation the need is greater than ever before in our history to let nothing divide us as a people, to compose our differences, and to throw all our energies into the task of saving our country and helping to save the freedom of the world. If we would be worthy of our past and the sacrifices of the past; if we would be worthy of the many brave sons of Canada who, in the present war, have given their all and of the half million young Canadians who have offered, if need be, to die for their country, it is our supreme duty, while striving for victory, to preserve for them and for future generations a free and united Canada."

"The genius and vision," said Hon. R. B. Hanson, Leader of the Conservative Opposition in Parliament on the same day when Premier King made the above statement, "of Sir John A. Macdonald, the patience and tolerance of Sir George Etienne Cartier and the helpful co-operation of Brown, Tupper, Tilly, and the other fathers resulted, as Sir John A. forecast, in the development of a friendly nation, a powerful people to stand by [illegible] North America in peace or war. "If democracy is to survive," he continued, "the freedom and liberties for which the Fathers of Confederation labored long and well must be preserved. The preservation of those liberties depends and will depend on the strength and of the united effort of each of the Allied nations."

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, urged Parliament on the same occasion to determine "what shall be done now to make our contribution the most effective we can make it."

J. H. Blackmore, Social Credit leader, stated: "I have been thinking how greatly disappointed the Fathers of Confederation must feel as they look down upon Canada from their high places and reflect how much unhappiness there is and has been in our country the last 20 years."

The important point is that these momentous statements signify that political good-will exists, with this meaning that the political circumstances in this war favour unity of effort to a far more comprehensive extent in Canada than it is generally recognized by the man-in-the-street.

Political experience, involving long and frequent trials over a great many years, indicates clearly that complete and lasting unity amongst masses cannot be created by the simple process of an arrangement or plan of their leaders. Likewise, this cannot be created by force. It is a course or operation of human society which requires good-will amongst the masses. If this does not exist, there can be no lasting or complete unity.

In our own time, the dictators of Germany, Italy and Japan have used both fraudulent plans and force to establish so-called "unity" amongst the masses, but there is not the slightest doubt that at the first opportunity such so-called "unity" will break down because there is no good-will amongst the masses. Indeed, even Germany, there is no lasting unity. The Prussians, Bavarians, and Saxons are not really a permanently united people. Upon the first political revolution in Germany, they will act as separate entities because there is no good-will. Though the people of Austria and Germany have many features in common, yet there has never been any lasting union between them since there is no good-will. The people of the Balkan countries were held together under Turkish rule for hundreds of years, but this union did not last since there was no good-will. The people of Poland did not become united with the Russians, Germans or Austrians, though at one time or another in their history they were part of Russia, Germany or Austria, since there was no good will. The people of Sweden and Norway were united for a long time under one king, but the union did not last because there was no good-will.

While it must be admitted that there has been developed so far no faultless state of unity in Canada to resemble such an ideal state where everything is just perfect, yet at the same time it must also be emphasized that there has been in the past, and even more so today, much convincing evidence or circumstances of good-will along Parliament Hill as well as amongst the masses throughout the land, with many claims of serious disunity being not only somewhat exaggerated but often quite imaginary.

The examination of the witness had been long, and attorney, witness and judge were all tired. "And about how far is it between these two towns?" the attorney asked.

"About six miles as the flow crow" replied the witness.

"You mean as the cry flows, I suppose," interjected the attorney.

"No, no," interrupted the judge. "He means as the fly crows."—Pathfinder.

Barley for Choice Bacon

Bacon which is relished by the British consumer can only come from the right kind of hogs fed in the right way. That consumer happens to be Canada's best customer for this commodity. No matter how ideal the type may be, a hog will not yield good bacon unless it receives the right kind of food. Which of the common [illegible] best feed for bacon hogs has been the subject of a series of interesting tests conducted by Dr. E. W. Crampton, animal nutrition expert at Macdonald College, Quebec. The work was carried on under the auspices of the National Barley and Flax Committee. Western grains [illegible] in the experiments. His first test was designed to determine the relative feeding values of barley, oats and corn. Barley was shown to be definitely superior to either oats or corn, whether rate of gain, efficiency of feed or carcass quality were measured. Oats resulted in slower gains and unfinished carcasses. Corn fed hogs were consistently degraded because the carcasses were oily, soft, and overfinished.

The next test was made to compare the feeding values of barley and wheat. This was suggested by the Barley Committee because of the surplus of wheat and the rapidly expanding swine industry in the prairie provinces. The results of this test showed that barley fed hogs yielded more suitable carcasses, but those getting wheat made faster gains. These results would suggest that wheat and barley should make an ideal combination to secure maximum efficiency of feeding, and at the same time obtain high quality. This is precisely what Dr. Crampton proposes to study in a test now in progress.

In the meantime, farmers are being urged to grow more barley to feed more hogs, which are needed in Canada's expanding war program.—Contributed by T. B. Pickersgill.

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, July 23— Presentation of the farm debt relief proposals was made by a delegation representing the three prairie governments and supporting organizations in Ottawa this week. After presentation of the brief, framed on lines endorsed by the Regina conference, the delegates planned to return homeward.

Of interest to farmer debtors throughout the West is the announcement by the Alberta Attorney-General's department that Manitoba and Saskatchewan will join Alberta in carrying the Debt Adjustment act judgment appeal to the Privy Council in London. Alberta's Debt Adjustment Act was, after years of operation, declared ultra vires. Just prior to the farm debt conference in Saskatoon the Saskatchewan Debt Adjustment Act was declared ultra vires. Manitoba, having a similar statute, fears a similar judgment, and is joining in the joint appeal to the highest tribunal in the Commonwealth.

Indications are that an election contest will be staged in Edmonton to fill the vacant legislative seat caused by the death of D. M. Duggan, Independent member and former Conservative leader. C.C.F. Steady increase in the co-operative movement of Alberta is indicated in a recent report of the Co-operative Activities Branch, which records the incorporation of three more associations. Acute shortage of miners in Alberta will be given study next week by Hon. N. E. Tanner and departmental officials, it is stated here. It is reported that the man-power shortage is most acute in the domestic mines, and that this will undoubtedly affect consumer supplies. It will be recalled that government officials urged the early stocking of coal supplies for winter use, in view of the manpower shortage and the heavy transport burdens. Consumers are able to finance purchase of winter supplies through banks, by federal government arrangement.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange

HEAVY WHEAT CROPS OF THE [illegible]

This is a year of heavy rainfall. Judging by the records of the past this year should see a heavy crop.

Since the year 1898—44 years—in twelve years the wheat yield for the three Prairie Provinces combined has averaged over 20 bushels to the acre, all being years with better than normal rainfall.

In only four of these years, however, has each of the three Provinces enjoyed a 20 bushel or better yield during the same year. These years were 1901, 1905, 1911, and 1915. The highest yield ever recorded for the three Prairie Provinces combined was in 1915 with an average of 25.9 bushels to the acre. Next came 1901 with 25.1 bushels to the acre and 1902 again with 21.5 bushels. The highest yield to the acre ever recorded by any one province was by Alberta in 1915 with 31.1 bushels to the acre.

1916 and 1923 would probably have been record years had it not been for the rust which took a heavy toll in Manitoba and parts of Saskatchewan. Since 1935, when Thatcher was brought into the country—later followed by the use of other rust-resistant wheats — losses from rust have not been serious.

Since 1923 the three provinces combined have not produced an average yield of 20 bushels to the acre, the nearest being 1939 with 19.1 [illegible]

ANSWERS TO SUGAR PROBLEMS

Many problems and questions have been submitted to the Consumer Branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Answers to a number of these questions are given as follows:

Q. Is any allowance of sugar made for the making of pickles or bottled fruit juices?

A. No sugar is allowed for pickles. In the case of fruit juices the same allowance is made for canning and preserving, half pound of sugar for every pound weight of fruit.

Q. Can beekeepers obtain sugar?

A. Yes. Any person keeping honey bees may apply for registration as an industrial user of sugar. Application stating the name and address of beekeeper, the number of colonies of bees kept, and the amount of sugar required up to the end of September should be made to the provincial Apiarist in the province for Alberta, Mr. W. G. leMaistre, Terrace Buildings, Edmonton.

Q. Can extra sugar be obtained for social functions?

A. No. Hostesses and organizers for social and charity functions, must provide sugar from their own rations or request their guests to bring their own, unless such functions are sponsored by the Red Cross and provided with sugar supplied by the Red Cross.

Q. Can sugar be obtained for canteens serving the armed forces.

A. Yes. Restrictions as to the purchase of sugar do not apply to purchases by the Red Cross Society or for any canteen or mess situated within the limits of naval, military, or air force camps, barracks or similar establishments.

Q. What happens if a consumer loses his or her ration card?

A. Another card can be obtained on application to the nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board office. But securing it may take time and cause inconvenience. Be sure to keep a record of your ration card [illegible]

Tin is urgently needed. All collapsible tubes should be turned in to drug stores, cigar stores or general and departmental stores, required to have recepticles to receive them. A check up indicates not more than 25 to 30 per cent of such tubes are being turned in.

DEBT CONFERENCE RESULTS

The following resolution was passed at the interprovincial debt conference held in Saskatoon on June 30th.

Whereas the agricultural industry in Western Canada is required to carry on under an economic structure in which its costs are fixed, and its production is subject to all the hazards of nature, and the fluctuations of open world's markets, and its income in consequence is extremely variable and incapable of being accurately forecast, and

Whereas the exigencies of war have determined the government of Canada to dispose during the war, of the output of the main agricultural products of Western Canada at a price which nets the farmer little if any surplus above the cost of production, available for the reduction of debt, and

Whereas the price ceilings imposed by the Federal government for the purpose of avoiding inflation were imposed on goods and services in certain other areas of Canada after the prices for those goods and services had risen under the impetus of war spending: but price levels for western farm products and services had received relatively little impetus from war spending before being subjected to the price ceiling plan, and

Whereas recent judicial decisions of the courts of Canada have [illegible] mined that many of the legislative enactments which have made it possible for western farmers to continue their operations in the face of the recited conditions are beyond the power of the legislatures of the provinces to enact, and

Whereas the rights which the creditors are now entitled to enforce were created in circumstances in which debtors and creditors alike assumed abilities to pay which subsequent economic and natural conditions have demonstrated to be incapable of attainment, and

Whereas the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act was passed in 1934 for the purpose of relieving against what was believed to be the consequence of a temporary condition of economic and natural disaster, and has served in common with provincial enactments now found to be ultra vires, to give a measure of relief from such consequences, and

Whereas the recited economic and natural conditions which were thought to be temporary are inherent in the hazards attendant upon agriculture in Western Canada and will recur,

Therefore be it resolved that a tribunal or tribunals be created by the appropriate legislative authority in Canada to:

(a) to write down the principal of farm debts, secured and unsecured.

(b) to reduce the interest rate on farm debts, secured and unsecured.

(c) to alter the terms of payment of farm debts, secured and unsecured.

(d) to review and revise its own decisions in the light of events subsequent to the making of the decisions.

(e) to extend to individuals in any particular year or circumstance, the protection of any of the provisions of this legislation available to any debtor, whose affairs are being administered under it.

(f) to stay proceedings arising on debts or securities after an adjudication has been made.

(g) to make the foregoing remedies available with respect to any farm debts regardless of the time at which they were incurred.

PARROT GIVES GOOD ADVICE

Montreal, July 20—Passengers hurrying to board the Maritime Express in the Canadian National station here were startled when a voice shrilled out over the platform: "Good-bye, and don't forget your war savings certificates!" The speaker was a parrot in a cage being carried to the express car. He was on the way to Riviere du Loup where the family he belongs to—that of Col. J. Harvey Hough—is spending the summer. Expressmen said he was quite talkative while waiting for the train.

CULL PULLETS FOR PROFIT

During the growing season of chicks cull and destroy any sick or unthrifty birds. Such birds may spread disease throughout the whole flock, says B. F. Tinney, Dominion Experimental Station, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Real culling for profit is done at the time of placing pullets in laying quarters. Two pitfalls are to be avoided: 1. Don't save a poor pullet merely because the pullet crop may be somewhat scarce, and, 2. Never keep a poor bird because it came from some famous breeder or hatchery.

It is much better to feed eight good pullets and discard four poor ones than to feed the entire dozen at a loss. A poor bird is a liability regardless of the reputation of the breeder. Cull without mercy to the fine points of productive ability. Keep birds with broad back, deep body, clear cut face with fine-textured comb and wattles, bright eye, close feathering and alert carriage. Watch eye color closely and discard every bird showing variation from the natural eye color. White, grey, or "pearly eye" in a bay eyed variety is a symptom closely associated with leucosis and all such birds should be discarded immediately.

It is essential to observe strict sanitation and avoid the use of caked or mouldy feeds.

THE NEW ZEALAND WAY—

Speaking over the C.B.C. on Empire Day, Hon. Walter Nash, New Zealand Minister to the United States said of New Zealand:

> "There are no very wealthy people in our country, and there is no real poverty; but in spite of the heavy added war expenditure, there has been no retrenchment in what we call social services."

The first part of the quotation is remarkable, and the second part more remarkable still, as while New Zealand has long been held up as a pattern to follow as regards social legislation, a country in which there are no very rich and no very poor, sounds almost too good to be true.

That it is true is eloquent testimony to New Zealand statesmen and people and their outlook upon life. The following extracts from the address by Hon. Walter Nash, are taken from "The Country Guide," who procured a copy of Mr. Nash's address and printed a considerable portion of it.

"I think we have got one of the most interesting social security acts in operation in any country. The government takes the view that the war, far from being an occasion to retreat, demands a courageous advance as far as advance is humanly possible, in social progress no less than in military strategy. It is concerned to ensure that wartime economy burdens are spread fairly throughout the whole community, but without affecting those who are least able to carry the load— those on the lower income levels, the aged, the invalids, the mothers, and the children. The majority of the New Zealand people feel strongly that those very principles and achievements that have made New Zealand a country worth fighting for should not be needlessly sacrificed in the struggle. In the field of social reform, therefore, there is to be no general retreat, no retreat at all. In fact, there have been advances.

Listen just for a few minutes to what the social security act really means. The idea behind it is to care for the old people because they have built the foundations upon which we live today, to care for the young, because they have to do in the future that which we have done in the past to make our country a progressive country, to care for the invalids because they are not able to care for themselves, to care for the mother because it is she who gives life to all— who makes life possible in our country, and in every other country. So our social security legislation passed in 1938 has been improved. It makes provision whereby every person, male or female, aged 60 years or over, shall enjoy in their own right, an income of at least thirty shillings a week; so that an old couple on passing the allotted span of sixty years are given three pounds a week for themselves by right. They can also have a pound a week joint income of their own in addition to the full Security Age Benefit. They can own their own home; they can have five hundred pounds saved up in the Post Office Savings Bank, or anywhere else where it is safe—and their benefits will not be affected.

A widow gets twenty-five shillings a week for herself, and ten shillings for each child until it reaches the age of 16; should the mother, as mothers usually do, want to keep the youngster longer at school, the ten shillings continues until the age of 18, provided the youngster's education is continued. Invalids get thirty shillings a week for themselves, ten shillings for a wife, and ten shillings for each youngster up until 16, or 18 if they are kept at school.

But that isn't all. There is nearly always a time in the life of the ordinary worker who has a home and family to support when the mother is with child and she is worrying—some times in the past she did not know where she was going to get the money to pay the doctor's bill or the hospital account. That doesn't happen in New Zealand now. The full account of the doctor is paid by the state and she either gets a nurse in her own home for a fortnight or she can go to a maternity hospital without any charge. All hospital treatment is also entirely free. Medicine is also supplied to everyone without charge and the doctor can be obtained by anyone without payment.

Now there are a lot of things associated with social security but I do not think there is anything better than the family benefit scheme. That is a simple arrangement under which—provided the income of the home doesn't exceed five guineas a week—then the mother receives six shillings a week for each child until the child reaches the age of 16 or 18 if she wants to keep it at school. That insures that when there is another mouth to feed and the ordinary earned income remains the same, the mother will have an extra six shillings a week added income for the home. The money to pay for this comes out of the social security fund and five per cent of everybody's income is paid into this fund. If there is any shortage, it comes from the consol-

RAIN RECORDS FOR FIFTY YEARS SUBJECT COMMENT AT CAMROSE ROTARY

(Camrose Canadian)

Precipitation! funny word, isn't it? And like so many words in our conglomerate English language it has several meanings. Ye dictionary says it means: "a headlong fall", "a violent and swift descent" "rashness" and in Chemistry it is a commonly used word, but when F. L. Farley spoke of precipitation at Camrose Rotary Club luncheon on Monday he was talking about "moisture condensed from the atmosphere, and falling up the earth's surface, as rain"!

Some extremely interesting figures were presented by Mr. Farley, resident in central Alberta for the past 50 years, with the greater part of the time spent in the town of Camrose.

A study of figures will reveal the fact that Camrose is fortunately located in the parkland belt of the province, made so by the stability of moisture conditions. There has never been a crop failure due to lack of moisture. The lowest rainfall on record was that set down during the growing season last year—1941. This year, as Mr. Farley remarked, has had ample rainfall for all needs.

By means of a chart the speaker showed the amount of precipitation (snow and rain) Edmonton, 70 miles northwest of Camrose, has received since 1886, when records were first kept. The average as shown by the records made since the beginning of the century at the Lacombe Experimental Farm was approximately 18 inches per annum.

A comparison of the precipitation recorded in Edmonton during the years 1930-31-32-33 with that of Camrose shows that Edmonton had 68.79 inches, and Camrose 56.96 inches.

It has been generally believed, Mr. Farley stated, that Edmonton was favored with more rainfall than this locality, and the foregoing figures definitely prove this to have been the case. A moment's figuring demonstrates Edmonton's average as about 3.5 inches in excess of the moisture received at Camrose, or 12.77 inches more than in this area, in the four years.

It was pointed out that in the past half-century there have been two quite distinct seasons often referred to as "the wet cycles"—covering the years 1899 to and including 1904, and 1911 to 1920.

Real old-timers can recall the verdancy of the land during these wet periods as well as the difficulties which faced travellers endeavoring to negotiate roads largely composed of sloughs and detours.

On the other hand there were some exceptionally low moisture years. At Edmonton, [illegible] and 1889, the rainfall was 6.53 and 6.48 inches respectively.

At the same place, however, in 1900 the greatest precipitation in the entire recorded history of rainfall in that area was posted into the record, 30.88. It will be remembered, Mr. Farley said, that this was the year when copious rain fell throughout the harvest season which made cutting and thrashing the heavy crop most difficult.

Up to date this year, 1942, precipitation recorded at Camrose has been 10.47 inches, while the total in 1941 was slightly more, namely 10.93 inches.

It is quite apparent, Mr. Farley said, that the summer moisture is more abundant in the territory nearer the Rockies than it is farther east, and this statement is substantiated in view of the excess rainfall in the so-called parklands as compared with the more open country to the eastward.

The annual average precipitation as recorded at Lacombe, 18 inches, is and has been generally sufficient for the successful raising of field crops, always depending of course on whether the rains fall in the growing months, that is May, June and July.

The speaker noted that if moisture is deficient in that period and arrives later in the season, its value to the growing crops has, of course, been lost, and sometimes has been a hindrance during fall activities.

This present season has been as nearly perfect to date as could possibly be desired, Mr. Farley said, and he might have added that the crops have been free of damage from insects, blight, hail and wind. Excessive weed growth is the only detrimental factor.

Another inch or two of rain during the filling and ripening time is all that is required, and barring hail, frost and damaging storms, a bumper crop can be anticipated, the speaker concluded.

BANK OF MONTREAL CROP REPORT

General: Exceptionally favourable weather conditions during the past week have maintained the promising outlook in the Prairie Provinces. There is ample moisture. Wheat stands fare heavy to medium; the wheat is well into the shot blade and heading is occurring in most districts. Coarse grains show excellent promise. Potato and root crops are very good. Fodder crops and pastures are in exceptionally good condition. There have been scattered hail losses. Damage from other causes is slight, but weeds are prevalent and there is an extensive sawfly threat in southwestern Saskatchewan and southern Alberta.

In British Columbia, conditions generally are satisfactory and indications continue to point to better-than-average crops of grain, roots, vegetables, cane fruits and most tree fruits.

PRAIRIE PROVINCES

Alberta: Crops are developing satisfactorily under favourable growing conditions. Rains have been received in central and northern areas and moisture conditions are generally good. Scattered hail losses are reported but the acreage destroyed is not large. Sugar beets are making good progress.

Saskatchewan: Generous rains have again fallen and while crops are somewhat backward, warmer weather has stimulated growth and prospects are excellent. Wheat is heading well and coarse grains are making good progress. There have been small losses from wireworms and cutworms and scattered hail losses have occurred. Weeds are troublesome but damage from all causes is not important.

Manitoba: Moisture conditions are satisfactory and crops have made rapid growth; they are about ten days later than average and a continuance of higher temperatures is required. Wheat is heading out well. Coarse grains are in excellent condition. Pastures and hay crops are in first-class shape. Weed growth is heavy and scattered damage from hail has occurred, but all losses are unimportant.

PROV. OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Heavy crops of hay and alfalfa are being harvested. Soil moisture reserves are adequate. Roots and vegetables are developing rapidly and supplies will be plentiful. Recent warm weather has been especially beneficial to tomatoes, cucumbers, and melons, which are making excellent growth. Cannery pea crops are maturing rapidly. Loganberries and raspberries are plentiful and are moving in quantity. Blackberries are sizing well and a good crop is in prospect. Cherry-picking is in full swing, but the crop generally is light. Apple thinning operations have been delayed through shortage of labour. All tree fruits are sizing well, and with the exception of apple scab in some areas, the crop is clean. The following yields are indicated: apples, apricots and peaches, 90 percent of average; pears, 80 percent; prunes, plums, and cherries, 80 percent. Pasturage is plentiful and good fodder crops are indicated.

FARM LABOR SURVEY

A general shortage of farm labor is indicated in a survey conducted by the Extension Service, Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Agricultural Section of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce. The survey shows that farm labor is already a problem in many districts of Alberta and is likely to become more severe as the season advances and haying and harvesting create heavier demands for help.

Generally speaking the grain producing areas and the outlying areas, where farms are small, are suffering less from a lack of labor than are the irrigated and mixed farming areas. In the opinion of those completing the survey, a very severe labor situation will arise this fall in Southern Alberta, if weather conditions are not suitable for harvesting with combines, while farther north, where combines are not widely used, the harvest labor conditions are likely to present a major problem.

The shortage of farm labor has not yet affected agricultural production to any noticeable degree, but the fear of a shortage this fall and next year is having an effect on farmers' plans for the future. The survey indicates that some land is already being seeded down to grass because in that condition less labor is needed for its continued operation. Any considerable trend in this direction might have serious results in the production of essential agricultural commodities. Dairy farms which require considerable labor may be among the first to feel the effects of a shortage and in view of the importance of the dairy industry in producing essential food stuffs, the situation that may arise later on is viewed with alarm.

Of those reporting on swine production, 18 per cent believe there may be a serious decline as a result of a lack of labor, while 19 per cent fear a serious reduction in dairy production.

The replies indicate that female labor is not available in sufficient quantities to alleviate the situation. Only 18 per cent of those reporting state that female labor can be obtained, while 58 per cent stated that female labor could be used to offset the shortage.

The necessity of calling men for military service is recognized by those reporting on labor conditions. However, several reports mention the need of leaving sufficient labor on farms to maintain production of agricultural commodities, or a delaying of calling on farm labor until the [illegible] seasons of the year are past. Greater co-operation between individual farmers, doubling up on outfits and similar ideas are put forward. The releasing of men from training for the harvest period is suggested and among other recommendations is that of releasing rural high school boys for part of the month of September.

FINE IMPOSED ON HOARDER

When 222 cans of soup, and 884 cans of fruits and vegetables were found in his basement, Abraham C. De Fehr of Winnipeg, paid $150 and costs, for hoarding, in charges laid by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

De Fehr, who immigrated to Canada from Russia in 1926, pleaded necessities of diet. But it was found that his recent purchases of canned goods exceeded all such claims within reason. He paid the fine.

HEAD OF P.E.I. SCHOOLS ON BOY SCOUT TRAINING AS EDUCATION

Among the many social movements appearing at the beginning of the present century, outstanding has been the Boy Scouts. Their success arises from the development of the activity principle as an educational method. The natural instinct of youth to discover birds' nests, to be familiar with the habits of wild life, to excel in games of skill, is directed to Nature Study and skill in Handicrafts which are of the utmost educational value. When to these is added a code of honour based on Christian Chivalry, the result is a training of character, which is the supreme aim of education. —H. H. Shaw, Chief Superintendent of Education, Prince Edward Island.

YOUR SCRAP METAL URGENTLY NEEDED!

This New Method makes Scrap Metal Collection easy for you.

More scrap steel and iron is urgently needed for more ships, tanks, planes, guns and munitions. You are asked to do your part by turning in every available ounce of scrap metal from your farm.

In order to facilitate the systematic collection of scrap iron and steel in the three Prairie Provinces, the Wartime Salvage Limited, a Government Company, has completed arrangements with the following Western Canadian Elevators for collection and purchase of scrap iron and steel:

Alberta Wheat Pool. Saskatchewan Pool Elevators.
Manitoba Pool Elevators Ltd. United Grain Growers Limited.
North-West Line Elevators Association.

These Companies handle and purchase this material on behalf of the Government without cost to the Government, and without profit to themselves. Any monies received over and above the actual cost of handling will be donated to War Charities.

An Agent of one of the above named Elevator Companies has been appointed in your district as an official buyer on behalf of the Wartime Salvage Limited. The price to be paid by these Agents has been fixed by the Department of Munitions & Supply at $7.00 per net ton at the elevator, for all forms of scrap iron and steel excluding: (a) Sheet tin of any kind; (b) Automobile bodies and fenders; (c) Stovepipe; and (d) Wooden attachments.

This price applies at any designated point in the Prairie Provinces.

Your contribution to the war effort and to war charities is simplified by this arrangement and it will be more effective inasmuch as you now can take your scrap metal to the Elevator designated in your district and obtain a receipt for it from the Agent.

Should you desire to donate your scrap to the war effort, then such receipt voucher can be endorsed by you, payable to the Voluntary Salvage Committee in your community. The Voluntary Salvage Committee will use such money for war charitable purposes.

Your contribution of scrap iron and steel is urgently needed NOW. Dig out every available ounce of scrap on your farm and take it to the Elevator Agent nearest you without delay. Canadian war industry needs it badly.

THE NEW ZEALAND WAY—

idated fund. I think that covers the social security scheme and after all that is what we are fighting for—to defend that—to defend our freedom—to defend the right to send our own people as we want them to parliament and to make the laws in the right way.

We are trying, as far as is humanly possible, to pay for the war—half of it at any rate, as we go along, and taxation is very high. When unearned income reaches 12 thousand dollars a year—90 cents out of each dollar has to be paid in direct taxation. Everybody also pays a flat tax of seven and a half per cent—seven and a half cents for each dollar. This year we expect to spend on war 133 million and we will get 40 million of it out of taxation—eight million from ordinary national savings and 28 million from war loans. We are thinking with a deep sense of gratitude of all that Canada has done to help us—all that the United States has done—all the British and Australians have done

That reminds me of a little grace that you might say, particularly if you are listening in England—something I heard repeated the other day Somebody in England was asked to say grace, and this is what they said "For what we are about to eat, let's thank the Lord and the British Fleet " We too have a lot to thank the British Fleet for. But when the Axis is defeated, it will be our right and our privilege, in association with you in Canada, and with our allies among the free people of the United Nations, to build up a new democratic system of government in which all men and all women of all countries will enjoy peace and security, and a fair share of the earth's riches. May we of the new world, of the younger democracies, of Canada, of America, of Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, one and all pledge our sustained and untiring efforts until victory and a lasting peace have been secured. Then may we all go on from the goal we have reached to a better and a fuller life, with these few principles driving us on: One, that no soldier shall be worse off financially because he fought for his country; two, that no person shall be better off because he did not fight; and three, that no person, organization company or corporation should expect to be allowed to make profits out of this war. God sent no man here to work or fight merely to make life easy for some other man who is able to work or fight, but who neither works nor fights. What applies to men applies to nations, and to races. The war is to bring freedom for all nations The Atlantic Charter applies to all peoples. In the eight points of the Charter, the word "All" occurs ten times."

As regards New Zealand's contribution to the war effort, all those who have followed the progress of the war know that in men, money and material, the little dominion down under has more than played its part Canadians, while rightly giving first thoughts and first efforts towards winning the war and national domestic problems, can profit immensely by learning more of New Zealand and the working out of her social security program.

Wheat Pools Reduce "Street" Spread

The western Wheat Pools decided at an interprovincial conference, held in Calgary on July 16th and 17th, to reduce by ½c a bushel the spread in the handling of "street" wheat delivered to the Wheat Board through Pool elevators for the ensuing crop year. This means that the "street" spread in Board wheat handled by the Pools will be eliminated and farmers who deliver on that basis will receive the carlot price and benefit by ½c a bushel as compared with last year's charges. The Wheat Board has been advised accordingly.

This decision was reached because of special conditions which are certain to prevail in the marketing of the 1942 wheat crop. The present arrangement with the Wheat Board provides that a producer must deliver 750 bushels in order to qualify for carlot price However, it is probable that the first quota will be five bushels to the acre and many farmers will not have a sufficient allotment to deliver 750 bushels, even although they may have substantial quantities of wheat in farm storage.

The Wheat Pools have taken the leadership in this matter just as they have in virtually every proposal to aid western agriculture in the past.

WIZARDY IN CEMENT SIDEWALKS

Sidewalk artists are fellows who with colored chalk draw portrait and scenic pictures on the pavements of large European cities. But this week we have at Tofield, sidewalk artists of a different kind, fellows who make the sidewalks And they are artists too, as with some gravel, sand and cement, in about half the time you would expect them to take, they lay a piece of the snappiest sidewalk you ever saw. Incidentally, an air cooled engine, cement mixer, pneumatic tired wheel barrows and a lot of experience, is included in their equipment. J. Congdon of Edmonton is the contractor.

LINDBROOK

The Rev Reuben Rogers has moved into the new house that he has built on the land owned by Jas. Brucegirdle The home is half way on the west side of the road leading from the store to the station, and is a neat, compact little building.

We understand a shower was given for Miss Dolly Weslake, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs. Geo. Weslake, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Robinson here. Miss Weslake was recently married in Edmonton. We don't know her married name, nor any details re the shower, but we all wish her and her husband all the best that life affords and a long one together

Get busy on this Farmers' Union and sign up Everyone bar the Government admits that the farmers aren't getting fair play. Why? ask yourself, look around and see. We notice that the Sheep Breeders Association is strongly pressing for a bonus on wool Butter has it, so has wheat, and the price of raw wool is miserably low in comparison. What a pity that they aren't backed by 100,000 farmers in unison, they'd likely get somewhere then. Another thing, that farming doesn't mean only wheat. Dairying, livestock, poultry, eggs, honey, all come under that heading Of late wheat has been king, but it is not so anymore. So sign up now! Don't be a piker.

V.V.R. NOTES

Parade Tuesday night was well attended and bayonet fighting instruction was given by Corp Lancaster to the complete platoon for 30 minutes, then Corp Evans took over the platoon for platoon manoeuvres for 30 minutes. This was then followed by a 30 minute route march in charge of the platoon commander, the parade being led by the bugle band playing a stirring bagpipe march.

Mr. J. Druce has kindly loaned us a bugle, for which we extend our thanks.

The mosquitoes gave us a great deal of trouble on parade, and caused a real blistering verbal blitz from all ranks.

A cross-appeal taken by the Attorney-General against a judgment declaring it ultra vires to increase dues to $2 50 and $3 00 was allowed.

Although the debt easement proposals presented to Ottawa by the prairie governments, representing all farmers of the west have been formally accepted by the dominion, no consideration of them has yet been made, it is stated by Justice Minister St. Laurent. He added that the prairie delegation had been informed that it was too late to do anything in the way of legislation during the present session of Parliament, but if a program of emergency action was prepared and submitted, it would be considered. No comment on this statement has yet been made by western delegates.

Mr Delano was in Edmonton recently conferring with Government officials. Of five gateways listed, the Lethbridge-Edmonton route from Great Falls and Billings is mentioned.

No Subsidy On Dairy Butter

Numerous enquiries have been received at the office of the Provincial Dairy Commissioner regarding the payment of a six cent bonus on dairy butter.

The regulations as outlined by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board are very definite in stating that the six cent subsidy applies only to butterfat purchased on a butterfat basis and used in the manufacture of creamery butter. To complete the forms for a refund of the subsidy, it is necessary to show the Federal Registered number and also the Provincial license number. This means that any small dairy manufacturing dairy butter without a creamery license cannot collect any subsidy.

Summer Transplanting Of Conifers

(Experimental Farms News)

The most serviceable shelterbelt trees for prairie planting are spruce Though the most natural time to transplant these evergreens is during April and the first half of May, when they are awakening for a new season of activity, they can, however be transplanted successfully in late summer, says W. R. Leslie, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Station, Morden, Man. In Southern Manitoba mid-August has been favourable. Large numbers of four-foot trees have been moved without any loss at the Morden Station.

In moving trees it is important that the soil be moist. At this time the parts of the tree above ground have completed their growth. The terminal bud is developed and the new growth has become firm and woody. However, underneath, a second period of very active growth of new roots has commenced. This extension of new roots continues until the earth becomes cool in autumn A tree moved in the last half of August, or early September, and well and firmly planted, should re-establish in its new setting before the growth processes are halted by cool temperatures in the soil. October transplanting is approved by some growers but little, if any, new roots will sprout before the next May, and the operation is therefore more hazardous.

After a rain in September is a fair time to move larches. Junipers transplant well in late August The Rocky Mountain juniper from Alberta, North Dakota and Montana seems to be one of the evergreens best adapted to withstand bare ground and cold wintry winds, particularly on light types of soil.

In digging for transplanting, the ball of earth is bound about its equator with a band of burlap Such may be made tight and fast by weaving nails through the several overlapping thicknesses of the binder. Then the whole ball is gently rolled in a sack hammock. This is tied snugly and the tree moved to its permanent bed. The ball is placed in a roomy hole at a level of an inch lower than previously. The depth can be judged from the original soil mark to be seen on the tree trunk Nails and twine are removed. The burlap is untied but left in the hole. It soon rots. Pulling it out is likely to wreck the ball of earth and severely check the plant.

An important aid to success is to dump a pailful of peat moss into the large hole before placing the plant. This acid material encourages prompt root growth and retains moisture like a sponge Peat moss is a big help when mixed with the earth around the sides of the hole where heavy clay is the soil type.

FARMERS' WIVES TO SIGN SUGAR VOUCHERS FOR HARVEST CREWS

For the farmer's wife who is wondering how to supply sugar for table use when gangs of hungry threshers or harvesters come to her home, it is arranged that she may purchase the needed supply by voucher. That means she, or someone authorized by her will go to her regular retail store and sign a purchase voucher provided there for the sugar. On the voucher will be marked "harvest workers" or "threshing crew", the number of men at her farm, and the length of time they will be there. The retailer will follow the usual procedure of accepting the voucher, and supplying the sugar she is entitled to, on the ration basis.

Australian Conditions

Recently arrived Australian farm papers tell of the farmers' tribulations in that far-off land. The biggest problem confronting the farmers on the island continent is lack of labor, and even although Australia is in eminent danger of invasion by the Japanese military forces, the farm papers there are protesting, in a far more outspoken fashion than in Canadian farm papers, against the taking of farm labor.

"Australia faces one of her most serious crises of the war because of the government's bungling and short sighted attitude on the question of manpower for rural industries", says The Land, published in Sidney, New South Wales. "For many months new representatives of the primary industries, 'The Land' and other bodies directly connected with farming, have been calling for determined and co-ordinated action to stop the serious drain on farm labor to the military forces and munitions industries. All government departments, however have appeared indifferent to the legitimate claims of primary industry.

"Not only farm laborers but key men and farmers themselves were coerced and almost bludgeoned into the army, while valuable farm plant was left idle and farm stock allowed to die.

"Now the gravity of the situation has suddenly been realized by the government and the public. The revelation that serious food shortages are possible in Australia has caused widespread comment."

The government, on its part, reminds Australian people that the nation is threatened. A government spokesman said, "Every man is vital to Australian protection. The government has done everything possible up to the breaking point to meet the requirements of the military authorities."

The Australian wool clip is a large one, and the contract price of wool is approximately 27c a pound Australian money. About 300 million dollars Australian funds will be realized from the current year's wool production. Costs have risen, however, and wool producers are asking 33c a pound.

The Australian wheat farmer was guaranteed approximately 92c Australian funds per bushel for total deliveries of 140 million bushels from the 1941 crop. Over 153 million bushels were delivered and the government's proposition is now to cut the price to 54c a bushel for the larger volume. This has met with a storm of disapproval from the wheat farmers.

No restriction has been put on the production of wheat except in Western Australia, but there is a decided tendency to curtail wheat acreages over the entire Commonwealth While the surplus is not large compared with those of North America, there is no overseas market for Australian wheat and flour. —Wheat Pool Budget.

INDIAN TAKES ONE LOOK—THEN HEADS BACK TO BUSH

Winnipeg, July 30—Farlane, Ont., is on the Canadian National main line, near Minaki, but the passing trains never tempted Joe Strong, 69-year-old Indian guide to climb on board and go see a city. The other day he went to visit a grand-daughter living in Winnipeg. Newspapermen asked him his first impressions of city life. Too many people, he said, in too much of a hurry. The place was too noisy. The pavements were hard His feet hurt The trading floor and wheat pit of the Grain Exchange baffled him "I never heard anything like it in my life!" he exclaimed. Wild animals, he hinted, had more dignity than these city folk. Business men looked better, he thought, on hunting trips. Joe took the train back as soon as he could, to the wilderness quiet and a pair of nice soft moccasins.

WPTB Notes For Farmers

Questions in the minds of farmers these days are answered by Walter S. Campbell, Regional Representative, Wartime Prices and Trade Board:

Q Will the production of farm machinery be reduced?

A Yes—with a few exceptions, such as milk machines, cream separators, and one or two others, there will be decreased production, although there will be an increase in the production of machinery parts.

Q. Can a farmer move a tractor from a dealer's to his farm using marked gasoline?

A Yes, by obtaining a permit from the Provincial Fuel Controller.

Q. Can he move a tractor from farm to farm using marked gasoline?

A. Yes, a distance of ten miles is permitted.

Q Is there any danger of a shortage of milk cans?

A. The production allowed is 10 per cent over 1940 in any year and with the increase in production milk cans will have to be used continuously.

Q. Are exchanges of goods between farmers under the ceiling?

A. No, But if sales are made to persons other than farmers then the ceiling prices apply.

Q. What will be the supply and price of binder twine this fall?

A. Farmers will buy binder twine at the same price as 1941 The same grade may not be available. If substitution is made, the same profit only per pound will be charged as in 1941. Price ranges from 500 feet of twine at 9 cents per pound, to 650 feet of twine at 11½ cents a pound.

Sugar Provisions For Farm Workers

In order to meet a difficulty that was being experienced in farm households, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced on July 15th that merchants may accept purchase vouchers from farmers' wives or other persons who are feeding harvest workers, such as thresher gangs, fruit pickers or other groups.

Formerly, sugar for the meals of such transient boarders had to be supplied from the domestic ration of the household, unless brought by the workers themselves, which in actual practice usually means there was a deficiency. The remedy now authorized is adoption of the same procedure as in drawing sugar for home preserving. Effective from July 15, the merchant is permitted to honour a purchase voucher (without the necessity of its signer being tied to one supplier) if it shows: (1) the words "harvest workers"; (2) the number of them, and (3) the number of days' work for which they are being supplied with sugar.

On the line provided for stating the kind of institution or business, the applicant should write, for example, "five harvest workers: four days". The voucher must be signed, of course, by the person making the purchase.

Cereal Crops Field Day Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Aug. 14

The Annual Cereal Crops Field Day will be held at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, on Friday, August 14th.

Nearly three thousand plots of different varieties and strains of wheat, oats, barley, peas, and flax are available for inspection this year. Differences in maturity, length and strength of straw and general suitability will be apparent. Some of the most promising varieties will be seen in seed increase blocks.

Those who are interested in cereal improvement will appreciate seeing several hundred farmers' samples grown for purity tests as compared with samples submitted for verification by members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

A drive around the Station will provide an opportunity to see the cattle, horses, pigs and poultry, as well as the trees, shrubs, hedges, bush and tree fruits and flowers. Brief talks will be given on crops for hay and pasture.

We regret that owing to war conditions we will be unable to supply the usual tea, coffee and sugar. Hot water will be available. Bring your lunch and supper and spend an afternoon of pleasure and profit.

Reduce Accident Toll On Highway

Sharp decrease in fatal motor accidents on Alberta main highways so far this year has stimulated the work of those engaged in promoting safety driving measures.

Recently, Edmonton inaugurated a safety week, during which police and other officials stressed the necessity of careful driving and the need of checking up on cars to make sure that they were in good condition. Officials drew particular attention to brake testing as this plays a major part in checking accidents.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association have over a long period contended that same, safe driving would tend to reduce the accident toll.

Since the Federal government brought the 40-mile speed limit into force on all highways in the dominion, the result has been a decrease in accidents. In Alberta, there was a 50 per cent decrease in the number of motor accidents that involved damages in excess of $50 in the three months' period ended June 30.

Other provinces also report that the number of accidents have decreased. While it is recognized that the need of tire conservation and a smaller number of cars on the highway were factors, doubtless the 40-mile limit has been a major factor.

Coal Miner Fined For Hoarding Sugar

First prosecution under the enforcement counsel of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Alberta, took place on July 17, in Drumheller Police Court when Silvio Rauben, Italian coal miner of Aerial, Alberta, was fined $130.00 and costs of $3.75 with alternative 3 months in jail, for hoarding 60 pounds of sugar.

Prosecution was made by Magistrate Arthur G. Bond, under instruction of A. A. Carpenter, Enforcement Counsel for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Alberta.

Rauben made no attempt to avoid questions when R.C.M.P. discovered the sugar in his basement. The sack containing the sugar was stamped with the date May 28, 1942.

He pleaded guilty and paid the fine.

V

WARN CYCLISTS OF DANGEROUS RIDING

Warning to boys riding bicycles with apparent disregard for safety observance has been issued by the police.

In numbers of instances, motorists have complained of youths riding along the highways four and five abreast at times, and making driving hazardous to motorists as well as dangerous to the cyclists themselves.

City police state that these practices, as well as riding passengers on the handle bars, must be checked because they are infractions of municipal by-laws.

Motorists also have reported instances of bicycles on the highways at nights without proper rear lights, which again constitute a hazard.

Now that school holidays are on, hundreds of youths are taking to the highways but it is the duty of parents or guardians to see that they are impressed with the fact that the laws must be observed.

Gasoline rationing and tire conservation regulations also have caused many other persons to renew their cycling activities.

In these circumstances, the volume of bicycle riding is going to increase, making it essential, says the Alberta Motor Association, that proper riding safeguards and the law governing such traffic shall be observed.

No Coupons — No Sugar

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By Dr. K. W. Neatby

Director, Agricultural Department

North-West Line Elevators Association

Our laboratory has made duplicate germination tests and sent out reports on 5,623 seed samples of cereals [illegible] during the past winter. [illegible] shows clearly that services we [illegible] are in demand among farmers [illegible] are appreciated by them. Grain buyers are pleased to be in a position to assist their patrons in this way.

An equally, if not more, important matter follows.

Why have we in the prairie provinces fallen so far short of our flax acreage goal? Of course, there are several reasons. Some land is unsuitable, grasshoppers are a threat in some districts and it is not a particularly nice crop to handle. However, one of the chief reasons for fighting shy of flax is the prevalence of weeds.

Every farmer should know the names and habits of all weeds on or near his land. Perhaps this sounds like free advice which is worth only what it costs! Not so; it is a plain statement of fact. Any farmer who cannot recognize all important [illegible] may be sheltering some very dangerous ones without knowing it.

In order to have weeds accurately identified without cost, it is only necessary to deliver specimens (complete with roots and flowers—if possible) to any grain buyer of line elevator companies associated with this Department. Grain buyers will forward them to our office, and we will report promptly.

We feel inclined to apologize for dealing with a subject so unhappy; but the weed problem gets worse year by year, and we are ready and willing to help.

Our 75-page bulletin "An Illustrated Guide to Prairie Weeds" is available to farmers free. Consult your local grain buyer or write to us for a copy.

AIN'T NATURE WONDERFUL—HIGH NOON IN HER WORLD—

GEOLOGISTS TELL US that the age of the world is written in the ground and rocks. The world's age runs into millions of years and a million years more or less as far as we are concerned makes little difference. But no matter how many times the world has made its annual turnover, from the year slime commenced to be separated into land and water, vegetation has been sustaining life. Possibly in different ways and under varying conditions, from the cave men living pretty much the same as animals live to the thousands of human toilers who constructed great works like those of the Pyramids in Egypt and the Inca castles in South America, vegetation by itself and through animal protein, has given strength to myriads of humans. Dynasties, empires, kingdoms, have come and gone, building secrets and engineering methods have been lost in antiquity, yet vegetation as if to keep a faithful tryst with the sun, has produced and continues to produce life giving sustenance to man and beast. At different places and at different times there has been super abundance and a terrible void. Ramp-aging winds, drenching rains and flood deluges have swept away within the hour hopes laid on a foundation of months of toil. Scorching blasts and a burning sun have in a nerve racking way slowly squeezed hope and expectation from careworn hearts. But even though all this be true, somewhere, somehow, as the seasons rolled around, countless numbers of them, the thread of human life continued to run through the mantle of time. Some mouths were fed, some muscles were given strength, some seed was dropped to bear fruit another year.

Late July is high noon in the agricultural time table. The delightful freshness of spring has passed and is rapidly developing into the mellowness of autumn. From singing songs of love, the birds have become very busy raising hungry families, vegetation growth is at its peak and ripening processes are at hand. Everywhere there is the quiet of hope and expectancy based on visual evidences of nature's munificence.

There are hundreds of vegetable gardens in this district larger and better than mine, but as I awake each morning, through the small window in the tent I see corn, turnip tops, and pea vines. From that angle they look larger and more numerous than they really are, but of jungle like growth there seems aplenty. And in retrospect my mind goes back to the numerous times I have, on an adjoining street, on the way to the skating rink in the dead of winter, looked towards the northeast and seen gently sloping snow covered ground leading on to the lake. Under the light given by blue steel stars and with the haze of below zero temperature settling down, I have often thought that on just such a night, Robert Falcon Scott, antarctic explorer, walked out to die so that the chances of survival of his companions should be all the greater. And so it goes. From waving stately palm trees at the equator to the rugged pine trees of the northern wilds, there is infinite variety everywhere, all round the global northern hemisphere. Variety of clime, variety of products, variety of labor, but everywhere there is that planting and watching and harvesting that welds together into a bond of fellowship all those who take from the soil life giving sustenance for the benefit of all mankind. And we know as July-August sun shines down upon lush fields and green pastures in this the agriculturist's high noon that no greater contribution to mankind can be made than to arrange for its proper feeding. Many things are important but seed time and harvest and the men and women who assist nature in her work are irreplaceable.

PENNY WATCHERS NEEDED—

THE FIRST REACTION of some Canadian citizens to Mr. Isley's drastic new budget was to reach a hasty conclusion that after paying increased income taxes and compulsory savings, they would have no more money left to buy War Savings Certificates and Victory Loan Bonds.

No one will accuse the Minister of Finance for having failed to place Canada's current war problem honestly before the people of Canada. He reported that we would have to collect about four billion dollars to carry on during the fiscal year. He said that even with the increased taxes, he anticipated only about two billion dollars revenue from taxes, and that the other half of the year's war bill would have to come from voluntary purchases of certificates and bonds.

Mr. Ilsley was reasonably sure of his ground when he laid his new plan before the House of Commons. He knew that the large sum of two billion dollars to be raised through the sale of Canadian securities will be available. And he also recognized that that money will be available only if each individual does his share in cutting down his private spending to a bare minimum.

In days of easy money, and we have had these kind of days during the past two or three years, people have become accustomed to thinking in terms of dollars rather than in pennies and dimes.

Low Price Goods Will Stay Production

Headaches are chronic these days. Generals have them and so have Prime Ministers. Producers have them and so do consumers. The cause can be found in the problem of supplies—supplies for the armed forces, supplies for munitions plants, supplies for manufacturers.

Until recently it looked as if this problem of supplies were going to give one of the nastier headaches to consumers—at least to those people living on low incomes. They were worried. If there were not going to be enough supplies to meet everyone's needs, would the "little man" be the one to go without? But this month the Wartime Prices and Trade Board came out with an emphatic "No". If it can do anything about it the "little man" is not going to take the rap any more than anyone else. In fact if anyone is going to get a break, he will be the one..

The Board is taking steps to see that at least some of the cheaper lines remain on the store shelves and that the quality of these goods is maintained so far as is possible.

From now on when industry is told to reduce the variety of its products, 25 to six, it will also be instructed to maintain lines at various price levels, in fact the tendency will be to cut down higher priced articles. This is being done to make sure that the six lines left to the manufacturer will not all be at high price levels.

The lack of supplies for manufacturers means that it will be increasingly difficult to produce certain types of goods, and it is likely that many may not be back on the market until the war is over. Some articles formerly could be obtained cheap because there were surplus stocks, but that is no longer the case. Many mass production factories were easily converted to war purposes and now are making gun parts instead of kitchen utensils or filling some other civilian need.

Then, too, officials point out, many cheap articles never were manufactured in Canada but were imported from Japan or Central Europe and these, of course, are off store shelves for the duration.

News Of Your Army

(By Hal Miller)

Ottawa, July 27— So well have ex-servicemen who met the Hun in the Great War done the various Active Service jobs assigned to them in the Veterans Guard of Canada that 2500 more men are being accepted by the unit, Col. H.E. Alley, Officer Administering, reveals.

The Veterans Guard of Canada has men overseas and it has been assigned to such important duties as protection of coastal areas and the guarding of prisoners of war.

Col. Alley points out that veterans must not be over 50 years of age to be accepted in the Veterans Guard of Canada. He believes that their previous service make them especially valuable.

"They had re-ordered their lives for 25 years, were bringing up their families, establishing homes, working in town and country," Col. Alley said. "Yet, when war broke out, they clamored to get back into service.

"They had no illusions about themselves; they knew that they were older, slower, less vigorous.

"They had no illusions about war; they knew that much of it was a dull business,—hard-slugging, steady, relentless effort without glory or thanks.

"There are many dull jobs in war, most of which do not require the physical agility that belongs only to youth. These call for method, doggedness, discipline. Such jobs have not the glamour of adventure nor do they hold out any hope of glory or honour to be gained.

"The Veterans Guard of Canada has taken over the 'dull jobs' of the Canadian Army. Not only in Canada, but in Britain and in various parts of the Empire the Veterans Guard of Canada is doing the jobs that call for method, doggedness and discipline."

Saving Sugar For Canadians

(By B. Leslie Emslie)

"Of linked sweetness long drawn out" wrote the poet, a thought which might suggest the sugar rationing scheme. Sweet-toothed Canadians will certainly have to stretch their sugar supply further than formerly, denying themselves perhaps the crystal cubes that used to sweeten their tea and coffee. But those who have already made this slight sacrifice, find it no real hardship.

Describing village life in England of 600 years ago, a historian stated that all salt used for preserving meat was produced by evaporation in pans on the seashore, and that a couple of bushels of salt cost as much as a sheep. While salt was dear and scarce, sugar was unknown except to the very rich. The poor had little to sweeten their lot, apart from the honey enjoyed by those who owned a hive.

Like many other things that were once regarded as luxuries, sugar became a commonplace necessity but now threatens to recede into the luxury class again. Canada has its own sugar industry and must strive for greater independence in this commodity. Sugar beets are grown on the rich loams of Kent County, Ont., on the irrigated lands of the Raymond district in southern Alberta, on the fertile soils of the Red River Valley in Manitoba and now in the old province of Quebec, where a factory at St. Hilaire will be ready to process the first commercial crop of beets this fall.

Neither in Manitoba, as the third season opens there, nor in Ontario has the weather proved cooperative this spring. Unprecedented heavy and frequent rains have interfered with planting and, later, brought both beets and weeds along so rapidly that the limited labour available has been hard pressed to cope with cultivation and "blocking". Despite the urgent need for more Canadian sugar, the beet acreage in Ontario has been reduced by more than half. Owing to lack of help, fewer fields were planted, and many that were have been ploughed up and sown to corn or other crops.

To help solve the labour problem large numbers of Canadian-born Japanese were brought to the beet fields of Ontario and distributed among nine camps in the territory. But the labour supply was still short of the urgent demand for action if the beet crop was to be saved. The citizens of Chatham and other urban centres then accepted the challenge and responded nobly by volunteering their services in the field. Tradesmen, clerks, bankers, doctors, lawyers, armed with hoes, moved to the attack on the beets and weeds. The casualties were many aching backs and blistered hands, but they saved sugar for Canada.

ALIVE AFTER 237 YEARS

Some remarkable facts concerning the length of time which the seeds of certain plants will live, have recently come to light at the Natural History museum, South Kensington.

One of the most remarkable is the case of a single seed of Nelumbium speciosum (famous as the sacred lotus of the Nile, though it no longer grows in that river), which was recently taken from a specimen of the plant in Sir Hans Sloane's herbarium in the museum. After treatment with concentrated sulphuric acid and subsequently water a shoot half an inch long appeared within 21 hours, and later grew rapidly. This plant is now being grown at Kew. Seeds of Nelumbium from Sloane's collection were germinated, in a classical series of experiments, by Robert Brown in 1843-55 and they were known to be at any rate 150 years old.

Dr. Ramsbottom's present experiment has added at least 87 years to the recorded length of time (now therefore 237 years) for which seeds of known date, of any species of plant have been proved to retain life.

The stories told of wheat being grown from corn found in Egyptian mummy cases are, it need scarcely be said, pure fiction. —Banffshire Journal.

Under the first impact of a budget such as we have just had, there is is a common tendency for men and women to keep on thinking in terms of dollars. We hurriedly review the large items of our personal budget, such as rent, food and clothing, and can see no possibility of cutting down on these major items. We forget to remember that for centuries back substantial savings have been built up through unceasing vigilance against the careless spending of small pieces of silver. The men and women who will budget every cent of their income during the next year, and who will pinch each penny, nickel, dime and quarter before spending it, — spending small change only after weighing the value to be received against the value of that change to our country at war, — will always have money left over for War Savings Stamps, War Savings Certificates and Victory Loan bonds

Municipal District Of Beaver Lake, No. 486

Council met in special session on Monday, the 20th of July, as it had been impossible to meet on the regular date owing to condition of roads. All members present.

The Government is being asked for a further grant to assist in completing the road directly south of Mundare.

Mr. J. E. Roberts, Weed Inspector for Divisions 1, 2 and 3, appeared before the meeting in regard to weed control in his territory. He suggested each farmer should be supplied with a pamphlet describing the Class "A" weeds in detail and with illustration in colour Secretary was instructed to contact the Field Crops Commissioner in that behalf.

In line with action taken recently at a meeting of representatives of several Municipal Districts held in Vegreville, a resolution was forwarded to the Provincial Government asking that establishment of enlarged municipal units be postponed until after the war, at least.

The application of Mr. F. G Hohn for exemption under the provisions of the Soldiers' Home Tax Exemption Act was approved.

A grant of $100.00 was approved for the Salvation Army for the current year, one half of which is to be used in their war work.

The problem of securing a sufficient supply of farm help was discussed at length and the Labour Board was urged to give every assistance in providing for farm labour requirements at a wage level based on parity with grain prices.

Secretary was instructed to take a promissory note from Mr. Mike Peshtar covering recent advance to him and to take security against land in all cases where it is necessary for the M.D. to advance relief, hospitalization or funeral expenses.

Recommendation was made that Mothers' Allowance be discontinued in the case of Mrs. Mary Gryzan, in view of her circumstances.

The next meeting will be held August 8, 1942, commencing at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

A SCARCITY OF BUTTER

There is a very great likelihood that butter may become less plentiful as the season advances, and it is advisable that Canadian people begin to save it now It is not so much a question of using less butter, as of wasting less. The following suggestions for economizing on the use of butter are offered by the Women's Section of the Agricultural Extension Service.

1. Use lard or other shortening instead of butter for baking. Five-sixths of a cup of pure fat is equivalent to one cup of butter for this purpose.

2. If butter must be used for baking, use only half the quantity called for and make up the balance with lard.

3. Chicken fat may be used for pan frying or in cakes and pastry It is delicious for this purpose.

4. Pan frying need not be done in butter. Lard or dripping may be used

5. Save butter papers. They may be used for buttering baking pans.

6. Melt butter to be used on vegetables. A lot less will be needed if this is done

7. Keep butter in a cool place. Firm butter goes further than soft butter.

8. Don't cut off too large a piece of butter for table use. It gets untidy looking and more of it will be used when in this form. With small pats, there is less waste.

9. Sour cream will replace butter in many recipes, so don't waste it.

While the consumption of butter is increasing in Canada, the production in 1942, as compare with 1941, is lower, and it is, therefore, necessary for every effort to be made to conserve the use of butter.

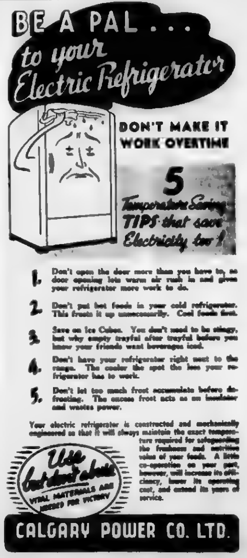
NO MORE FRILLS ON KITCHEN BROOM

Even the faithful kitchen broom plays a part in the war program. It will be plain Jane in the domestic picture when all such frills as velvet bands, expensive cloth or wire spirals, coloured string sewing, and chrome or striped handles are taken away.

It is not estimated that the wartime brooms will be cheaper, for the increase in price of broom corn disposes of that. But the broom will make an annual contribution of about 500 miles of tin plated wire to be used to bind ammunition boxes and other war materials.



BE A PAL . . . to your Electric Refrigerator

DON'T MAKE IT WORK OVERTIME

5 Temperature Saving TIPS that save Electricity too!

1. Don't open the door more than you have to, as door opening lets warm air rush in and gives your refrigerator more work to do.
2. Don't put hot foods in your cold refrigerator. This frosts it up unnecessarily. Cool foods first.
3. Save on Ice Cubes. You don't need to be stingy, but why empty trayful after trayful before you know your friends want beverages iced.
4. Don't have your refrigerator right next to the range. The cooler the spot the less your refrigerator has to work.
5. Don't let too much frost accumulate before defrosting. The excess frost acts as an insulator and wastes power.

Your electric refrigerator is constructed and mechanically engineered so that it will always maintain the exact temperature required for safeguarding the freshness and nutritive value of your foods. A little co-operation on your part, however, will increase its efficiency, lower its operating cost, and extend its years of service.

CHURCHILL INSPECTS AMERICAN PILOT BOMBERS

Pausing for a moment to light his cigar, the British Prime Minister, Mr. Winston Churchill, inspected British and some of the many American bombers which are being flown across the Atlantic to Britain in ever-increasing numbers. He was accompanied by the United States Ambassador-at-large, Mr. Harry Hopkins.

Agriculture Bravely Persists In Wartime British Isles

This is the 14th in a series of articles on conditions in Wartime Britain and parts of Europe, written for the weekly newspapers of Canada by their own representative, Hugh Templin, of the Fergus News-Record

No doubt many readers of Canadian weekly newspapers would like to know something of agriculture in wartime Britain, and how the farmer fares. Travelling with a group of editors of city papers, I had not as much opportunity to study farming conditions as I would have liked but I was able to pick up a good deal of information in trips outside London.

The farmers in Britain fill just as important a place as the soldiers or the munition workers. One hears that said sometimes of Canadian farmers but while there may be some doubt in Canada, there is none in England and Scotland.

Before the war, more than half the food consumed in Britain was imported, either from Denmark and other European countries, or from Canada and other places across the oceans. Not only that, but some of the fodder for animals was imported and a large part of the chicken and hog feed.

The people of Britain must eat. All imports from Europe have been cut off, except occasional shipments of oranges from Spain and Portugal. All imported food must be brought from Canada or farther away. That costs money and lives. Shipping space is precious. It cannot be used for animal foods or bulky articles such as packaged breakfast cereals. And every ton of extra food that can be produced in Britain is desperately needed. Cost has become a secondary consideration.

FARMERS TOLD WHAT TO RAISE

A few months before the war actually started, a bonus of some $8 00 an acre was offered to farmers for every acre of new land brought under cultivation.

A Canadian, traveling in England for the first time, gets the idea that every acre of land is in use. There are no unsightly fence-corners. For that matter, there are few fences. Evidently wood and fencing materials are scarce and so hedges are used. Most fields are smaller than in this country and the farms all look neat and tidy. But evidently, there was much waste land, not only on large estates but on small farms.

Swampy pieces have been drained; meadows that were in grass for hundreds of years have been turned over by the plow and actually millions of acres extra land are cultivated.

What the farmer grows on his land in wartime is not left to his judgment. Every county has its War Agricultural Committee, and these in turn appoint committees in all districts. These committees are not made up of politicians, but of working farmers, land owners and farm workers. The agricultural colleges have been closed, and professors and other experts serve as full-time advisers on these committees.

Every farmer is interviewed every year or oftener. He is told what he must grow. The committee may even go so far as to give him a plan of his fields, telling what to plant in each field.

That sounds drastic, and is drastic. Actually, in practice, the system is largely voluntary, because nearly all farmers are willing and anxious to co-operate as a patriotic duty. They pride themselves that they still live in a democratic country and because their own neighbors are on the committees, the plan works largely as a voluntary co-operation. But to an outsider it looks rather different. If a farmer will not co-operate, the committee has power to force him to do so. If he is entirely incompetent to produce more, he may be taken from his farm. A few rugged individuals have even gone to jail.

ESSENTIAL FOODS COME FIRST

If the British farmer does not produce more, many people will go hungry and some may starve. Therefore the committees concentrate on the production of those foods which will go farther toward feeding as many as possible and they try to cut out waste of all kinds. Wheat and potato production seems to have soared. Oats are largely grown and alfalfa seemed to me to be a favorite crop. The growing season last year was excellent, with a damp summer and a long sunny autumn. The second crop of hay and alfalfa was excellent.

I saw strange objects in many of the fields which I took to be stacks of hay or grain wound around with what looked like tar paper and netting. I learned that they were temporary silos. Emphasis is being put on ensilage as the best method of producing the most cattle feed.

School children are paid to gather acorns to feed to the pigs.

Those with less than 50 hens can dispose of the eggs as they like. Many town and village families keep a few hens, or even a pig, feeding them the scraps. Or a pig may be kept by a "club," with several neighbors providing scraps and having a share in the hog.

The number of tractors in use in England surprised me. Many of them were made in Canada. In a country where gasoline and fuel oil are decidedly scarce, I did not expect to see so many tractors, but this was another evidence of the desperate need of food. Private cars have almost disappeared from the road but tractors are kept going long hours.

Farmers observe the same blackout regulations as people in towns and cities. I am not sure that this is compulsory, but it is the wise thing to do. There are many instances in earlier months where hostile pilots have seen a gleam of light from a farm and have dropped a bomb on the chance that it might be a factory.

FARMERS ARE GIVEN PROTECTION

In many ways the British farmer is probably better off than ever before. His hired man is in the same position. Prices of all kinds of farm produce are set by the Government high enough to ensure a profit. The wages of farm laborers are also set.

Farmers' sons, if not entirely exempted from conscription, enjoy the same standing as munition workers. Farm help is scarce, of course. During the harvest months last fall, many experienced farmers, now with the Canadian Army in England, were sent to farms near their camps to help out. They did a good job. One farmer reports that they were far better than any hired help he could get in his own country, working for longer hours ungrudgingly.

There is some grouching and complaining, of course. We heard one poultry farmer say that he was almost out of business, in spite of the scarcity of eggs. He could not get enough feed for his rather large flock. And he didn't think the distribution of eggs was well carried out, some of them going bad. In other cases the county committees evidently guess wrong.

Vegetables were plentiful and they helped fill out many a meal in Britain in the past few months. Literally millions of persons were growing vegetables in their private gardens or "allotments". They had sacrificed many of their flowers though nearly every garden still had roses.

MINISTIK JUNIOR U.F.A.

The last monthly meeting of the Ministik Jr. U.F.A. was held at C. Leach's on July 8 with 9 members and 2 visitors present. Acting-chairman, Margaret Oliver, called the meeting to order and business was carried on in the usual manner. Basketball games are to be played every Wednesday evening except on the evenings of the regular Junior's meeting. The roll call was answered with each member giving the name of a famous inventor. Lily Davenport, delegate to Farm Young Peoples' Week, gave a report on the really enjoyable week spent at the University. A long bulletin was read by Bill Roddick, Lorna Hennessy, Jean Oliver and Joe Davenport.

A nice lunch served by Mrs. Leach brought the evening to a close.

The next meeting will be held at Ronald Swabey's home on August 5.

GASOLINE NOT WASTED AT R.C.A.F. STATIONS

Calgary, Alberta, July 27—Rumors recurring throughout the country that aviation gasoline is being wasted at R.C.A.F. stations and schools have received emphatic denials from Headquarters of No. 4 Training Command, Calgary.

Officers at Air Force Headquarters, Ottawa, recently stated, "It is the belief of these Headquarters that such rumors are deliberately and maliciously originated and then are further circulated by innocent and well meaning persons. That there is no vestige of truth in the matter has been proven to the satisfaction of the press on previous occasions."

One of the chief rumors is to the effect that, at air training schools, remaining gasoline not used on the completion of a flight or at the end of the day, is dumped out on the ground. This is not only false, but to the contrary, before an aircraft can be wheeled into its hangar, it must be filled with gasoline. This is done to avoid evaporation, to forestall any possibility that a plane might go aloft short of gas, and to check in case of a crash.

No member of the Air Force may drain the gas tank of a plane without an order signed by the engineering officer. If the gas tank of an airplane has been damaged and must be repaired, the gas drained from it is used only for motor transport, eliminating any danger that foreign material might be in airplane gasoline.

To salvage gas from a crashed aircraft it is drained into drums, filtered and re-used in airplanes, if the tanks haven't been damaged.

Airmen have not the slightest chance in the world of obtaining gasoline for use in private motor cars. Court martial faces them for infringement of this rule if they could possibly get away with the gas from the well guarded hangars.

War Nerves have played an important part in the battle to date and the malicious spreading of rumors is one weapon that the enemy find cheap and effective. Citizens are urged to counteract such rumors and when facts are so easily available, this does not prove difficult.

Under a new arrangement elevator agents are now empowered to purchase scrap metal. Only good scrap metal is required and all kinds of sheet iron such as auto fenders, stove pipes, etc., cannot be purchased. Cast iron and steel is what is required and elevator agents will accept this at $7.00 per ton. This service is being done by the elevators at no profit to themselves or cost to the government. They especially urge that scrap be brought in quickly and before harvest. The need for scrap is great as a number of war plants are calling urgently for it.

WEDDING

NICKERSON—INGRAM

With a background of cut flowers and ferns, a very pretty summer wedding was solemnized in the Tofield United Church, Aug. 30, when Kathleen Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ingram of Tofield, was united in marriage to Pte. John Eldon Nickerson, R.C.A., only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Nickerson of Edmonton. Rev. D. K. Allan officiated at the service.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, looking lovely in a two-piece powder blue suit, with an accordian pleated skirt. She wore a hat of deep rose, accessories of navy blue, and a shoulder corsage of gardenias and sweetheart roses.

Matron of honor, Mrs. O. N. Wright of Edmonton, sister of the bridegroom, wore a petal pink redingote ensemble of fine silk crepe, with a white hat and accessories and a corsage of pale pink roses.

Mr. Wm. Ingram, brother of the bride, was best man, and Mr. James Ingram, another brother, was usher. Mr. E. Stirrett of Kingman was also an usher.

The wedding music was played by the groom's brother-in-law, Dr. O. N. Wright.

A reception to relatives and friends was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's sister, where Mrs. Ingram, mother of the bride, received in a dark blue frock of summer silk, with navy accessories.

The bridal table, laid in cream lace, was centred with a tiered wedding cake, and set in silver. Vases of sweet peas surrounded the cake.

Home Nursing Classes At Lindbrook Completed

(contributed)

The Lindbrook course of Home Nursing with our local ex-nurse, Mrs. B. E. Wilson as instructress, has all too quickly drawn to a close.

The Holden Division are said to be quite proud of this class of 40 members, it being the largest group yet to take the course. This course consisted of ten lessons and if the members paid special attention, they should know a few of the most important facts necessary for the good of their patient, should they have any. A few of the important items taught were:

How to clean the sick room.
Preparation of the bed.
Caring for patients.
Immunization of contagious disease.
How to keep a chart of patient.
How to read a thermometer.
How to take respiration and pulse.
Artificial respiration and sanitation.
Bandaging and first aid.

During the weeks of our training we had the opportunity to see a picture on sanitation, and the danger of the dreaded house fly. Mr. Mallet, I believe was in charge of this picture and Miss Gilchrist, Holden, also spoke on this topic. Later on Dr. Cutsangavich spoke thoroughly on same.

We had the pleasure of listening to Mr. Boyle on communicable diseases and their care. Mr. Boyle had taken his training in Scotland and was a very interesting speaker.

Mrs. Humber and Miss Gilchrist, our Holden nurses, also demonstrated bandaging while Mrs. Humber gave a talk on First Aid.

On the whole I believe all the members enjoyed these meetings and although very few were able to attend all ten meetings, there was a large attendance at each and every [illegible]

Next Tuesday Mrs. Humber and Miss Gilchrist will give an oral exam and those passing same will receive a certificate to the fact.

It is to be hoped we all succeed in winning the above mentioned award.

Thanks are due Mrs. B. E. Wilson for the work and time she has given us and in making this training possible.

SGT. JAMES ALEXANDER FORAN BELIEVED KILLED IN ACTION

An official telegram was received Monday by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Foran, conveying the sad information that their youngest son, Sgt. James A. Foran, Wireless Air Gunner of the R.C.A.F., reported missing on June 27th, was according to the International Red Cross, believed killed in action.

Jimmie, as he was known to the boys, was born in Holden 23 years ago, and in later years took an active part in sport. He enlisted in the Air Force two years ago and on August 28th, 1941, went overseas with his unit. He was well thought of by his fellow citizens, and it is with deep regret that the news of his death is received. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved family. — Holden Herald.

Sgt. James A. Foran is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Ted Foran of Tofield, and in sport circles was quite well known here.

CHERRIES GO WRONG SO SAILOR SMOKES

Somebody in New Westminster sent three pounds of B.C. cherries to I. Krygsveld, formerly of Port Mann, now in naval service on the eastern seaboard. Packed fully ripe in an ordinary express parcel, they weren't quite themselves when they reached Montreal. Canadian National Express men tried to replace them but there were no cherries available. They sent cigarettes instead. "As one railroader to another, thanks a lot," the sailor wrote. Before enlisting he was a C.N.R. employee at Port Mann.

Veterans Guard Calling For Recruits

Once again Canada is calling more old comrades back to the colors it is revealed with the recent announcement from Colonel H. E. Alley, Officer Commanding the Veterans Guard of Canada, that 2500 men, not over the age of fifty years are required immediately.

Major J. H. Gasner, M.C., District Recruiting Officer of Military District No. 13, has announced that commencing on the morning of August 10th, 1942, four mobile recruiting units of the Veterans Guard of Canada will set out in four different directions and will cover practically every town and village in the province of Alberta, seeking recruits for the Veterans Guard of Canada.

The officers in charge of these itineraries in the various districts will be as follows: Major F. J. Jenkins, adjutant of the 14th (Res) Army Tank Battalion (Calgary Regiment), will cover the territory south of Calgary to include MacLeod, Pincher Creek, Milk River, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Empress, Brooks, Bassano and all the districts surrounding, as far north as Red Deer and district, and west to Rocky Mountain House.

Lt. H. Sawley of No. 23 Coy., Veterans Guard of Canada will cover the Drumheller, Hanna, Provost, Hardisty, Camrose and Stettler districts.

Lt. G. E. Blass of the 2nd Bn. Edmonton Regiment will cover the Tofield, Wainwright, Vegreville, Bonnyville, St. Paul, Ramsey and Wetaskiwin districts.

Major W. Sturm, No. 27 Coy., Veterans Guard of Canada will cover the Westlock and Athabasca districts and the whole of the Peace River Block of Alberta, and the British Columbia section.

Complete itineraries of the hours and dates that the recruiting officers will be in each town will be published in all weekly newspapers and radio stations will carry announcements of the town to be visited each day. All those interested are requested to contact their local civilian recruiting officials as to the place to contact the recruiting officers in their various towns and districts.

Special representation is being made to the Department of National Defence at Ottawa to have the age limit of veterans eligible to join the Veterans Guard raised from fifty to fifty-five years. Veterans who are interested in enlisting are also advised that special arrangements for "harvest leave" have been completed and that arrangements for same can be made if so desired.

The Veterans Guard of Canada companies are called upon for service in this war in many parts of the Empire. Three new units of the Veterans Guard have recently arrived overseas in various parts of the Empire, in addition to those already despatched, with men chosen proportionately from all the units of the Guard in Canada. New duties have arisen in Canada necessitating the formation of six new companies and enlistment in the Veterans Guard of Canada is for service anywhere in the world and not for the purpose of "home defence" only, as is generally believed. Veterans of every trade and occupation are required with duties and training planned in the light of physical abilities of the man of fifty.

JUMP FROM PRIVATE TO SERGEANT DUE TO GEORGIA BOY'S SHARP EYES

Ephrata, Wash., July 24 — The sharp eyes of a Georgia boy who can tell while a cartridge [illegible] flipping out of a machine gun whether it has been fired brought him the answer to a soldier's dream—a hop [illegible] buck private to a sergeant's stripes this week.

The unusual circumstance was related by Capt. H. E. Coyer, Public Relations Officer at the Second Air Force Base here, in announcing the advancement of William E. Edwards, Rock Springs, Ga., soldier.

Private Edwards—as he was then—was watching as the Commander fired a machine gun. As one of the cartridge cases flipped from the gun, the soldier's eye caught the fact that the primer was not dented in the usual manner of the fired [illegible].

Springing forward he prevented the Colonel from firing another burst. Inspection disclosed [illegible] defective cartridge had left its bullet lodged in the machine gun barrel. Another shot would have resulted at least a blown up gun, and possibly a serious injury to the gunner.

Colonel Matheny called him in the following day and announced:

"Private Edwards, you are now Sergeant Edwards."

OTTAWA
BEHIND THE HEADLINES
BY Dean Wilson

It must be revealed now that the man-in-the street throughout Canada cannot possibly understand or appreciate thoroughly the exact doings along Parliament Hill in regard to the extremely important controversy over what can or cannot be disclosed on account of war secrecy, if there is only an off-hand interpretation of the headlines. Such a casual interpretation or assumed indifference and nonchalance is inclined to create the impression that something may be wrong, concealed, unknown, mysterious, insidious, underhand or surreptitious. In reality, these essential censorship rules are only being enforced to keep information not from Canadians but rather from the enemy and these laws, customs, traditions, restrictions, and taboos of wartime secrecy are only being applied so that the man-in-the-street may be less likely to swing from the pinnacle of hope to the depth of despair in accordance with good or bad news of temporary happenings on the various war fronts.

The man-in-the-street in Canada must bear in mind that war secrecy is the first intrinsic and indispensable constituent principle of a nation's discipline in war. Therefore it is important in the highest degree that the tonality and essence of the controversy on Parliament Hill over war secrecy should be interpreted calmly without any perturbation and without any prejudice which might produce judgments, opinions or impressions on current war events or actions without just grounds or without sufficient knowledge of the actual facts.

Two sensational events have brought forth bitter and bivious controversies over war secrecy and these disputations differences have produced the most dramatic features of the present long session.

One highly dramatic event occurred when Premier Mackenzie King declined to table in the House of Commons a letter which he had received from Lieut.-Col. George Drew wherein the report of the Hong Kong inquiry was criticized. Hon. R. B. Hanson, leader of the Conservative Party Opposition, denied that all the hearings should have been secret and he did not believe that many documents relating to the trial should be secret, even alleging that a secret order-in-council had been passed. Mr. M. J. Coldwell, leader of the C.C.F. Party, said in part that there were criticisms in the Drew letter that Parliament ought to know "in order that this Parliament may be guided in future in regard to the dispatch, not of 2,000 men, but of many more thousands of men overseas." Mr. J. H. Blackmore, leader of the Social Credit Party, said amongst other things that there were revelations in the Drew letter "that should certainly be aired somewhere."

However, Premier King denied that a secret order-in-council had been passed and he stated that the Drew letter could not be tabled, basing this decision on the legal opinion of George A. Campbell, K.C., counsel for the Hong Kong inquiry. "I have not interfered with the censorship at any time and do not intend to do so at this time," said Premier King, adding later that the House of Commons would "not wish to be privy to the violation of any undertaking which existed Britain and Canada."

The other spectacular and sensationally dramatic episode happened when the Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, and Hon. Angus Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, rebuked a member for disclosing three sinkings in the St. Lawrence.

"I do suggest," said Hon. J. L. Ralston in part, "that the course which was suggested to him on Friday, namely that he communicate with the Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, and ascertain from him whether it was thought to be in the public interest to refer publicity to this matter, would have been a much wiser course." Then at another point he continued: "We must not, I submit, mix up the idea of members of the public or people in the locality having knowledge of such an incident and placing of it on record in Hansard or publishing it in a newspaper whence it is immediately transmitted by friends of the German Government to Germany and it is announced over the German radio. No one suggests that you could possibly keep these matters secret from those in the locality but it is a different matter to make them public so that they can be transmitted to Germany."

"I am very glad to say," stated Hon. Angus Macdonald, "that the newspapers of this country have observed with great care the suggestions made. He had recalled that he had announced rules at any earlier date about sinkings in the St. Lawrence and which subsequently were followed by more explicit orders issued by the censors, indicating that Britain had discontinued announcing the sinkings of ships for good reason, though at the start of this war such announcements had been made.

"In the first place," continued Hon. Angus Macdonald, "any immediate announcement of sinkings will prevent the next-of-kin of casualties from being informed before the announcement is made. The result is that every person who has a friend or relative on those ships sailing the seas is in anxiety until he gets a letter from that friend. Consequently, it is only common decency and Christianity to wait for some time, inform the next-of-kin of casualties, and when the announcement of the sinking is made, to say that this has been done, then everyone who has not been notified knows that his relative or friend is not involved. And then there is another reason, the main reason, of course, which is that announcements of this sort are likely to give useful information to the enemy. That is the chief reason why some secrecy has to be maintained. And the way in which announcements of this sort may be of use to the enemy are many and varied. If he does not get the information from us, he has to work it out for himself. He has to separate rumor from fact. He has to judge the reliability of his information and in a hundred ways he may remain uncertain. But when we in this country, and particularly in this House, give him the information on a platter, then the thing is settled and he does not need any more to inquire as to the accuracy of the matter."

"But if this sort of thing is to go on," continued the Minister, bringing up the serious question about the rights and privileges of the House of Commons," if any honourable member can stand up and by innuendo, by question, or by statement, jeopardize the whole security system of this country, then I am afraid it will be necessary for someone to say that statements of that kind will either not be allowed to be made, or if made, will not become part of the record of this House."

In other words, war secrecy on the part of all is essential in the interests of the security of this nation, but this does not mean that the Government will not disclose all information possible. The contrary is true. The Government is willing to hold secret sessions when such sittings are necessary to discuss any or all phases of the war, though a contrary impression has sometimes been created when the Government emphasized that the need must be proven first privately to the proper Minister, particularly since excessive numbers of secret sessions may produce wrong impressions. Again and again, this has been reiterated on Parliament Hill whenever the battle over what can or cannot be disclosed on account of war secrecy provoked great excitement or furious passion amongst the legislators, with this controversy being one of the highlights of the long session.

A WAR PSYCHOLOGY—

TO THE CAT in the butcher shop it is impossible to understand how the alley cat lives. This thought, no doubt previously expressed in a hundred different ways, is responsible for many of the things that we see around us, notable among which is the rather happy-go-lucky way in which rationing regulations are received. It is human nature to look after one's own, in fact a person that persistently fails to do this inevitably ends up in the poor house or its Canadian equivalent, but just the same, self is not the only and certainly not the most important element in the world, now or at any other time.

Within the past few days a tea and coffee rationing plan was made effective. The order was made public Sunday night and generally speaking caught most people off their guard with no more than a normal supply of coffee on hand. Merchants tell us that on Monday they could have sold out of tea and coffee if they so desired, and were willing to let it go out without the ration card coupons. The same quite likely occurred all over the country, but after a while, when people have settled down and analysed the situation, a more rational view will prevail. As a nation, partly because of its natural resources and partly because of its ability to produce, the United States of America have been receiving the cream of the world's milk. This is only another way of saying that the United States enjoyed the highest standard of living in the world. Canada followed close behind and Great Britain, the British Commonwealth of Nations and France were not so far behind either. The guns instead of butter sentence is too well known to require emphasis, but the truth of the matter is that while we were enjoying a high standard of living (some of us) other nations were envying us and preparing for the day when they could do likewise. Lacking the ability to obtain a high standard of living by peaceful methods, they choose treacherous and belligerent [illegible]

There is hardly a Canadian who has not been raised amid a tolerant and benign atmosphere toward other nations. "It can't happen here," was as much a Canadian as an American belief. In fact both here and in America, a feeling of superiority towards other nations existed amid blissful ignorance that some other nations felt exactly the same way towards us, but with this exception. Germany and Japan had made up their minds to try and take from us what we possessed, and try as Britain might, there was no sidestepping the issue. How successful the axis nations have been everybody knows. Without reciting geographical areas lost by us to them the losses are brought home to us by some of the restrictions imposed upon our living. But when these restrictions are imposed upon us we should remember that many people within the Axis nations have been doing without for many years, doing without so that the day may come when they can take what we have. And in order to stand straight in line on our side it is necessary to live up to and obey the restrictions to the letter. In other words we must understand that this is a war of conquest and if we do not enter into the spirit of the thing we will meet the fate of all nations who have met a national crisis with indifference.

Undoubtedly human nature will play its part in war as in peace. There will be the super generous who will give their all of material goods and physical well being and there will be the chisellers who will see little but an opportunity to profit at someone else's expense. But between these there will be the great mass of people who by their thinking and by their doing will swing the balance one way or another. With strong nations allied against us war conscious, we must become war conscious too. If not, a few pounds of coffee or a few gallons of gasolene will not mean much to our future well being.

NEW BREAD NOT POPULAR

Evidence gathered from Western Canada indicates that the expected popular rush to purchase the new Canada-approved bread, containing a larger percentage of vitamins, has failed to develop. It is hard to understand this except on the grounds that food habits are not easy to change. Certainly the new bread is a superior food product to the old.

The Canada-approved bread is used entirely by the army. In Great Britain too it is in general use. Canadians would be well advised to switch to the new product as it is a much superior food.

The eating of whole wheat bread cannot be recommended. It may help some people, but the great majority would be better off to avoid the intake of too much bran.

When Herbert C. Hoover was administering American relief to the Belgians in the last war he sought to obtain as much flour as possible from the wheat supplies. He found, however, that 81 per cent extraction was about the limit. He tried, in desperation, to squeeze more than 81 per cent of the wheat into flour, but the Belgian mortality increased immediately by 1,000 deaths, and the extraction had to be lowered.

Of course, this has nothing to do with Canada-approved bread, which has been carefully prepared on a scientific basis as eminently helpful and suitable for human consumption.

BETTER JAMS MADE ON SUGAR RATION

In the minds of housewives doing preserving and making jam these days is the ever present question, will the reduced sugar allowance made for preserving and canning keep the fruit as well as the quantities of sugar formerly used? The answer is yes. According to all tests made by the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, it is found that jams and preserved fruit keep just as well as they did with the old cup for cup measurements. They are also better for health and have a better colour and truer fruit flavor.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, Aug. 3—Something of a crisis is approaching in regard to the highway situation in Alberta, with road machinery on war-time jobs and drastic restrictions on the use of surfacing material. As result, the Government has been considering the advisability of curtailing heavy off-truck traffic, which Hon. W. A. Fallow claims cause "millions of dollars" damage to surfaces. "If nothing is done Alberta will have no highways in about a year," said the Minister.

Heavy rains in Alberta have cut down the honey volume, and new hives are only 75 per cent filled, whereas it was expected they would be holding capacity loads, according to department of agriculture officials. Total production will not be lowered to the extent of individual units, because there are approximately 25 per cent more colonies operating this year than last.

In a move to meet the current shortage of nurses in Alberta, a plan has been drawn up by Provincial Health officials and a representative of the Municipal Hospital association for submission to the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses. If this latter body approves, the plan will be put into operation. The new program calls for the training of women as ward aids in larger hospitals, and their transfer to smaller hospitals where shortages are acute. Ward aids are non-technical workers, of great assistance to trained nurses.

Officials of 12 credit unions in the Edmonton area determined to further plans for formation of a Provincial League at a meeting this week at which W. B. Tenney, western representative of the Credit Union National Association, was the principal speaker. Those present resolved to request other credit unionists of the Province to meet at a central point, preferably Red Deer, some time in September to carry out organization plans.

The Alberta government will call an early conference of all groups and bodies concerned with the present labor famine, and proposals will be prepared for transmission to the federal government to deal with the situation. This was stated by Premier Aberhart this week, at a meeting with delegates from farming, industry and business in the Legislative Building. The Edmonton Chamber of Commerce had earlier sought such a meeting. It was declared that Alberta's industrial position would be jeopardized if further drains on labor are made. The question of diverting new industry to Alberta labor and resources, rather than diverting these assets to other fields was also given serious consideration.

Alberta's Legislative Committee studying workings of the Workmen's Compensation Act will resume hearings in the Capital August 4, fortified with first-hand knowledge of how miners and lumber workers faced the hazards of their calling. Committee members have been on a tour of inspection through a number of industrial plants, and Chairman Dr. J. L. Robinson said "The co-operation we received from the operators at the mines was very good. They went out of their way to show us every phase of operation." Members declared "we were determined to find out for ourselves just what causes accidents that take a toll of lives and injuries. As result, we believe we have a good mental picture as a background for the hearings commencing August 4." A heavy agenda faces the Committee.

Resignation of E. C. Shaughnessy, superintendent of the Alberta income tax branch, has been accepted with regret by the government. Mr. Shaughnessy said that he will re-enter private practice. He has continued to administer the branch since the transfer of income tax privileges to Ottawa, and although it has been stated that the Dominion will probably absorb all members, the chief officer has planned to return to private business, which he left in 1935.

Alberta will appeal against a ruling of the appeal court declaring the Legal Proceedings Suspension Act, 1942, ultra vires. The appeal will go to the Supreme Court of Canada, it was announced this week. The act in question was intended to delay the taking of action in foreclosures of mortgages, pending an appeal to the Privy Council on the ousted Debt Adjustment Act. In effect, the Suspensions Act was to provide temporary protection against foreclosures.

The federal government renewed a provincial treasury bill for $4,845,000 it was reported this week following receipt of information from Ottawa. An order-in-council extending the loan for a year has been tabled in Commons. The loan was originally obtained for unemployment relief in the province.

CANADA NEEDS STILL MORE [illegible]

It is an offence not to return used tin tubes to any store having receptacles to receive them, for Canada urgently needs the half million pounds of tin available from this source to cary on the war. Her sources of tin are were lost with the fall of British Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, as well as the tin smelters.

Tin from 250 tooth paste tubes is required in the building of one Bolingbroke bomber. Tin from one tube of sunburn soother will plate 20 water canteens. Tin from one tooth paste tube will supply vital parts for 20 shell cases.

Tin is needed urgently for the war effort. Turn over used collapsible tubes to the stores prepared to receive them, drug stores, general and departmental stores, all collect them for Wartime Salvage Limited. Canada's call for tin is an S.O.S.

FLIES ARE SERIOUS MENACE TO HEALTH

Flies, especially the common house fly, are a menace to health, particularly during the summer and autumn. The part the house fly plays in spreading dangerous diseases such as infantile diarrhoea, typhoid, and tuberculosis is fairly well known. Flies have long been suspected as possible carriers of infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis), say officials of the Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

In the summer of 1941, scientists working in Connecticut and Alabama demonstrated the presence of the virus of poliomyelitis in mixed collections of blow flies, house flies, and certain other species of flies taken in two localities where cases of infantile paralysis had occurred. This fact adds emphasis to the importance of fly control. Flies breed in garbage, manure, and other animal matter, and thus can be most effectively controlled by properly treating and disposing of such materials.

Measures should be taken to exclude flies from dwellings, and to protect foodstuffs from those that may gain entrance. The flies should be destroyed promptly.

CREAM QUALITY LOWER

Alberta has built up, over a long period of years, a very enviable record for high quality butter. The single factor most responsible for this record has been the high quality of cream received from Alberta cream producers.

The cream receipts recently indicate that the quality was six per cent less special than the same period in 1941. Creamery inspectors have also reported that cream quality has deteriorated; this is reflecting in the quality of Alberta butter, and the figures for June 1942 indicate that only 82 per cent scored first grade, as compared with 88 per cent for the whole of 1941. Alberta can ill afford to neglect the quality of cream and butter because of the exacting standards used by the consumers on the Pacific coast market, which is our natural market.

There may be some patrons who feel that the present price including the Dominion Government Subsidy is satisfactory even if they get a No 1 or No 2, and it is not worth the extra effort to market special grade cream. This is a very short-sighted policy because, if, as a result of poor quality the butter sells at a lower price it will mean a lowering of cream prices.

To receive Special Grade, the cream producer must keep in mind the three fundamentals of quality cream production.

CLEANLINESS— From milking to market. Avoid contamination with dirt and undesirable bacteria.

COOLING— Rapid cooling and holding at proper temperature will retard bacterial growth.

FREQUENT MARKETING —Get good cream to market quickly. Long holding ruins flavour.

In addition to the above, there are numerous shipments lowered in grade due to strong weedy (particularly stinkweed) and metallic flavours. The weedy flavours can be lessened, if not completely overcome, by providing ample pasture of good quality and removing cows from fields infested with weeds at least three hours before milking.

Metallic flavours are caused by action of the acid in the milk or cream on untinned iron. It has been difficult to secure new cream cans this past season, but rusted cans should be retinned. Inquire from your creamery where this can be done.

Every pound of butterfat is urgently required to supply domestic markets and our obligation to Britain. Poor cream means poor butter which is not put to the best use and causes considerable waste. For a complete war effort waste is out; so produce only high quality cream.

ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE

1780 boys from 50 squadrons of the Air Cadet League from towns and cities in No. 4 Training Command, have spent a week this summer on service flying training schools. The summer camps were concluded on Saturday, and each Cadet enjoyed the thrill and experience of living for a week the life of an airman. The boys were billeted in station huts, where they slept on comfortable spring beds with mattresses. The boys stated that the quality of the food, so important in the estimation of teen-age boys, was excellent on all stations.

Officers in charge of the camp state that the week's training has proven a link between courses which the Air Cadets have taken one or two nights each week during the previous school year and the actual air-force training routine. During the summer camps the boys have acquired a thorough working knowledge of a service flying station, and they have seen the practical application of elementary training which they were given during the previous year. By familiarization with work on the station, the boys have been able to see for themselves the dovetailing of their work with service conditions. Cadets have been shown in a practical way the necessity of discipline and routine as outlined and instilled in them during the year's training.

The Air Cadet training, too, contributes a most important factor—character building. The high standards required by the organization demand that a boy must give his best, and as a consequence better Canadians are being moulded through Cadet work.

Service Flying Training Schools have been selected for Air Cadet camps because of the wider scope of training regularly given on these stations, and because of the varied and extensive equipment there. As an example while on service flying stations, the Cadets are given the opportunity of examining several types of aircraft in actual operation.

In addition to regular periods of drill and physical training each boy was given an opportunity to test his natural flying ability in a Link Trainer. It is a replica of an airplane cockpit and is equipped with the various instruments. The controls operate exactly as in actual flying. Perhaps the time in the Link was the highlight for each Cadet during his week on station.

Instruction in armaments have been an important item on the timetable. The lads have had the opportunity of gaining knowledge first-hand by actual machine gun practice, and they have taken down and assembled intricate firearms.

The Cadets have returned to their home cities and towns enriched by knowledge which they have acquired during their week at camp. They state they are keen to continue their air studies during the coming year, and with the practical experience which they have gained will strive the harder to become keener airmen when they actually take to wings.

While the organization is under the direction of the Royal Canadian Air Force, each squadron is self-sustaining either directly or by local sponsorship.

LINDBROOK

Mrs. Wm. Baragar of Timor, Alta, is visiting her father, Mr. LaRocque. She has her three children with her, Byllie, Carmen and Shelby. Mrs. Baragar intends staying about a week or ten days here.

Mr. LaRocque paid a visit to the city this week. He was accompanied by his daughters.

Thanks to the efforts of Mr. Rudy Heichen, who procured a carload of cinders, the road from the highway to the station is quite a decent road now. It sure used to be ——. The unloading and scattering of the cinders was performed by volunteer work by the neighbors.

Mr. Ralph Richardson was feted last Wednesday night, the occasion being his birthday anniversary.

The VVR parade turned out in strength as usual on Tuesday evening, but from now on until the crop and hay is in we cannot expect a full muster at every parade. Still, get there whenever you can, fellows.

We have to hand, a report to the effect that up till July 30th, there was 41,270 pounds of scrap metal at the elevator. That is two thirds of a carload, so hurry up and get the next 20,000 down and then Lindbrook can say that a carload was shipped from here.

Mrs. J. Leahy left this last week for her home in New Westminster, B.C. Mrs. Leahy has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. Glenn of this district, also renewing old acquaintanceship with the old timers here.

On Sunday a few of Mrs. Leahy's old friends met together for a picnic at Norman Ellis' beach, Hastings Lake. We guess this brought back memories of picnics held years ago on the same spot by the same crowd.

Don't forget, your Farmers' Union. Notice how prices are dropping already. Still, what's the use, if you won't, you will have to take it and like it.

Mr. Jas. Bracegirdle left on Sunday's train for a month's vacation at the coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lust left early Friday morning for Edmonton. They met and said farewell to Cpl. Anderson, R.C.A.F. who was returning to his station after having been on leave.

V.V.R. NOTES

Target practice on Sunday, July 26th, was well attended, 37 targets being shot.

94 out of a possible 100 were scored by Shorty Williams, Jas. Bracegirdle, Ralph Kortzman.

93 by Ed Gould and Jimmy Hooper.

90 by Fred Evans and F. Kortzman, and 75 to 85 can be scored by a number of others. Looks like we have some good rifle shots among us.

Competition is very keen, and some of the excuses for a bum shot are good, for instance: A skeeter was sitting on the front sight. If that skeeter hadn't of punctured me on the nose just as I pulled the trigger that shot would have been a bull. That rifle is no good, I can't see how you other guys do so well with it. Well, you are 20 years older than I am so your eyesight should be better. If I had the rifle I used to own in 1920 I would show you guys how to shoot. When I lived in Nova Scotia I used to put one bullet through the centre of the bullseye, and then put the other 9 shots through the same hole. I always shot 100 per cent but I think the altitude is too high for me here, that's why I can only shoot 37 per cent. I don't understand that, I was shooting at No. 2 target, how the hell is it there's no shots on mine, and 20 shots on No. 3. Gee, my eyes must be bad.

Municipal Notes

The farm labor problem is still the most important thing in the immediate future. As suggested a week or so ago some rural meetings have been held. There was, we understand, one at Lakeshore and one at Kingman. These meetings primarily, were to "size up the situation." Farm help is scarce and is getting more so as time goes on.

†—†—†

Also there is not only the problem of obtaining harvest labor, there is the problem of paying for it. Present regulations are that a farmer may only sell five bushels per acre of his 1940 wheat acreage. How this effects the individual farmer as regards this year's crop depends upon the relation between this year's acreage and his 1940 wheat acreage. The 1940 wheat acreage is listed on the 1940 permits.

†—†—†

This raises the question of storage. This problem will no doubt vary as between farmers, but in the aggregate will be serious enough. Cars to move this crop will not be easy to get and present indications are that much grain will have to be stored temporarily on the farm.

†—†—†

Farmer ratepayers are again reminded that statement of claim under the Wheat Acreage Reduction Act must be filed before August 31. Information is to hand that inspection will start in this district very soon. DON'T WAIT UNTIL THE LAST DAY.

†—†—†

The end of August sees the cessation of the 10 per cent tax discount. Those who are able to take advantage of this discount will find the savings worth while.

†—†—†

FLASH—The Wheat Acreage Reduction Inspector is here and he is advised not to duplicate mileage, thus saving gasoline and rubber. He will work township by township and will cover the west side of the municipality first, township 49-21; 50-21; 51-21; in M.D. 487. He will work from west to east by townships. Anyone having a claim should file a sworn statement at once.

Baseball --- Looking Backward

[BY FRANK JOHNSRUD]

As we gaze back upon the peaceful summers before the present war, we might observe many pleasant scenes of sporting events and picnics involving persons who are no longer in our midst. Visualizing these pictures in general, we will find people travelling in infinite rows on some warm afternoon to a picnic or sports day featured in their locality or in some neighboring district or town. (Such scenes still occur but they are very rare, as everyone now have their thoughts turned to the war and the gasoline and tires for their cars have since become a problem.) However, in this case, the people of Tofield were no exception.

The farmers would hurry with their labor and in the early afternoon could (or perhaps couldn't) be seen for a cloud of dust, heading for a picnic. The citizens of the town too, if the time permitted, would gather together in their autos and flock to the same place.

Among the latter would be seen a solitary and elderly man, seated majestically in a shiny, well kept old Model T, and making way for no one, would arrive on the spot no later than the rest. Once there, he would be seen sitting on a bench or in the old Ford (all depending on the sun's heat) and watch with sharp interest, the progressing baseball games. This man, though a bit more aged and no longer seen at the few recent sports days and picnics, is still known as 'Old Mike McCusker.'

Mike McCusker came to Alberta nearly 35 years ago in the fall of 1907 from Dubuke, Iowa, and secured a homestead northeast of Vegreville. Later he came to Tofield and for some time was agent for the Massey Harris Co. At one time he owned the town livery barn in a partnership with Joshua Noland. When Mike came to Tofield the country around was becoming quite well settled. Many of the people he knew then are still in the district.

Mike's greatest hobby has been and no doubt still is baseball. He relates that when he started to play the game, no one wore gloves and mitts and that players are now useless without them. For a time there was a restriction against overhand pitching and the hurlers had to throw underhand as in softball. The ball itself was crude and had little life, then a home run was considered an heroic miracle. Money was scarce then too, so the sport was played just for the enjoyment. Usually the prize was a ball and a bat.

There was no little enthusiasm, Mike recalls, for crowds came within a radius of 25 miles in the States, just to watch their national pastime. They would howl like wolves and were ready to eat the umpires at any decisions they would make favoring the opposition. These traits are not lacking in modern fans either, when a game gets really exciting.

Mr. McCusker was at one time an outstanding pitcher. He used to catch some too, but before the mitts were used, he probably shuddered at the idea of having a hand that would look like a pot roast. Apparently, a catcher must have been looked upon as a tough customer with iron hands.

However, when McCusker came to Canada, the game had become modernized. The equipment was much the same as that used by the teams of today. Basemen wore gloves and the players had uniforms whenever they could afford them. Before he came to Tofield, Mike played with Vegreville. The team made trips to various centres such as Lamont, Warwick, Tofield, Vermilion and even Edmonton.

Mike recalls pitching twice against Tofield and beating them. On one journey that Vegreville made to Tofield, he remembers an unforgettable incident. They had hired horses and a democrat from the livery barn with which to make their trip. They stayed in Tofield for the night and went back the next day. On the homeward journey, one of the horses stumbled and with one of its hind hoofs, sliced the whole skin off one of the front legs. One of the men tore off his shirt and bandaged the wound, while some of the others walked three miles to a house to get a needle and thread to sew it up. The livery man was in a rage when they returned, but such a queer accident could scarcely have been avoided.

A few of the men that performed for Tofield at about that time were, Lloyd Wood, Harve Adams, (the butcher who used to catch), Bill Sears, Marion Hayes, the Schultz brothers and Jack Wills.

Jack Wills, who passed away a few years ago, was a colorful figure. The girls used to call him "Whiskers" because of the fine beard he cultivated. Several years before he died, Jolly Jack used to enjoy telling about these old time affairs. He told of a trip that the Tofield boys made to Vegreville. On the way, the wheel of their democrat came off and rolled into Amisk Creek as they crossed a bridge that was located somewhere on what is now Kallal's land, we believe. They had quite a task in fishing out the wheel, besides delaying their trip. They must have felt the same as some of us do now when our auto tires blow out.

Joe MacLachlan, who resides now at Ross Creek, played with Lamont. Joe was one of the best southpaw pitchers that Mike recalls having seen in action. He was a very keen base runner and it was an honor to a pitcher or catcher who could nab him off a base.

Once when Lamont played against Vegreville, the opinion of the Lamont team was that Vegreville was spiked with Warwick (meaning that Vegreville had hired players from Warwick). However Lamont bet heavily on themselves and were set back by a 9-6 score. Mike pitched that game and won.

Many people will still remember when the McCuskers played for Tofield. Jack used to pitch and Mike caught. Jack threw a speedy ball and for a number of years later played for Camrose in a league that had solid competition. Joe MacLachlan played with Wetaskiwin who were in that same league.

Since the old Irishman has seen nearly all the teams that Tofield has presented, we asked him what team he thought was the greatest the town had ever fielded. He looked thoughtful for a moment and then said:

"The best team this town had was in 1932, ten years ago, when it went to Camrose and brought back $500 of the $2000 total prize money."

Glen Wood, Laurie Scott, Frank Bell, Bud Hannan, Scotty Lee and Cliff Stutsman were some of the men that performed on that team.

We also asked him what he considered was essential in pitching. He thought that a superman must have control plus lightning speed. Many will agree.

All this material was given to us first hand and we considered it very interesting. Mr. McCusker generally is not very conversational, but when the topic is baseball, the old gentleman finds it all too tempting to remain silent. The fact that he once was an outstanding performer can still be observed by his keen interest and knowledge of the game.

Therefore, in concluding, an athlete is very much like a cinder in the eye. He is given a lot of attention when he's in there and is completely forgotten when he's out. So it is with Mike McCusker and many others. Nothing remains but the fond and precious memories that are theirs.
